The Daily News.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, MARCH 29.

INFORMATION SUPPLIED.

The local organ of Gritism lately stuffed itself and the teachings of its leaders, in the house and out of the house, upon the tariff question, and finding that it has placed itself in a most ridiculous position it has ever since been trying to remedy the blunder by barking back upon its protectionist utterances and posing as a consistent and thorough going free trader. It is now engaged in noisily advocating free trade doctrines, but how long it will continue to injure the cause by its advocacy, it is impossible from recent experience to predict. In its struggle to make a contemptible inconsistency it clutches frantically at a straw held out by the Globe, and derives a crumb of comfort from the belief that it can distort some statements of ours into a condemnation of the Irish policy of the present administration. Although it proceeds to twist what we have said into something we have not said with the calm serenity of an old practitioner, yet the attempt is such a ludicrous failure that it will deceive no one.

The Whig says that we "think people should buy the cheapest goods without reference to the nationality of the producer." We have never said so. We have simply affirmed that people, i.e., individuals, actually do purchase where they can obtain goods most cheaply without reference to the nationality of the producer. That we were referring not to nations, but to individuals, is plain from the fact that nations, as they have national objects in view, do not follow this rule. That we were least of all intending to lay down a principle upon which nations should act, could only have occurred to one who is incapable of conducting an honest argument.

Our changeable contemporary has wisely looked up the speeches of the Conservative leaders—if it would read them diligently it would grow in information and common sense—but it cannot be congratulated this time upon having discovered what is in them. We have stated that it was in a large measure because the United States shut us out from their market last, while we admitted them on easy terms to ours, that the tariff was introduced; but the Whig denies that this statement is supported by the speeches of the Conservative leaders prior to 1879. It would be a gigantic task to furnish all the information it needs, but in the present instance a few quotations will suffice to show that it is either unable to read, unable to understand, or dishonest.

The National Policy resolution moved by Sir John Macdonald in the House of Commons and seconded by Sir Charles Tupper, contained this proposition "Resolving as it ought in the direction of a reciprocity of tariffs with our neighbours, so far as the varied interests of Canada may demand, will greatly tend to procure for this country eventually a reciprocity of trade." This is a plain declaration that the absence of reciprocity was the cause of the resolution; in other words, that if we had been admitted on as American subjects on terms similar to those on which we admitted Americans to ours the resolution would never have been prepared.

On August 22nd, 1878, Sir John Macdonald, in a speech in this city, asked "Was it fair or right while the Americans kept their own market for themselves, they should be allowed to send their surplus produce to Canada, thus making it a slaughter market?" Again, in his nomination speech, Sir John pointed out that "while Canadian markets were completely open to the United States, the doors of the latter were shut against us."

The same thread of argument runs all through the speeches delivered in the House of Commons by leading Conservatives in the session of 1878. We have the passages marked and could produce them if required. But it is not necessary, for there is probably no one in Canada outside the Whig office, who is ignorant of the fact that what the Conservative party objected to in our former trade arrangements was jug handled free trade.

We are asked to quote Henry Clay on protection in the States. Always ready to enlighten mental darkness we cheerfully comply. Addressing the House of Representatives in 1824, Clay said "That never in the history of the American Republic has there been such unusual misery, want, and financial and commercial ruin as from 1817 to 1824 in some years of free trade." In 1832, speaking in the Senate, he declared that "never in the history of the American Republic have there been years of such unexampled prosperity, aggrandisement and happiness as from 1824 to 1831 under a high protective tariff," adding that "whilst the opponents of protection declared that it would be the ruin of our manufactures, mercial and agricultural interests of the country, unbounded success was the result. There are some tens of speeches in the same large scale by Americans quoted on this, which our contemporary may consult if it wishes.

Not passing by such insignificant authorities we can produce unimpeachable testimony to the value of protection in the Kingston Whig which has declared that there should not be any change in the policy of the country affecting such industries as the cotton mill. If that doesn't settle the matter forever, then it is futile to quote authorities upon the subject any longer.

The exodus that was alleged by Reform orators to be depopulating the country at the rate of a hundred thousand a year is not heard of now, but on the contrary we are told of a movement of population going in the contrary direction. The Welland Telegraph has been informed by a customs officer at Niagara Falls, that that is one day recently he counted two hundred emigrants crossing the bridge in the train, of whom one hundred and eighty were bound for Manitoba, the remainder for Minnesota. When the two hundred cross the border at Detroit they will be counted as emigrants from Canada to the United States, but Grit authorities will scarcely have the boldness to raise the exodus cry again.

