The Daily British Whig

KINGSTON, C. W.

MONDAY MORNING, SEPT. 12, 1853.

New York, September 9th, 1853.

The Cunard steamship from Liverpool arrived at her dock about half past 10 o'clock last night, bringing our English files to the 27th of August, and the latest continental advices.

The Eastern question was not finally settled. It was said that the Sultan had refused to accept the Vienna note unless the evacuation of the Danubian principalities by the soldiers of the Czar was guaranteed; and that in this dilemma the envoys of the four powers had prepared an amended set of propositions, which would prove satisfactory to the Porte government, and ensure the long wished for pacific adjustment. The French capital was quite owing to the belief that the difficulty was ended; and a pleasing sensation and excitement had been caused by a report to the effect that the Russian troops had recrossed the Pruth.

Despatches subsequently received, contradicted this assertion, and our last advices represent the forces of Nicholas as still occupying a very hostile attitude upon the Danube. The Turks seem to doubt that the Russians will make a merit of quickly withdrawing whilst the Austrian policy in Servia was so doubtful as regarded the honour and faith of that power towards their government. We submit the latest points of interest regarding this momentous crisis.

France was perfectly peaceable. The Honourable Pierre Soule had arrived in Paris.—The London 'Times' has a fierce article against his appointment, and advises his rejection by the Court of Spain. The fishery question also troubled the brain of our London leviathan contemporary.

Mr. Buchanan had been presented to Queen Victoria at Osborne House.

The commercial intelligence brought by this arrival is most important. Cotton remained quiet, but breadstuffs were more excited than at the time of our previous quotations. The last market rates, commercial and shipping intelligence, with the latest despatches regarding the relative positions of Russia and Turkey, will be found in detail elsewhere.

The Turkish Question.

The following despatches caused considerable excitement, they being interpreted that the Russians had re-crossed the Pruth, which, however, does not appear to be the case:—

Bucharest, August 10, 1853.

General Osten Sacken, the commander of the third corps of the Russian army, has crossed the Pruth with his forces. Gen. Luders, who commands the fifth corps, is still at Ismail.

Galatz, August 12, 1853.

A Russian commission has arrived at the Sulina mouth to investigate the condition of the river, and to advise as to the means of making it navigable.

A report prevailed at Constantinople on the 11th that a collision had taken place between Omar Pacha and the Russians on the Danube. Had there been any truth in this report it would have reached us in a more authentic shape ere now.

As usual, it is from Paris that we have the only information we possess respecting the progress of affairs. Correspondence from that capital states that the French government had received despatches from Vienna, which are surmised to contain the adhesion of the Porte, but only on the indispensable condition that the Danubian principalities shall be evacuated before the Sultan will send an ambassador to the Czar. To meet this quantitio the Vienna Conference had proposed a middle course for the joint acceptance of the Czar and the Sultan. This proposal had been communicated from Vienna to Constantinople and St. Petersburg and some time must necessarily elapse before replies could be received.

Halil Pacha is mentioned as the intended envoy to St. Petersburg.

From Constantinople the general tone of our correspondence indicates that England is losing from day to day her credit, influence, and popularity in the East, while France is gaining in the same proportion, from the firm attitude she has taken during the whole of these troubles.

We have some further accounts of the reported troubles in Servia, but the dates are not given clearly.

Prince Alexander Keraageorgewitsch had left his capital, taking with him the archives of the State, &c., and had retired to Kraguavatch, a town in the mountains. He had, moreover, called out all the national militia, amounting to 40,000, and had appointed Knisshanin commander-in-chief, and publicly declared that he would repel any invasion, whether Austrian or Turkish. All this had caused the greatest excitement at Belgrade. The Servians are divided into two parties—the partisans of the reigning Prince and the supporters of the ex-family of Obrenowich. The latter have taken the opportunity of putting all their agents at work in favor of Prince Milosch, and some pretty skirmishes, of no decisive character, seem to be all that gave rise to the reported insurrection.

