A MODEL POST OFFICE.

The Montreal Herald advocates the institution of a model post office system followed out in Milwaukie. It says:—The city of Milwaukie in 1835 had no post office, but the settlers used to club and send an express to Chicago to get the news was greater then than it is now in Australia. The post office was erected in that year, a little balloon building twelve feet square being amply sufficient for all the work to be done, a little bigger than the room they use in Charlottetown at present. But the little office was gradually growing, and the one man who was post-master, clerk, sorter and general man-of all work, expanded into a chief postmaster and fifty clerks, and the mail coming once in twelve days has been transformed into one or twelve in one day. The system of delivery was adopted about four years ago, and is said to work exceedingly well. In the business parts of the city from six to eight rounds are made daily, and it is so well arranged that the letters are partly delivered before they could have been sorted under the old system. This was not done without opposition, and one strong ground taken was that there would be a serious risk of loss from the dishonesty or carelessness of the carriers. But as has been proved wherever else the system has been tried, the fear on this score was chimerical. In the large cities in Great Britain the plan has worked in a most satisfactory manner, and the report from Milwaukie shows that the same result has followed its introduction there. The men are secured by their honesty and good conduct, they are well paid, and bonds are required from them as security for the faithful discharge of their duty. The efforts made here to have the same system introduced have been met with similar objections, but if it is found to answer well in London with its enormous population, and the correspondence of the world pouring into it, there could be no difficulty in the matter. The question is simply one of convenience. At present our Post Office is narrow, contracted, and utterly inadequate to the requirements of the business. That is patent to every one who has ever sustained the crush round the large black stove, at the no small risk of tumbling over half a dozen news boys, squatting like toads round it, and almost invisible in the more than semi obscurity. The increase in the number of letters delivered has been nearly four fold in four years. In 1865 there were delivered 253,724, in 1866, 647,316, in 1867, 923,931, and last year, 1,361,340. Besides the letters, the newspapers delivered were, in the four years, respectively, 98,806; 190,845; 253,191; and 345,825. The Evening Wisconsin describes the manner in which the letters for city delivery are sorted, and also the arrangements by which the work of facilitating the despatch of mails outward is accomplished. The letters are first sorted, and as they are distributed into boxes, the carriers stand ready, and as soon as a half dozen letters are in, they are arranged so as to make the city delivery easy. By the time the general clerks have the letters in the boxes, the carriers have them all arranged in their knapsacks, and in twenty minutes from the time the mail waggon drove up, many of the business men are filling orders which came by it, or reading news of importance. In the distribution of letters from the city, conspicuously labeled boxes tell into which the letter is to go, in accordance with the direction it would take. If for this; if North, in this; and so on to the four points of the compass. The letters fall into tables, where they are stamped and packed. The letters brought in from the street boxes are sorted and go to these same tables, where they are distributed and bagged.

The Hon. and Rev. Francis Richard Grey, Rector of Morpeth, England, and an uncompromising Ritualist, in a sermon delivered a few Sundays ago, spoke of the judgment of the Privy Council in the Mackonochie case as an "unrighteous judgment," and avowed his intention of preaching the doctrine of the real presence "more strongly than ever." Upon this there was a cry of "Treason, treasoul" and several persons left the church.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times gives us some information respecting the cost of the Abyssinian expedition. The Government of India, he says, has advanced in all £6,589,100, of which no less than £3,089,100 is still due by England to India. If to this six millions and a half be added the expenditure on the European side of Suez, we shall have the total cost of the expedition. The Indian Government, it appears, were sold that they would have to supply only three millions, and in order to obtain the six millions and a half required, they had to borrow of the Bank of Bengal. As the money was, however, obtained at a very low rate the bank is anxious to be repaid, as it can now employ its funds much more profitably.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The New York Nation is disposed to ascribe all the faults it has discovered in Mr Beverdy Johnson to the influence of the London ladies. It complains that the Foreign Ministers of the United States are chosen by a lottery, which is quite true, although the selection of Mr Johnson was a departure from the rule that the governing party should have all the spoils. But then, there is no telling how an American" would be affected by the blandishments of London women of rank, long trained in the art of captivating men of distinction." Diplomatists, our contemporary further says, should be familiarised beforehand with "inevitable dangers." It would thus be desirable to put a choice assortment of American young men through a course of London women of rank. Perhaps Mr Thornton's glowing tribute to the charms of "the New York sirens" has led the Nation to miscalculate the power of the fair sex over diplomatic susceptibilities.

