MONDAY EVENING, APRIL 24.

FOUND GUILTY.

Nothing else was expected,—scarcely any other result seemed possible, than that Elijah Vankoughnet should be found guilty of wilful murder, when tried by a jury of his followers. The slaying of Richardson was a shocking deed. Honest industrious, attentive to his duties to society, respected and esteemed by his neighbours, he was shot down like a dog, while peacefully pursuing his daily calling. According to all accounts, he was a man who had wronged no one, and had given no provocation for revenge, especially of such a bloody nature. Who committed the deed? There was no hesitation amongst the inhabitants in at once laying the guilt at the door of Elijah Vankoughnet, an immediate neighbour of the victim. Vankoughnet's character was bad. He was known as the participant in numerous petty offences committed from time to time, and credited with complicity in many more where his hand could not be distinctly traced. He was about to leave the country and had given dark hints of some memorable action which he intended to take. His horse was found in the ruins of Richardson's barn. He drove Richardson's horse to Elgin and sold it there. He bought buckshot at Bedford Mills shortly before the murder, at a time of year when they were not needed for hunting; and buckshot were the instruments used in the dreadful butchery. He fled from the sight of the people, and was found secreted upon an island. He told those in charge of him where Richardson's gun could be found, he having hidden it there. Not a link in the chain of evidence was wanting; if anything further were required in order to convict a man, murderers would be safe unless they were actually taken red-handed, or were seen by witnesses, and even then they might escape on the ground of mistaken identity. The Shawns for the prisoner naturally exerted all the force and ability at his command to prove his client innocence, but the material he had to work with was of so obdurate a character, the favourable evidence so attenuated, so to make his task hopeless. The theory set up in explanation or defence was that the shooting was accidental, and in support of this was adduced the statement of the prisoner to Mrs Denee that such was the case; the alleged disagreement of the men about the buckshot sold with those found near the body; and the fact that a piece of hatband was used as wadding, while neither the prisoner nor Mr Richardson wore hatbands. As to Vankoughnet's claim that the shooting was accidental, who would attach any importance whatever to the statement of a man in such a position? Then, Green, who sold the buckshot, believed those found near the body to be of the quality which he had sold. Finally, we do not know that there is any evidence for saying that neither Vankoughnet nor Richardson were a hatband; but surely, even if they were the case, it was possible for Vankoughnet to have such a thing in his possession as a piece of old hatband. Such a defence as this was evidently valueless against an overwhelming mass of positive incriminating testimony, for it merely amounted to a plea that there was a possibility of the event having been accidental; and such proved to be the view which prevailed with the jury. The recommendation to mercy tacked on to the verdict was about as inconsequential and absurd as could well be imagined; in fact, it shows the defective nature of our jury system. If the present is an instance of murder, it is one of the most cruel, heartless, and unprovoked in the annals of crime. The only circumstance which can call for indulgence in such a case is innocence. But the recommendation that lenity be observed towards the convicted felon frequently the medium through which a compromise is effected between those who favour the guilt of the prisoner and those who are of a different mind. It might be well if the Judge, on the delivery of such a verdict, were to enquire of the foreman the grounds upon which he founded the mitigating addition, in order that they could be forwarded to the Government, for it appears to us that a man be convicted of wilful murder, except under circumstances of extraordinary provocation, while justice is meted out on behalf of society, the only mercy that should be expected is that of hanse.

COMMERCIAL TREATIES.

On Friday evening Mr Blake moved, as an amendment to a motion to go into a Committee of Supply, a resolution declaring that Canada should be permitted to negociate her own commercial treaties. Since 1854, when we were allowed to negotiate a reciprocity treaty with the American union, we have actually employed the power aimed at in the resolution, and we have taken full advantage of the concession of authority to regulate our own commercial affairs by the tariff of 1879, excluding British manufacturers to a certain extent from our market, and by imposing an interecurse with France and Spain through Sir Alexander Galt for the adoption of commercial treaties. But Mr Blake objects to the roundabout method of dealing with foreign powers through England, and desires the establishment of a really diplomatic corps for Canada himself. The project is futile and extravagant. In return for the outlay we got no advantage, for foreign powers would refuse to deal with a dependency unless the agreement were expressly approved by the mother country. But, on the other hand, we could not undertake independent action of such a kind without risking forfeiting somewhat of the moral and physical support of England, a loss well nigh irreparable. The fact is that Mr Blake's motion is a veiled bid for Canadian independence. Commercial independence, as Sir John Macdonald pointed out, is only the first step towards political independence and separation. But, such an organic change of condition is not to be introduced by necessary or understand methods. The people of Canada will deal shortly, sharply, and decisively with that question when it is made a plain, explicit, and definite issue; and, in the meantime, they will not permit themselves to be hoodwinked into making a step in its direction on the pretence of commercial advantage.