The Vienna correspondent of the London Morning Chronicle, writing upon the 31st of August, says:—Letters from Bucharest of an old date (Aug. 5) have come to hand. They speak of something that has not been mentioned before, namely, the formation of a corps of volunteers. The following is a general outline:—

The movements of the troops here continue, and the corps stationed in the vicinity of our town for a short time were speedily ordered to march in the direction towards the Danube. Recently there was a Russian camp here, consisting of 7000 men of the 11th corps. They marched off towards Krajowa, taking with them twenty-eight pieces of artillery. It appears, from all that is known on the subject, that the main army of the Russians is to be concentrated in the plains of Dzurdzur, and if they should cross the Danube it will surely be at no great distance either above or below this place. It is more than doubtful that the Russians ever intended to attack Silistria, Schumla, or Varna, where they would have met with considerable resistance. From a safe source, it is reported that the army of occupation had received orders forthwith to occupy the whole line of the Danube, from Old Orsova to the river Sereth. This led to the belief that the troops concentrated near Dzurdzur would lose no time in crossing the Danube. It appears, however, that the 1st division of the 11th corps, and the 12th corps, are being sent forward, and that the entire Russian army in Wallachia will amount to 60,000 men. The Pesther Evangeli, a Protestant journal, a well known friend of the Russians, intended to have raised conjointly with the Prince Milosch a corps of volunteers for the Russian army. Every soldier was to receive three ducats per month, and the project could not be realized, because neither Bulgarians nor Wallachians were disposed to join. The French Consul was requested to publish the French notice of reply in the local paper. It has been ascertained that the Russians are all at once short of cash. The reason of this is said to be that the military chests were left behind in Bessarabia; but certain it is that the Wallachian treasury must be the day of Russian rendering of the Wallachians. Many of the quartermasters-general to cashes orders on the treasury, which the bearer must honor, and these drafts amount to from 100 to 150 ducats on some days. For fear the Russians might require still more money, the head cashier has been sent away with the central cash depot, in which there is a million of rubles belonging to a religious fund. On the other hand, the local government willingly puts itself to considerable expense in providing every comfort for the Russian generals and officers. The export of grain from Wallachia has been prohibited.

What Strangers think of us.

It is very natural that Canadians should be anxious to know the opinions which visitors form of the country; and the higher the standing of the visitor, and the greater the weight which his opinion is supposed to have with others, increases that desire. It is this feeling which induces us to watch with some anxiety the words of such men as Mr. Stephenson and Mr. Jackson, who are now on a tour through the Province.—It is not only because their individual opinion is valued, but because they are regarded here as the representatives of the mother country. At Montreal Mr. Jackson, speaking of Eastern Canada, said that "Some gentlemen did not think so highly of Eastern Canada as he did; for his own part he was satisfied with it, and if only British interests were taken into account, there would be a good and safe return for all the capital that might be invest d." It he thought less of Canada West than it deserved, it was perhaps he knew less of it than of Canada East. However, it was as much better than Canada East as some persons alleged. British capitalists ought indeed to thank their stars for directing their investments to such a country."

Since Mr. Jackson made use of these words he has visited the Upper Province. He has not talk in Montreal, at Montreal, just touched at Kingston, at the hour of locks on which the city was built, then steamed out to Toronto, and from the opinion of the capability of its neighborhood by the pine ridges which fe ... the lake and harbor, passed on to Hamilton, admired the scenery of Burlington Bay, and then proceeded to the Falls of Niagara, and after admiring this one of nature's greatest wonders, gone away with the idea that he had seen Canada. Instead of doing this, Mr. Jackson with his party travelled through the country—they have seen what it really is; they have seen the people, the farms, the workshops, the villages, the towns, and the cities of Upper Canada; and at Chatham speaking for his party, Mr. Jackson, in reply to a formal address presented to the Hon. Francis Hincks, M. P. P., Robert Stephenson, Esq., M. P., the Hon. John Ross, Wm. Jackson, Esq., M. P., the Hon. H. H. Killaly, Edward Betts, Esq., A. T. Galt, Esq., M. P. P., and others, said—"He had witnessed and admitted the capabilities and resources of Lower Canada since he had visited that section of the country; and therefore had some knowledge of it. But with all seeing and observing for himself, he would not have believed the immense advantages which Upper Canada possessed over Lower Canada in the extent of its resources and the fertility of its soil. The resources and advantages of the one were ten times greater than those of the other, and he believed that the great amount of ignorance which is too prevalent among even the leading minds of England arises from the very cause which once led him astray—mere report, without personal observation."

