DEATH OF AN OLD KINGSTONIAN

Mr Henry G. Gillespie died last evening at the Commercial Hotel, Belleville. The Intelligencer says that the deceased was born in Quebec, but his family moved to Picton when he was very young, and he was brought up in that town. In his early manhood he went into business in Kingston, and afterwards went to New York, where he was at first engaged as traveller for an extensive grocery firm, and afterwards became a member of the firm. About 1854 a branch of the house was established in Belleville under the name of Gillespie & Co. The firm of which Mr Gillespie was a member having become insolvent, he devoted himself to business here, and amassed a considerable fortune. He then retired from business, and lived for a few years on his money, but he lost the bulk of his fortune by investments in the "Yankee Mills," near Thomsburg, and other unfortunate speculations, and, about the year 1864, he removed to Kingston, and having received the position of appraiser in the Customs' office in that city. He came back to Belleville some six or seven years ago, and lived here ever since in straitened circumstances, supporting himself chiefly by doing accountant's work. About a year ago the City Council created an office for him—that of assessor Clerk—and he has since continued to discharge the duties which the office entailed.

POLICE.

About four o'clock yesterday afternoon a master builder and a young man had quite an encounter. It seems that the former had built the other a house, and that a difficulty arose in the settling of accounts. While the young man was passing a house that is in the course of construction he spied his friend and after a few words with the dubbed him a rogue, etc. The contractor demanded an apology but it was not forthcoming, and the result was that a set to took place that lasted for some time. The builder was struck in the face a couple of times with an iron rod that his antagonist had in his hand at the time. They were finally separated by the workmen on the building. Quite a number of persons witnessed the fight.

A DRY DOCK.

This Government will Give a Loan of $30,000.

It appears that Kingston will suffer no longer for the want of a dry dock capable of accommodating any work that may happen to come this way, be it on a large or small scale. We have been informed that a company has been organized to build a dock, composed of the following gentlemen: Messrs Durand, J. Swift and John Gaskin, Kingston; Jas Murray, St. Catharines; and G. M. Kinghorn, Montreal. They petitioned Parliament for a loan of $30,000 at four per cent., and, it is said, the prayer of the petitioners has been granted. Mr Kirkpatrick and Mr McCosig, M.Ps., have been doing all in their power to consummate the matter, and they deserve credit for securing the consideration of an affair at Kingston that will be the means of giving employment to a large number of men. It is said that the company will make arrangements with Mr W. Power so that that portion of a dry dock which is erected in the shipyard will be utilized in putting the present scheme into effect.

THE ABANDONED DOCK.

Some years ago a company was formed to build a dry dock in the shipyard. The men here were Messrs. Wm. Power, I. Noble, T. A. Power, W. Power, jun., and E. Power. Work was proceeded with and about $4,000 of an expenditure was made. The foundation was dredged and raked, a coffer dam and caisson were built, two sides with parallel division of steel piling were erected and filled in with clay and straw, and then laid over with flat stone. By the time this amount of work was effected $17,000 was spent, and $4,400 was borrowed on debentures. As the undertaking would cost more than was at first anticipated, work was stopped and an application was made to the Council, asking the city to take $10,000 of stock. A bylaw to that effect was voted on by the people, and defeated. If the by law had been carried, there were twenty one individuals who would have taken $10,000 more stock, which would have made $25,000, the sum required to complete the work. During the Mackenzie Administration Mr W. Power went to Ottawa and asked the Government for a loan of $25,000 at a low rate of interest, but his petition was not acceded to, on the ground that there was no precedent, and that such a thing had never been done before. The work was then abandoned altogether, and has remained in the same condition ever since.

THE DIMENSIONS.

The dock at Mr Power's shipyard is more than half completed. It is 300 feet long, with an entrance gate of 45 feet, 62 feet wide outside, and has 16 feet of water on sill. These dimensions will accommodate the largest vessel that may come through the Welland Canal.