A "Southern Landlord," writing in the Dublin Evening Mail, revives a suggestion to check agrarian crime, which, under existing circumstances, may deserve serious consideration:—"There is," he says, "but one remedy for landlord murder. In every case where the assassin is not brought to justice, extend the principle of the Malicious Injury to Property Act to malicious injury to human life, appraise the value of the life, as is done under Campbell's Act, and rigorously levy the amount in the form of county cess off the district in which the crime was committed. When the assassin and his sympathisers found that they had to pay five or ten thousand pounds to the widow of their victim they would think twice ere they repeated the crime. You would, if such were the law, have every man in the vicinity interested in the prevention of the murder, and not, as now, the eager sympathiser in it. Such a process, while it would rob revenge of half its sweetness, would be only a just recompense for the failure on the part of the State to defend the lives of those who entrust themselves to its protection."

THE IRISH RAILWAYS COMMISSION.

The second report of the commissioners appointed to inspect the accounts and examine the works of railways in Ireland has just been presented to Parliament. It is dated December 7, and is signed by Sir Alexander Spearman, Mr John Mulholland, Mr John Fowler, Mr Seymour Clarke, and Mr C. Johnstone.

Soon after the publication of the first report presented by the Commissioners, they were requested by the Treasury to furnish:—1. An approximate estimate of the immediate loss which would probably be occasioned by such a reduction of fares on the Irish railways as would assimilate them to the principles on which charges are levied on the Belgian lines, and their opinion as to the probable period that would elapse before the increase of traffic to be anticipated from the reduction of fares would overtake the whole or a moiety of the loss to be incurred. 2. An estimate of the saving to be effected by the concentration of establishments under one or more administrative departments; and 3. An estimate of the diminution of charge which could be effected by placing the whole of the debenture capital on an uniform rate of interest under Government guarantee. In pursuance of these directions the Commissioners have made such inquiries into the fares, charges, and traffic arrangements on the Belgian and other foreign railways, as they considered necessary to enable them to submit a report upon the whole subject.

The results of these inquiries are stated at some length and occupy by far the larger part of the report. In the fares of the Belgian railways, tables are given showing the lines under the several managements, the railways not now worked by the companies orginally authorized to make them, and the excess of receipt over expenditure, or vice versa, from 1835 to 1867, on railways worked by the State. Then follow scales of goods charges and passenger fares on the Belgian lines, with the results of the reductions which have been made. The management of railways in Prussia and other parts of Germany is next dealt with, and this is followed by comparative statistics of Ireland and Belgium, giving various figures as to population and railway traffic. The fares and charges in Ireland and in Belgium are next compared at some length, after which the commissioners come to the recommendations which they have decided upon submitting to the Lords of the Treasury. They point out that the traffic of Ireland requires special stimulus and development for short and moderate distances both for goods and passengers, and continue:—"We are, therefore, of opinion that the reduction in passengers fares in Ireland to have its full beneficial effect must be on 'short' and 'long' traffic equally; and that the reductions in goods and cattle charges should be arranged on the principle of a uniform mileage rate for all distances, but subject to a minimum charge. After carefully considering what would be the result of reductions, we had no difficulty in coming to the conclusion that a slight diminution in the charges for the carriage of passengers and goods would be simply a loss of so much money. That to give an impetus to the intercommunication of the inhabitants and the moving of goods from place to place, and to and from the ports, and to promote the increase of the cattle traffic, already so valuable in Ireland, and generally to develope traffic to an extent calculated to overtake at no very distant period the effect of the lowering of charges, it is necessary at once to make a large reduction, and after a certain fixed minimum charge, to make the mileage scale for the several classes of traffic applicable to all distances."