It cannot but be a matter of sincere gratulation to Canadians to find that when our country is known it is so highly appreciated, and it will surely act as a stimulant to increasing and self-relying exertions to develope its vast resources, that it may be a worthy home for a worthy part of the great British family.

Fairs.

Oswego County Fair.—The Exhibition of the Oswego Co. Agricultural Society is to be held this year on the 29th and 30th inst. We are not advised as to the locality. The address is to be delivered by Tallmadge Delafield, Esq., of Seneca Co.

Worcester Co. (Mass.) Fair.—The Worcester Co. Society has purchased a fine lot of ground, and enclosed and improved it with the view of more permanent arrangements. Show this year Sept. 22nd, at Worcester. Ex-Gov. Boutwell, is to deliver the address.

The Provincial Exhibition, Lower Canada.

The Provincial, Agricultural, and Industrial Exhibition excites great interest over the whole Province. We briefly alluded in our last to the promised lecture on the cultivation by Professor Wilson. The grounds are now rapidly assuming an orderly aspect, and from the numerous letters the local committee receive, there can be no doubt that public feeling goes strongly with the project. The Commissioner has published a large poster; and we are gratified to find that the British American Land Company gives a special prize of £25; of that £10 for the best butter, £3 for the best four cheeses, and the remainder in ... for the best butter pots, beets and oats. Major Campbell, of Ronville, also announces a prize of £25 for the best essay in the French language on the best system of Agriculture for Lower Canada; and we have some reason to believe that His Excellency the Earl of Elgin will leave a hand some premium for the best stallion to remain twelve months in the Province. Mr. William Workman makes the very handsome contribution of £40, and the Mechanic's Institute contributes three life memberships, and £25 for the best fire engine. The arrangements for the ploughing match are rapidly advancing. The chief prize will be thirty dollars. The spirited gem of "Le Cruise" will be played by Indians.—There will be a most splendid display of flowers by an eminent New York Artist.—[Montreal Gazette.

The Grand Trunk Telegraph Line.

We are glad to learn, not only that this Company is doing an extensive business where its office are opened, but that the work of making the telegraph line in addition throughout the country continues to be progressing rapidly. Westward the line will be extended as far as Montreal by the 7th instant, and the communication with Ogdensburgh is already perfect, so that messages can be transmitted to New York, Boston, and other United States cities, and we hope, where necessary, answers will be obtained rather earlier than before. In our own vicinity we ... poles are being erected along the line between this City and Buffalo, and the material is altogether superior to any before used. We need scarcely mention that by the Grand Trunk system, communication can be had with nearly all the cities, towns, and villages of note throughout the Province, and as the charges are moderate, and every exertion will be used to make the movements of the operators and messengers correspond with the lightning which is now fast subservient to their purposes, we have no doubt that the Company will realize a handsome income while it will confer a great benefit upon the Province.

Items of News.

Chime Bells.—A noble peal of bells, eight in number, and valued at £550 sterling, cast in England expressly for the Cathedral at Fredericton (New Brunswick) arrived at Halifax last week, and were immediately transmitted to Fredericton. On Tuesday and Wednesday last they were all safely elevated to their stations in the tower of the Cathedral, and are now ready to discourse eloquent music when skillfully handled by competent fingers. They are of very fine tone, in the key of E flat; the tenor bell weighing 28 cwt.