A PROBABLE INCENDIARY FIRE

Last night about ten o'clock a barn belonging to Mr F. Greenwood, Wolfe Island, was burned. The contents, composed of 50 loads of pressed hay and 70 loads of pressed straw, were also destroyed. The barn was insured for $800. On making inquiry it was stated that the hay and straw was owned by Mr Geo. H. Blanchard, of Kingston, and insured for $1,000 in the Alliance Company. The stuff was bought by Mr Blanchard from Mr I. Radford, and Mr A. McKinnon observed the contract for pressing it, the price being $3 per ton delivered on the boat. Mr Blanchard agreed to advance $2 per ton to Mr McCollough and to retain $1 per ton until the pressing was completed, on condition that he received a letter from the Folger Bros. to the effect that they had a warehouse receipt, signed by Mr Radford, and an insurance policy that would cover the amount of the property in question. Folger Bros. agreed to pay the farmers from whom the hay was purchased as soon as they received the money from Mr Blanchard. The required letter was despatched, but no money being forthcoming, Mr Radford (for the Folger Bros.) has been compelled to pay the farmers. Mr McCollough loses the price of the pressing. It is said that the fire is the work of an incendiary.

FORGET-ME-NOT

The public will remember that Miss Genevieve Ward will appear in the Opera House to-morrow night. An Ottawa exchange says—"A brilliant and appreciative audience greeted the talented actress Miss Ward in the Opera House last night. As a tragedienne Miss Ward is more than interesting and her impersonation of Stephanie, supported by the superior acting of her company drew forth the frequent applause of the delighted audience. Forget-me-Not is certainly a fresh and fascinating play, the plot being clear and keen yet so deftly developed as to control the attention of the audience to the last. The strongly emotional passages of the play are skilfully handled, the actress opportunity for the display of the actress tragic genius, while their effectiveness can only be realized by witnessing the play."

The performance in Kingston will be under the patronage of the officers of B Battery Royal School of Gunnery.

THE MARKET FEES

We understand that the City Solicitor has advised the City Council to pass a bylaw under the 8th section of the Market Fees Act, the effect of which will be to maintain the market fees now charged and collected by Administration Mr W. Power sent to Ottawa and asked the Government for a loan of $25,000 at a low rate of interest, but his petition was not acceded to, on the ground that there was no precedent, and that such a thing had never been done before. The work was then abandoned altogether, and has remained in the same condition ever since.

A PRISONER ESCAPES

By Jumping Off the Train While on Highway to Kingston

Samuel Lindsay, mentioned in the News as having been convicted of impersonation in the West Flamboro burglary, and sentenced for two years and six months in the Penitentiary, is now a free man. The Hamilton Times says that all went well until the train left Oakville, when the prisoner requested to be taken to the water-closet. Mr Gibson, the Deputy Sheriff who had the prisoner in charge, undid one hand-cuff and went up the carriage with him; some one happened to be in the closet when the prisoner tried the door, and he stood and took a drink of water. The person who was in the closet emerged, and at the same moment a man opened the carriage door from the outside and came in without shutting it; the Deputy Sheriff stepped aside to let the man pass so as to get up to the door, when the prisoner rushed through the door and jumped off the train, just before getting to the semaphore at Bowmanville Bridge. Mr Gibson followed, and as he was lowering himself off after the prisoner a brakeman or passenger, who happened to be crossing the car at the moment, grabbed the prisoner by the collar of his fur coat and in that position he was dragged with his feet knocking on the rails a few yards and then hand passing the iron rail at the end of the car, when he succeeded in pulling himself on board, only to be told by his preserver that the place where he was jumping off was on the bridge over the creek, where he would have fallen about feet on the rock and stones below. The train eased up and he then jumped off again, falling heavily on his side and right shoulder. He obtained assistance, and went back up the track, and then left the place of Lindsay for about a mile, when they crossed to avoid the highway. He then hastened back towards the town, when in crossing the bridge, not knowing of the accident, he met Lindsay, who was trying to get a foot path, he nearly fell through the bridge, but in falling caught the rail and saved himself. This was his second escape from death in less than one hour, one of telegraphing and instituting searching parties he rode through to Toronto at 3 in the morning on a freight train and arrived in Hamilton a much bruised but withal a fortunate man to escape as he did such a fearful fall. He has offered a reward of $50 for the arrest of the prisoner. He had only returned yesterday morning from conveying the burglar Corbett, and Wilkinson, the Post office clerk, to Kingston. Lindsay, it was predicted by his "pals," would never go inside of the Penitentiary doors if he could help it.