In the fares for passengers they recommend that the first-class fare per mile should be 1.25d.; the second-class, .75d.; and the third, .50d., being a reduction on the present rates of 31.45 and 42 per cent respectively. With this low scale, return and season tickets should be dispensed with. Goods are divided into six classes, and the scales of charges for varying distances are given, the reduction ranging from 47 and 78 per cent. The decrease in the receipts upon the existing traffic through these changes is given at £645,701, but a saving of £88,000 a year would be effected by a reduction in the rate of interest on borrowed money and floating liabilities, and of £32,000 a year by concentration of management, leaving the net deficit £525,701, supposing that the traffic remains without increase. They assume that an immediate and considerable increase would take place, that it would be continued, in smaller proportions, year by year, and that for the first year the rolling stock and the accommodation at stations will be sufficient to meet the increased traffic. After the first twelve months a yearly sum will be required to provide for the necessary increase of rolling stock, sidings, and station accommodation to meet the increased traffic, and in the calculation this amount is charged to the revenue of the current year, as are also the working expenses of the original and increased traffic.

In conclusion the Commissioners say:—"If our anticipations of the increase of traffic resulting from the reductions be realized, the public using the Irish railways would pay for such increased traffic during a period of twelve years the sum of £12,000,000 less than they would have paid for such traffic at the existing rates; but instead of this advantage being obtained by means of any permanent sacrifice on the part of the State, a clear profit of £50,000 would be secured in the twelfth year after the payment of working charges, cost of increased accommodation and additional rolling stock, and interest on all capital previously advanced, and a profit of £90,000 in the thirteenth year."

EARTHQUAKE IN WEST SUFFOLK.—The rector of Elmswell, the Rev. W. H. C. Luke, was alarmed at the shaking of the ground, and at Elmswell railway station one of the men in the employ of the company asserts that he saw the metals move. At Ashfield Hall, the residence of Mr H. Milbank and Lady Susan Milbank, the pictures on the walls were observed to shake backwards and forwards, and a labourer in the same parish, who was sitting on a bank eating his dinner, says he distinctly felt the ground shake under him. Between these points and Stowmarket a number of persons perceiving the shock at once concluded that another explosion had taken place at Messrs. Prentice's gun-cotton factory, and villagers walked miles into the town to see what mischief had been done. The shocks were also felt at Ingham, at Fordham Hall, the seat of Mr W. Gilstrap, at the residence of Mr Walton Burrell, Foreham, and at Barton, where a daughter of Mr Scott, the agent of Sir Charles Bunbury, observed a thermometer in the room vibrating.

Mrs Winslow's Soothing Syrup.

Rev. Sylvanus Cobb thus writes in the Boston Christian Freeman: We would by no means recommend any kind of medicine which we did not know to be good—particularly for infants. But of Mrs Winslow's Soothing Syrup we can speak from knowledge; in our own family it has proved a blessing indeed, by giving an infant troubled with colic pains quiet sleep, and its parents unbroken rest at night. Most parents can appreciate these blessings. Here is an article which works to perfection, and which is harmless; for the sleep which it affords the infant is perfectly natural, and the little cherub awakes a "bright as a button." And during the process of teething its value is incalculable. We have frequently heard mothers say they would not be without it from the birth of the child till it had finished with the teething siege, on any consideration whatever.

Sold by all druggists. 25 cents a bottle.

DR. VICTOR BAUD'S ORGANIC MEDICINE.

DR V. BAUD, Graduate and Member of the Medical College of Paris, Chief Physician Extraordinary for Epidemics in Paris, late M.D. of the Civil Hospitals of Algiers, has just introduced in England his ORGANIC MEDICINES.

They consist of three preparations—

THE BAUDEINE,

An efficient and prompt Remedy for Cholera, Yellow Fever, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, and the excessive action of the Bowels. A gold medal was awarded by the French Government to Dr V. Baud for this valuable preparation.

Price: Small, 1s 1½d; Medium, 4s 5d; Large Size, 11s per Bottle.

THE DIASTATIZED IRON,

For strengthening the System.—Price 2s 9d per Bottle.

THE DIASTATIZED IODINE,

For purifying the Blood.—Price 2s 9d per Bottle.

☞ The above Preparations are in the form of Sweetmeats, pleasant to the taste, and particularly adapted for Infants and Mothers nursing.

By the combination of the Iron or Iodine with Cress Seeds in a state of germination, they are united with organic life, which thus renders them digestible. The irritative and stubborn mineral has thus become the nucleus of an organic substance capable of being absorbed by the blood without injury to the stomach.

Agent for England and British Possessions, R. G. DUPRESNE, 76 Watling Street.

May be obtained of all Chemists.