The stock of the New York Crystal Palace had a tumble of ten dollars a share on Friday last. This brings it down to ten per cent. below par. In June it was selling for $170. Eighty dollars differ to ... the fall taking place when the exhibition is in full blast, leaving it lower than ever, in a pecuniary point of view.

For Australia or California.—It is announced that the steamship Golden Age, which is to start from this port on the 1st inst. for Australia, will go by way of Panama, the Australian Steamship Company, by design, to show the people on the other side of the Atlantic what class of vessels they intend to employ.

Burnham's News.—The news from the Chandiere is more than ordinarily business. Gold is in very good request for gore-blocking gets and in saddle spikes at only "Peel Town, but Mr. De Lotbinniere does not upset a Cordonda—he set mistaken, not a Gregor line—in the industrious to the manufacture of the Chaudiere. The Canadian is doubtful that that gentleman has lost in the mind of the first water in the region spoken of, worth from £1,200 to £1,500. Certainly a contemporary exclaims, this is enough to drive all the brilliant geniuses of the country to this neighborhood. It is, however, to be borne in mind that there is a slight difference between one who has a genius for brilliants and a brilliant genius, who is a gem in himself.—Quebec Chronicle

Montreal, Sept. 7.

Yesterday morning the following arrests were made, M. Morrison, advocate; A. Howard, baker; G. Meiver, hat merchant. They were charged with being implicated in the riots of the 9th June, and were brought before Col. Ermatinger, and admitted to bail. Warrants are out for the following persons: A. Adams, dancing master; J. B. ...ley, furrier; C. F. Hill, auctioneer; R. Cook, shoemaker.

Facts and Facetiæ.

The Winsted 'Herald' states that a lady of that village called on a gentleman to pay a claim she had against him, which, on his declining to do, produced a horse-whip. The man retreated into a store, but after a while reappeared, "flanked by a couple of friends," but the lady, nothing daunted, commenced the attack vigorously, and as is inferred, gained the victory, as she returned home triumphantly, while the vanquished man called on a grand juror, who, however, refused to enter a complaint.

Rochester and Pittsburgh R. R.—O. W. Story, Esq., Chief Engineer of this Company, has commenced the surveys near the village of Cuba, and is to run several lines including the route via Angelica. Mr. Story is a gentleman of talents and well skilled in his profession, having had charge of much important work, the last of which in this vicinity was the office of Resident Engineer on the Erie Canal.

Great Purchase.—Mr. N. G. Norcrop, of Lowell, Mass., known in that region and in Maine as the "timber king" has purchased the stumpage on 500,000 acres of land on the Ottawa river, in Canada. A few years ago, he bought 140,000 near the sources of the Merrimac river, and is now about to enlarge his business.

The Case of Edymoin.—The Auburn 'Advertiser' of Monday says, that Edymoin was taken out of the jail of that city yesterday P.M., and in charge of Constable Parker, went before Judge Wells, now holding Court at Rochester, where, under the ... bond was fixed at $500. It should be stated that this bail is for the appearance of Edymoin to answer to a warrant issued by the District Attorney of Tioga county, which was served upon him immediately after he was discharged by Judge Humphreys, on the writ of habeas corpus, which was issued to test the legality of the Warden of the Prison in the case of Edymoin after he had been pardoned by the Governor.

Sir Charles Rowan.—The General is a pile and resident man. He came to Toronto in 1830, as part the secretary to Sir John Colborne, and then left the Service rank of lieutenant colonel in the army. Colonel Rowan was to Sir John what Sir James Stephen was to many colonial ministers, and did not practice man or business. It is said that he will whether he pens a letter of Sir John's Lordship's orders, or for his wisely kept in the dark ground, except where his name was required. Generally at the end of those public papers "His Excellency signing in Parliament" were very much akin to the ... of the chief secretary of Ireland, but with a good deal more of the drudgery of office. We are of opinion that to General Rowan's great sagacity Sir John owes his peerage and his pension.
