THE WHELAN CASE.

The Court of Error and Appeal gave judgment in the Whelan case yesterday, sustaining the decision of the Courts below, and ordering that the judgment of the law on the culprit should be carried out. The Court, which is composed of ten members, was divided—four of the Judges being in favour of granting a new trial and six against it. Those opposed to granting a new trial were the President, ex-Chief Justice Draper, Chief Justice Richards, Vice-Chancellor Mowat, and Justices John Wilson, Adam Wilson, and Mr Justice Gwynne; and those who were in favour of granting a new trial were: Chief Justice Hagarty, Chancellor Vankoughnet, Vice-Chancellor Spragge, and Mr Justice Morrison. Mr Cameron asked leave to appeal to the Privy Council in England against the decision, but the Court held that it had no power to grant leave to a case of that kind—the proceedings brought before their Lordships having been taken on a writ of error. It would be competent, of course, for Mr Cameron on his own responsibility, to take action in England; but Mr Cameron contended that he could not bring the case before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council unless it appeared on the record the Canadian Court that leave had been granted him to do so The Court, however, after due deliberation held that it had no authority and no precedent for granting leave to appeal. It is not known whether Mr Cameron will attempt to carry the case to England without having received leave from the court here; but he will doubtless strain every point of law in the prisoner's favour. In case he should ascertain by cable that he can get the case before the Privy Council under the circumstances, he will doubtless lose no time in doing so. In the meantime, the law will take its course, and unless the prisoner be further respited he will be executed at Ottawa on the 11th of next month. He has been remanded to the custody of the Sheriff of Carleton.—Leader.

THE NORTH WEST.

We give below some interesting extracts from a letter received by Mr Hedley, of Montreal, from Dr. John Schultz, of Red River Settlement, late editor of the Nor' Wester.

Red River Settlement,
22nd Dec., 1868.

We are waiting with great anxiety to hear the result of the present mission to England, and feeling that the Commissioners will have greatly compromised the future of this country, if they agree to any settlement having for its basis the retention by the Company of select districts of country, or any Royalty in lands or minerals.

If the country can be obtained on such terms as will admit of free grants of land to actual settlers, then may be expected that rapid "settling up" which characterizes the Western States, but if we are to have a Crown Land Office with its inevitable parasites; if we are to have the choice pineries, the water powers, and the mineral regions locked up in the hands of speculators, then we dare not hope to compete with our restless and enterprising neighbours, who already have located a Railroad line to within sixty miles of this very place, and who openly boast that long before our route to Lake Superior is completed, we will hear the whistle of the locomotive at the very boundary line.

I hope one day to see you up here when travelling shall have become easier and speedier, but till you see this country you can never realize the advantages which it offers to the settler. I might convey an imperfect idea to your mind by asking you to recall the old Malden Common, clothe that grassy plain with herbage twenty inches high, deepen its surface soil to twelve or fourteen; underlie it with the different limestone formation, and you have the general physical character of our prairies. Imagine these then with their waving grasses, undulated into long gently heaving swells, interspersed with timber fringed lakes and ponds, and dotted here and there with clumps of balsam poplar, aspen, oak, and ash, and you have the valley of the Saskatchewan, as it presents to the eye of the traveller in midsummer. Five hundred thousand square miles is the assumed extent of this class of country, but I do not doubt but that this estimate is vastly below the capacity for settlement. So much for the country. You know, of course of the distress that prevails here; it has not reached its height, but up to the present time no death from starvation has occurred, and the relief that has been sent in, though fearfully mismanaged, has been of much service. The famine has had the effect of destroying for the winter, our cash trade, but we still anticipate a good trading year, from the fact that our traders in the interior are all doing well, and report the fur yield as greater than that of last year. The Government road to Lake of the Woods is progressing well, so well indeed that a horse and sleigh can now be driven half the distance (50 miles). Before spring the road will be cut to the northwest angle of Lake of the Woods, and then a few months' work with the spade and shovel will make it a passable road.

Arnold, one of the men arrested for complicity in the assassination of the late President Lincoln, wrote a lengthy confession which has just been made public. It states that Wilkes Booth was the leading spirit in the conspiracy; it also gives some details relative to the plot to kidnap Mr Lincoln which had been concocted some time before his death.

AGRARIAN CRIMES IN IRELAND.

Agrarian crimes threaten once more to be rife in Ireland. The murder of Mr Baker is still the subject of startled discussion in this country, and while men are talking of it, the news arrives of other outrages, happily less successful. Mr Pierce, a large tenant farmer, holding land under Lord Darnley, at Trim, has been fired at and wounded, though not dangerously, his offence presumably being that he had served notices of ejectment on some of his sub-tenants. Mr Pierce had a tenant with him; and it is thought that the unwillingness of the assassins to injure this man prevented them taking aim at their true mark. Landlords and land agents will do well to profit by the hint. Instead of sending for the military and the police, let them take a tenant. A hostage will serve them better than an escort. The other outrage is as yet still in an inchoate condition. It has not advanced beyond the stage of threats. Three men, with blackened faces, have menaced the land-steward at Cappa White, Limerick, with death, if he carried out some evictions. Threatened men live long; and the steward at Cappa White will, we hope, justify the proverb. The agrarian outrages of Ireland may be left to the severe dealings of the law. It is inexpedient that mercy should be shown to their perpetrators. The correction of the evils in which they have their source falls within the province of a statesmanlike policy. The advocates on either side, who confounded these differences, either in apology for outrage or in order to stay just legislation, are in equal degree abettors of crime.

