SAMARITAN NERVINE

MEMORIAL.

GIBOUX, DIED APRIL 17TH, 18

A loving husband, a friend most true,
Has gone to the Judge of all good men,
'Twas and to see him from thirty left behind.
And the nerve-stopper
A widow with sadness his loss.
He has left no consolation one to found,
And Spring in our Lord's true cross.

His patients was remarkable,
He death was Christian-like to see,
For amongst his best worth he said:
"The angels are singing for me."

Oh, great death! why didst thou take
That form which was loved so dear?
Why didst thou cause that—our—upon
Which seemed so pleasing to cheer?

On earth he was loved by all—
His words were always kind;
And by him we can plainly see
He possessed an far finative mind.

Two weeks ago to day to his friends
He little he knew what
But ne'er shall we forget
That kind one, Joseph Giroux.

He lived a pleasing life
For two score years and four;
Then he fled from this world of trials
To live for evermore.

Better, far better, I to for him,
For we know it was God's will
To take him home from this lone cover
And leave a memory which none on earth can fill.

—HORACE GIBOUX.