"Far off fields are green," 'tis said, and so are many that seek them. A former resident of Galt, now residing in Grand Rapids, Mich., writes to the Gait Reporter to warn his countrymen against taking root where a view of other climes than their own. Laws, society, schools, churches, climate, soil, water and timber, "all these things, he says, are much better in Ontario than in the western states. "I know" he continues "that Canada has the best laws and society in the world and under the present Administration's trade policy she is making rapid progress. I wish to say these few words for my old home, and I can only express the wish to hear of your continued prosperity, and that you may never become inoculated with any of Uncle Sam's laws and customs."

The surplus revenues of the United States are now so great that during the eight months ending on the first of March the public debt has been reduced by ninety eight million dollars, or at the rate of one hundred and forty seven millions per annum. There remained at the date mentioned of debt presently payable five hundred and forty one millions, and it is calculated that in three years and a half all the debt now payable will be cleared away. Nothing more will be due till 1891, and American politicians are puzzled to know what to do in the meantime. The free traders want the tariff lowered, but protectionists want the internal revenues abolished, and the corruptionists want the present duties maintained and the money spent upon huge jobs. The solution of the problem will give our American cousins all the opportunities for statesmanship that they can desire.

On Friday last the Globe charged Sir John Macdonald with having sold him self to Mr Shibleds, a contractor, for $2,500, a sum alleged to have been paid by Shibleds for the settlement of the suit brought against Sir John by General Hewson. On Monday evening Sir John made an explanation in the course of which he stated that when the suit was brought against him in 1880 by Hewson he was dangerously ill, and was warned by his physician that to give evidence in court might be fatal to him. Shibleds acted as agent for Sir John in relieving the latter from the worry of litigation by settling the suit. It was settled for $2,500, and Sir John, being poor, had to borrow from a friend the amount, half of which has already been paid back. These circumstances show the baseless character of the Globe's charge, which was reiterated by the Globe's echoes; but the explanation was scarcely necessary. Slander is the usual tool on which the unscrupulous portion of the Grit press subsist, and no falsehood is too glaring to appease their appetite.

General Laard.

To the Editor of THE DAILY NEWS—

SIR,—The Whig, of this city, is exercising itself, in giving its opinion regarding General Laard's reasons for going to England, at present. A contributor to the editorial column of that paper considers the General's movement with that of Major Ridout, and offers it as a proof of "how truly and shaply time brings about its revenges." No parallel, however, can be drawn between the two cases. General Laard has asked permission of the Canadian Government, by whom he is now employed, to go to England for three months, because he wishes to go there for three months. Major Ridout has been ordered by the British Government, by whom he is employed, to join his regiment in India. The movements of each have been the result of orders given them. The Minister of Militia has nothing to do with the movements of either. The statement that Major Ridout has been "peremptorily dragged from his home here and separated from his family" is without the slightest foundation. The movements of Major Ridout possessing "the confidence of business-men-friends of the principle of Canada," who, as a matter of fact, know nothing whatever of him, can have nothing to do with the question. And, as the opinion expressed by the writer in the Whig in reference to General Laard, that "a good soldier should stand to his guns," it might be presumed that the General is the best judge as to whether he has guns to stand to or not.

The writer in the Whig recommends Major-General Strange as "eminently fitted" for General Laard's post. If unauthorized by Major-General Strange, this is a most unwarrantable piece of impertinence. I do not think, however, that the gross attack made on the Minister of Militia in the same article would tend to promote Gen. Strange's candidature were the post vacant, which it is not. I do I think that the publication in the Whig is consulting the interests of Kingston by permitting the malevolent attack to be made upon the Minister.

VOLUNTEER.

March 29th.

FOR THE NORTH-WEST.

This morning Messrs Folger & Hanley ticketed a large party to the North-West. Those composing the party were: John Bullis and family (8), D. C. Spinning and family (6), Wells Island, Wm. Richardson and family (8), W. Thompson and family (14), Seeley's Bay; John Tryan and family (4), Sharbot; and James Hussey and wife. Rice Stone went to Colorado, and Mr John Jones, Mississippi, to Denver. The stock of on the property changed four cars and was valued at $5,000.

A CALAMITOUS FIRE.