RED RIVER FLOODS.

Eighteen Hundred Guardians Suffering in the Sunshine.

St. Paul, Minn., April 22.—The overflow of the Red river, a short distance east of St. Vincent, caused by the breaking up of the ice, is commencing a great deal of damage. At this place over twelve hundred Canadian emigrants are detained, and between here and St. Vincent about the same number. At the latter place the track is under three feet of water, and the rush of its tributaries the destruction of St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Manitoba railway bridge. The passengers delayed at St. Paul do not expect to get away before Monday or Tuesday. Many of them are short of funds. To make matters worse, emigrants continue to arrive in large numbers, and to be forwarded to the rear in a packed there will be over three thousand people here en route for Manitoba, to say nothing of those now on the road between here and St. Vincent.

Winnipeg, Man., April 22.—A telegram from St. Vincent says there is three feet of water on the track between Emerson and there, and that a locomotive is disabled in a place where it cannot be reached by the workmen. There are also two locomotives of St. Paul line off the track. Until the water subsides traffic must be entirely suspended between here and St. Paul. The water has fallen two feet since last night.

Twenty-four kegs of gunpowder were used to break up the ice at St. John's College, a mile below the Louise bridge, with good results. The people who left their houses on the flats have returned to them. The steamer Victoria broke loose from her moorings at the mouth of the Assiniboine, and although five of her crew were aboard and tried to cast anchor they could not, owing to the ice. She landed broadside against the standing pier of the Broadway bridge, turned, and is passing under the west span of the bridge. The pilot house and everything above the deck was swept off. She smashed herself shortly after three hundred yards below the bridge. The ice is out of the Assiniboine yet, but the worst of the danger is past.

TWO FUNERALS YESTERDAY

All that was mortal of the late Mrs Horton was conveyed to its last resting place in Cataraqui Cemetery yesterday afternoon. The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. Andrew Wilson at the residence of her husband, Mr J. W. Horton, Princess street. The pall bearers were Messrs. H. Cunningham, W. Robinson, ex M.P.P., W. J. Dick, J. Paul, J. Neal and W. Coverdale. The cortege was very lengthy

The funeral of Mr Samuel Parker took place yesterday afternoon. Deceased was a prominent member of the Orange Order and the brethren turned out in a body, wearing regalia. The coffin, which was wrapped in the banner of L.O.L. No. 577, was carried through the ranks of the Orangemen from his late residence, Union street, to St. James' Church, where Rev. F. W. Kirkpatrick performed the service. The pall bearers were all Orangemen, as follows: Messrs W. Corbett, T. Lemmon, T. Wilson, G. McCullagh, J. Davey and W. Irwin. The order of procession was Prentice Boys, Y.M.P.B.A.'s of Kingston and Portsmouth, and the Orangemen There was a large turn out of the members and deceased's friends, thus showing the respect in which he was held. The service at the grave was conducted by Bros R. Montgomery and H. Hunter, W.M. and D.M. respectively of L.O.L. No. 577.

THE ATALANTA

Captain Cuthbert intends to test the Atalanta from reason in some of the New York regattas. He is confident of being able to turn the tables on the big sloops of the New York Yacht Club. Before doing so, however, she will receive the following improvements, as noted in the Belleville Intelligencer. The yacht will be hauled out and her hull placed smooth and polished. The floor will be raised three inches, so that all the ballast can be got below the floor, instead of being stored in the hulge. Seven feet will be cut off the spar, which was previously four feet longer than was necessary, a topmast four feet longer will be added, three feet will be cut off the main boom, and four feet off the bowsprit. The mainsail and jib will be slightly reduced in size, and a large square headed gaff-topsail will be carried in light weather, while the present gaff-topsail will be cut down to the dimensions of a working gaff topsail, and the balloon jib-topsail will be enlarged. Other minor details will be attended to, including the substitution of a wheel for the present tiller.

THE IRISH

Mr. Clifford Lloyd's Resignation Accepted.

London, April 23.—Mr Clifford Lloyd, Resident Commissioner of Dublin Metropolitan Police, has resigned his office. He was reluctant. The resignation was forced into the House and caused a deep sensation, and great surprise among members of the chamber and the Irish members. Mr Lloyd's resignation was the result of the Phoenix Park murders, and was sent in immediately after the murders, and was sent in immediately after the murders. The Times says he was forced to resign because he was too severe in the Irish question, however, men come to the front on Thursday in the violent debate on the circular issued by the Inspector of Constabulary at Clare, suggesting to the prisoners detailed guard for Mr Clifford Lloyd. They should, says the circular, arise on suspicion of an attempt, at once on their firearms to prevent the bare possibility of an attack on his life. As might have been expected, the circular caused great exasperation in Ireland and among the friends of Ireland here. The Nationalist Chronicle denounces it as wholly unstamped by anything said or done in this country for centuries. The other papers compare the state of Ireland to the state of civilization in the Far West, where the advice given to a newcomer is, "Be sure to shoot first any man you think is going to shoot you."

