RECOVERY OF STOLEN DIAMONDS.

A lady of fashion in New York recently lost a quantity of valuable diamonds from her bureau. She advertised, offering a reward of $5,000 with immunity from arrest. On the next morning a note was slipped under the door, from an unknown hand of course, offering at four the next afternoon to restore the diamonds to the woman and her husband, no other persons to witness the transaction. The couple sent for Mr Tiffany's head setter of diamonds to inspect the stones, lest they should prove imitations. The hour passed, and the whole evening, but no jewels appeared. The next morning another note was slid under the door, saying that it was useless to have spectators concealed in the back parlour, as she had on the previous day, or to send for a judge of diamonds; the writer was a gentleman, and would return the real diamonds. He next appointed a place of meeting on a vacant lot near the Central Park, where he would receive the reward at the hands of a single person, and deliver the stones. Further, the money must contain no marked bills, and no large ones, which would excite remark when changed. If she chose to comply with these terms, she should have her diamonds, otherwise she would never see them again, as New York was becoming too hot for the writer, and he meant to leave. A serving man went to the spot to receive the package of stones; he was met by a gentlemanly person, whose face was concealed, and the bargain was made. The jewels were all right. The robber said that he slipped into the basement after a grocer's boy, at dusk, and hid himself until the family were at dinner, when he went up to the dressing room and stole the diamonds.

PROCLAMATION OF THE PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT TO THE SPANISH NATION.

The Madrid Gazette publishes a proclamation, addressed by the provisional government to the Spanish nation, of which the following is an abridgement:—

Liberal governments, of whom public opinion is the supreme judge, have to address themselves to public opinion.

The provisional government has acted thus on several occasions. Again it will do so, an outbreak of crime having aroused all the generous sentiments and revealed the kind of weapons which the enemies of liberty and order set in action that merely the shadow of liberty should be sustained.

The assassination of the Governor of Burgos, horrible by reason of its accomplishment, and sacrilegious on account of the solemn occasion and the holy place where it was committed, will be an indelible stain upon the Spanish nation.

The government has seen and observed, but not unheedingly, a development of a conspiracy formidable not on account of the number or valour of its authors, but by its object to rekindle religious fanaticism and to stir up a fratricidal war.

The crime of Burgos will receive a prompt chastisement, let the authors thereof, or those who have been accomplices in it, be whom they may.

In the midst of the troubles arising after a revolution so radical as that of Spain, the government has never ceased to uphold all the rights of the citizens. The liberties of meeting, of association, of the press, of public education and of universal suffrage will form the most complete code of which Spain may well be proud among the nations of Europe. Religious liberty, which will hereafter be adopted by all the nations of the world, and, far from weakening the faith of the immense majority of Spaniards, will rather tend to strengthen it, is in reality re-established.

The only point which has not been absolutely settled is the complicated question of the relations which shall exist between Church and State. That point it is thought best to reserve for the decision of the Constituent Cortes.

FRANCISCO SERRANO.

And the other members of the provisional government.

Madrid, Jan. 28, 1869.

Thos. Hughes, M.P. (Tom Brown), it is said, will be appointed Chief of the London Police in the place of Sir Richard Mayne, deceased.

John Davis was shot by the Arkansas militiamen at Mound City, Arkansas, on Saturday, and died on Monday. The murderer was tried by court-martial on Tuesday, and condemned to be shot on Wednesday.

One Douglass, alias Franklin, under arrest for stealing, while being taken from Fort Russel to Camp Carling, near Cheyenne, was hanged by the Vigilance Committee, who overpowered the guard.

Lewis Collins was shot dead at Hamrick's Station, on the Terre Haute Railroad on Thursday. Collins had killed a man about a year ago, whose brother has now killed him.

It is said that the heavy storms we have had of late have done a great deal of damage to the fruit trees in all parts of the country. In Niagara district the trees have been much injured.

The Star says the residence of Hon. John Rose, Montreal, has been taken for the occupation of His Royal Highness, Prince Arthur, during his approaching sojourn in that city.

There is no clearer indication of the progress of luxury in this city than the high wages paid to women cooks in private families. Time was when this class of domestics received about the same wages as chambermaids and waitresses, but now, while the latter get but $10 to $12 per month, the former command all the way from $15 to $40, according to their skill and experience. Indeed, no woman who has any talent for the business, and is willing to take pains to learn it thoroughly, need wait long for a place at almost her own terms. The wonder is, that, with all the complaints made by women of the difficulty of earning a livelihood, more do not embrace this method of getting one. There is no degradation in it, for next to the mistress the cook is the most important personage in the household, and, when her day's work is done, is quite as free as if she had been cooped up in a factory or waiting in a shop. Will not some of our philanthropists set up a school for teaching the art of cookery, and thus benefit both women out of employment and hungry families.—N. Y. Sun.

In a general order on the results of musketry instruction in the army for the year 1868-9, the Duke of Cambridge says that while it is gratifying to him to find that the shooting of the several corps as a whole has considerably improved, it still appears that sufficient care is not bestowed in executing the independent practice. In many instances the average is "bad," and in the majority of cases is below the standard indicating "good" firing. In the 29th and 69th Regiments, which have made the lowest averages, the time taken (1 min. 58 sec and 1 min. 49 sec. respectively) leads to the inference that the practice had been hurried ever, and that more attention had been paid to celerity than to accuracy. The results of the mounted practice in the cavalry and of the skirmishing in the infantry are, on the whole, good. The number of non-exercised men, as shown in many of the returns and in the confidential reports of general officers commanding districts, is excessive. It should never at the utmost exceed 5 per cent of the strength. The best shooting company is D company, 1st battalion 21st Fusiliers, with the hitherto unattained score of 172.56. The best shot is Sergeant C. Rogers, 62nd Regt., who made 67, 68, and 60 points in the 3rd, 2nd, and 1st classes respectively.