THE WAR IN NEW ZEALAND.

Once more we have tidings of disaster from New Zealand, accompanied with details of outrages more horrible than any which have yet stained the bloody annals of the Northern Island. The successes of the escaped Maori prisoners and their allies under Tito-kowharu, in the district of Patea, have given encouragement to all the disaffected natives in the interior, and have contributed greatly to aggravate the dangers of the situation. What was lately only an insignificant attack upon our detached outposts in the Wanganui province has swelled once more into a general insurrection of the tribes in the centre and in the middle districts of the eastern and western coasts. A new Maori war has, in fact, commenced in all form. The titular native King has joined the movement, and has issued a proclamation calling upon all who render him allegiance to rise and to drive out the "Pakehas" from the country. The defeats recently sustained by the colonial forces under the command of Colonel McDonnel and Major Von Tempsky have inspired Maories with a not unreasonable hope that, now the red-coats are away, they will be able to expel the British settlers. The settlers themselves seem to have been seized with a kind of panic, and have deserted their farms and abodes in the interior—the town of Wanganui alone representing what was the other day a flourishing province of the New Zealand colony. Unhappily the miserable tale does not end here. It is reported that upwards of fifty British settlers, with their families, have been barbarously slaughtered, with all those horrible refinements of cruelty which are suggested by Maori revenge. Recently, under the influence of the Pai-Marire superstition, the natives seem to have returned to a state far more barbarous than their original savagery. That thin veil of Christianity which they have worn, and which was mistook for a real conversion, has been abruptly cast off and its temporary use seems only to have bred in the Maori nature a spirit of cruel, cowardly, deliberate bloodthirstiness. The war which has just begun is likely to be marked by horrors transcending even the blackest features of the Indian mutiny and the Jamaica insurrection. By just so much as the Maories are superior to all other savages in their capacity for good are they likely to surpass all savage precedents now that their natures have been perverted to evil. We can hardly reflect without a shudder upon the perils to which hundreds of our defenceless countrymen, English men, women, and children, are now exposed in New Zealand—perils which the imagination of those who are home-stayers is scarcely able to grasp. This is the worst calamity which we have to fear in anticipation of the next mail from New Zealand. A systematic massacre of the white settlers is a form of warfare which we shall find it difficult to encounter or to provide against Owing to the nature of the country and the scattered character of the English settlements, which are naturally dispersed along all the most open and defenceless districts of the island, the Maories, who inhabit the wooded and mountanous interior, will be able to make great havoc among the colonists.

The London Times asserts that "every industrious workman in England carries a pauper on his back."

One of the "lower ten thousand," theatres of London distributes bread and cheese as a premium to its patrons.

It is telegraphed all the way from St. Louis that a reporter was robbed in that city on Friday last of $25, the savings of a lifetime.

At the opening of a new theatre in London the ladies in the boxes were presented with scented fans, on which was inscribed the programme.

St. Louis has a new patent velocipede. The back of the rider is supported by a clamp which acts as a tiller. It has two back wheels five feet in diameter, and is moved by both the arms and legs.

The new cathedral in Portland, Me., the first Episcopal cathedral ever built in New England, was opened on Christmas. It has been fully organized, after the English system by Rev. Dr. Nelly, Bishop of Maine.

A passenger on an overland mail coach was recently drugged in order to be robbed, but finding insensibility coming over him, he got off at one of the stations and saved his pocket book.

A remarkable discovery of ancient coins has been made near Winona, Minnesota. Two gentlemen while visiting a stone quarry had their attention drawn to a rock of oval shape, four feet in diameter, deeply imbedded, and surmounted by a closely fitting cap exactly its size, and about six inches thick. They pried it open, and discovered coins of European and Central American countries of many years ago.

A deputation of Indians from Two Mountains—three Iroquois and two Algonquin chiefs—waited on the Governor General on Friday to congratulate him on his assuming the government. They were in full Indian costume. His Excellency received them with great courtesy and conversed freely with them.

The Amended Pharmacy Act, or sale of Poisons Bill, came into operation in England on the 1st inst. By this Act it is directed that no poison shall be sold by any person except those registered according to the Acts now in force as pharmaceutical chemists, or chemists and druggists; and that every box, bottle, vessel, or wrapper containing poison shall be distinctly labelled with the name of the article, together with the name and address of the person selling the same. The object of the bill is to prevent ignorant persons from dealing in articles the composition of which they do not understand, It will also serve as a check to the poisoning of children by the administration of preparations.