The above item concerning Mr Parnell is that the Kilrea Society has applied to the Government for permission to place a statue at Kilmainham with rage green curtains, Indian, blue pottery, and other objects dear to the nothesic soul, but Phillips Corstet sternly refused to allow the virgin expanse of Government whitewash to be hidden.

London, April 23.—Mr Parnell left London last evening to surrender his parole at Kilmainham gaol the morning.

In an interview between Mr Lowell and Mr Forster, the latter reasoned his after to release the Irish American suspects provided they left Ireland and remained quiet during the prosecution of the Cavendish Act. Eleven suspects now claim that they are Americans born in Ireland, but several of them are never out of Ireland. The American legation do not think there is any authority in his report of the interview.

Mr Smyth, M.P., replying to a vote of censure passed on him by the grients of Tipperary for not supporting the Land League, violently denounced the League, and said that until the conspiracy is demolished, rent and branch, Ireland will have no peace.

The Standard asserts that there is no foundation in international law for suggesting that the Government exercise its rights in regard to the imprisonment of American suspects, or that the United States have a shadow of ground for complaint or remonstrance.

London, April 23—The Observer says there is reason to believe that before the end of the week all the American suspects imprisoned in Ireland will have left the country.

The Cabinet yesterday discussed Mr W. H. Smith's resolution for extending the purchase clause of the Land Act. It is understood that the Cabinet resolved certainly to accept the assistance of the Opposition in carrying out practical legislation in this direction.

Dorrit, late assistant secretary of the Land League, has been released from Dundalk Gaol. He was informed that his movements would be strictly watched, and that he would be re-arrested if he did not behave himself.

The London Daily News says are of the opinion that the Government will probably be strictly watched, and that he would be re-arrested if he did not behave himself

The London Daily News says are of the opinion that the Government will probably refuse to accept the offer of release. He came to Ireland with the express object of raising the international question. The other American suspects, having undertaken to quit the country, will be released.

The Telegraph says it has reason to believe that no decision has been arrived at regarding the American suspects

London, April 24—The Standard says the report that the Government agreed on terms that may involve the recall of Lowell, the gradual release of all political suspects and the trial in Dublin detained who is suspicion of complicity in the outrages, the substitution for the Coercion Act of a large increase of summary jurisdiction vested in magistrates, and the amendment of the arrears and purchase clauses of the Land Act are the principal features of the Ministerial programme.

Distilled Spirits

New York, April 24—The Herald publishes an article showing that if the bill for the extension of the pro. 1 for the collection in warehouses of distilled spirits becomes law, its practical working for a period of two years will be to divert $50,000,000 or more revenue taxes from the treasury and into the pockets of a ring, and break down the legitimate distillery business of the country. Kentucky speculators are said to be in the school. The bill was offered in the House by Dunnell as having the unanimous approval of the Committee on Ways and Means, and as having been prepared by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

DESPATCHES IN BRIEF.

BRITISH ASSOCIATION

Proposal Made to Meet in Canada.

Ottawa, April 23.—It will no doubt be interesting to the people of Canada to hear that it is more than probable that the next annual meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science will be held in the Dominion. This is one of the leading scientific bodies of the world, and has included in its membership many of the foremost minds of the Mother Country.

Mark Langan, Esq., First Deputy Sheriff of New York City, recently said to a prominent newspaper reporter: "I had a very weak and painful back, and could find nothing to relieve it until I tried St. Jacobs Oil, less than four bottles of which cured me completely. I have recommended it highly."

John Hays, Corlitt P.O., says "His shoulder was so lame for nine months that he could not raise his hand to his head, but by the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil the pain and lameness disappeared, and, although three months has elapsed, he has not had an attack of it since."

Daily News,

Proprietor,

LEWIS W. SHANNON,

MONDAY EVENING, APRIL 24.

THE week in Kingston. It is one to reflect upon, and dissatisfaction will crop out in the minds of many. Monday, the 17th, opened with a bright sky and promised well for a week of pleasure. Tuesday, the 18th, dawned with a dull sky and a cold wind, which, however, did not prevent the Queen's College Conversazione from being a success. Wednesday, the 19th, was a day of disappointment to the people of Kingston, who had expected to see the Prince of Wales. Thursday, the 20th, was a day of sorrow, and Friday, the 21st, was a day of mourning. Saturday last, the 22nd, was a day of sorrow, and Sunday, the 23rd