Fifty thousand Dollars Worth of Property in Toronto Burned

Toronto, March 29.—A112-6) a.m. an alarm of fire was sounded from box 5, corner of York and Front streets. Just after the midnight train had left the Union Station for the West, P. C. Peacham was going up York street, and where crossing Front street looked around and saw a reflection in the upper part of the building on the north-east corner of Esplanade and Lorne streets occupied by John Oliver & Co., as a planing mill. The ground floor was occupied by Oliver and Co., and three quarters of the upstairs flat by the Consolidated Purifier Company, and the other quarter by the Toronto Wagon Wheel Company. Morrison & Rose engine works adjoin Oliver's mill and is next the vacant lot to the south of the St. James Hotel. When first noticed the fire was very small, but in a few minutes the flames shot up through the roof, and it became evident that all attempts to save the burning building would prove futile. The wind was blowing pretty strong to the northeast, and fears were from the first entertained for the safety of Hay & Co.'s factory just east, and even of the Queen's Hotel. Burning cinders were carried three or four hundred feet into the air and then north-eastwardly, forming a complete storm of fire and dropping on the roofs of the business part of the city, some being carried as far as the corner of Queen and Yonge streets. A few minutes after the fire occurred men were stationed on the roofs of Hay's furniture factory and adjacent buildings to put out the cinders that fell thickly on them. The fire originated in the upper part of Oliver's mill, and from the first burned fiercely and fast. The material that fed the flames was of the most inflammable kind—shavings, dry wood, boxes, etc. The planing mill was well stocked with valuable lumber of all kinds, and the whole is a total loss. The office adjoining stood on the south-east corner of the building. The vault contained many valuable papers, deeds, books, insurance papers, etc., and it is thought they are preserved intact. At 1:20 the flames had completely enveloped the roof of the engine works adjoining, and at this time several of the firemen were on the roof. The building was of brick, one story high, with a flat roof. The firemen were working noisily when all of a sudden the roof caved in with a loud crash, and Deputy Chief Graham, and firemen Jas Davis and Mike Tenly, of the Portland Street Station with it. A thrill of horror ran through the vast crowd standing on the Grand Trunk Railway track and on Front street. A rush was made by a portion of the crowd for the gates leading to the foundry from the Esplanade. A World reporter was standing just outside the gates when the roof fell, and darting inside was soon beside the building. A minute afterwards, Jas Davis came out of a side window and first and was immediately followed by his two companions. A cheer went up from the crowd, and the hats and caps were waved in the air. Davis was the only one that appeared to be hurt, and he complained of a severe pain in the back. It is thought that he may perhaps be injured internally, but he walked around quite freely after the accident. Morrison Rose engine works were filled.

LOSSES AND INSURANCE.

Oliver & Co., loss on building, plant and stock, about $35,000. Mr Jas. Oliver informed our reporter that his firm was only insured for one-third that amount. He was not sure about the Companies. A. J. Stephens is manager of the Consolidated Purifier Company, he could not give an estimate of the loss of his firm. Morrison Rose' machinery can be repaired, although it is damaged by water. The firm is insured for $14,000 in the Phoenix, $6,000 of this amount was reinsured equally by the Phoenix between the Citizens, of London, and another Company, the name of which could not be learned. The total loss by the fire will no doubt exceed $50,000.

ANOTHER TRAGEDY

John Kennedy, of Parham, Poisons Himself.

Another calamity has followed fast upon the one just perpetrated at Napanee. This time, however, it is a case of supposed suicide, and not murder. About a week east of Parham is the scene of the tragedy. Last night John Kennedy went to bed seemingly all right bodily and mentally. During the night he woke his wife up by getting out of the bed, and when asked why he had arisen and where he was going he replied that he did not feel very well, and that he thought he would take a dose of camphor. She thought all was right and paid no more attention to him. As he did not return to bed, she got up to see what was keeping him, and was horrified on going down stairs to find him lying on the floor unconscious with a bottle of strychnine on the table. The bottle was uncorked, and but little of the poison remained in it. A doctor was called in. This morning when the K. & P. train passes Parham station the deceased was in an insensible condition, and was not expected to live but for a few hours. A report says that he is dead, but it has not been confirmed. Mr Kennedy is a man about 45 years of age and has a grown up family of sons and one daughter. He owns a farm in the section named and is in good circumstances. The act of taking the poison can be attributed to no cause except that of a temporary fit of insanity. He is a very sober industrious man and highly respected in the county.

The above information was supplied us by a gentleman who came in on the K. & P. this morning.

Soothe the Troubled

THE GOLDEN LION GROCERY'S TEAS

Have Become Fireside Talk

WHY?

Because they soothe the troubled, comfort the bereaved, give strength to those who faint by the way, help the aching, invigorate the weak, soften the pangs of sorrow, blunt the edge of hunger, impart noise to wrong, sharpen the point to reason, and are in all ways conducive to be the friend of man and woman.

The above are part of the virtues that are in the Teas that are sold by the Kingston, March 28, 1877.

"DEAR SIR,—I was informed by Mr Hutcheson that you had purchased a number of Kirk Lake City lots and wanted to dispose of them. I would allow you 10 per cent. net of purchase, if said at once. As there is other parties wanting to sell lots in the same place, please call at once.

"Yours &c.,
"Jas Clapham,
"Grocer,
"Princess st."

Kingston, March 27, 1882.

"DEAR SIR,—Please leave word at my office to-morrow how much you will take for the lots you bought in Kirk Lake City, and oblige.

"Yours, &c.,
"Thos. Moore,
"Brock st."

FORESTERS

Leave was granted at this morning be called upon two of the gentlemen whose signatures appear above and ask them to take back their lots, but he was not long in discovering that they knew nothing about the postal cards, not having sent them, nor having seen any. The lots were sold for taxes in Kirk Lake. He says he did not go to see the first time, as he was satisfied that the cards were a trick, and that there were bogus lots in Kirk Lake City.

Be on the alert for "Clapham."

CITY AND VICINITY

Scraps from our Reporter's Note-book.

It was All-a, F. Ivison-lative who had the "fun" with Alf. McCammon, and not Alf. J. P. Gillespie-lative.

Captain A. Horn has grown up sailing. He says he was taught to his joy, without work, organy more. A lucky captain he.

Two beautiful barks arrived this afternoon from Montreal—one for Mr R. Reid and one for Mr C. M. Kirkpatrick.

Judge Jellett, of Picton, has given his decision in a test case that the Dunkin Act is not in force in the township of Hallowell.

Clerks must be fastacious in Waterloo, for they have 32 of them in the town hall.

We have received the annual report of the Commissioner of Agriculture and Arts, a baby volume, containing 680 pages of useful matter.

Sydenham Street Methodist Church was opened for the late Rev. Dr. Ryerson and Rev. Dr. Green, on Sunday, March 26th, 1882, just thirty years ago last Sunday.

CANADA'S CANAL EXPENDITURE

The Buffalo News, speaking of the free navigation of the St. Lawrence, says: "It will commence naturally, as it were, from north to New York, but such is not the case. Nature, in its order, sets up barrier after barrier, first at Montreal, then at Quebec, Portland, Philadelphia, and New Orleans holding for business. Our neighbours across the border who unwittingly took upon their shoulders a portion of the burden of the construct a new canal from Lake Erie to Lake Ontario, are notable and disheartened enough because the revenue received returns their immense outlay, but rather are quite active and sanguine of conquering success. In the House of Commons at Ottawa, last night, a resolution was carried and adopted providing for the issuance of bonds in the sum of $250,000 for deepening and dredging the channel between Montreal and Quebec, and the first three years' interest to satisfy the people of New York State that Canada is determined if possible to wrest commerce from the country, this continent, and the world, at the quarter of a million of dollars ought to supply it.

PERSONAL.

Mr. G. Sidney, agent for the Humpty Dumpty Company is at the Windsor.

Mr A. A. Levey intends going to Buffalo and not to Winnipeg, as stated in last night's News.

Anxiety is felt in Montreal for Lieut. Baldwin should go to Toronto to succeed Lieut. Grassett.

Mrs Lydia Tatro, a Pittsfield (Mass.) widow, has three sons, all ex-Union soldiers, and of children and grandchildren she has just seventy.

Prof. Daniel Wilson, who fainted in St. Lawrence Hall during the late visit of the Governor-General, is still unwell. He has been confined to bed ever since from pleurisy. Yester day he was somewhat better.

Patti will not visit Canada. Her season was not as successful as anticipated. The diva, in fact, is getting old, and being no longer the Marchioness de Caux, and the favourite of an empress she has lost social caste.

MARINE NOTES.

The tug F. A. Folger left this afternoon for Calibogie to bring the Grantham to Kingston.

The steamer Traveller left with the Montreal Forwarding Company's barge Princess for Belleville, where 25,000 bushels of wheat will be loaded for Montreal. The grain belongs to the Messrs Richardson. This is the first forwarding business of the season.

A FAREWELL SUPPER.

Mr. J. D. Law has tendered his resignation as Superintendent of the Robertsville mine, and tonight he will be tendered a champagne supper by his friends. This afternoon, a number of his friends in the city left for the Mississippi to attend the supper.

BOOK TRADE.—The large number of applications for book accommodation already received by the agents of the Allan line of steamships indicate that the book trade will be carried across the Atlantic well in advance of last year's business. The demand is much greater than last year, and it is well for those who purpose taking the trip, in order to avoid the rush and accompanying inconvenient upon delay, to make early application for berths or state rooms. The pleasing accommodation can be secured now upon application to Messrs Folger and Hanley, the Kingston agents.
