TELEGRAPH.

CABLE NEWS.

Madrid, Feb. 23.—In the Constituent Cortes yesterday, Serrano, the Prime Minister, officially announced the resignation of the Provisional Government. Gen. Prim, Minister of War, in an address, told the House that the late dynasty would never re-ascend the throne.

Admiral Topete, the Minister of Marine, asked the House to pass an Act of Indemnity for the navy, for its acts during the revolution.

Subsequently, the House passed a vote of thanks to the retiring Provisional Government, although the Republican members voted it with unanimity. The House then, by a large vote, entrusted Marshal Serrano with full executive powers for the country, and granted him the authority necessary for the formation of a New Ministry.

New York Press Despatches.

TELEGRAPH POSTAL SYSTEM.

Washington, Feb. 24.—The House Committee on the Post Offices and Post Roads considered an adverse report on the bills of Messrs Washburn, Hubbard and others for the establishment of a Postal Telegraph. The Committee advert to the failure in the infancy of the invention of Morse offered it to the Government for an experimental line was established between Baltimore and Washington and operated by the Post office Department; but upon the working of this line and the question of assuming the business the Postmaster-General at the request of Congress made an adverse report, and the business thereupon remitted to the hands of the people and the legislation of the country. After the lapse of more than 20 years the subject was in 1866 brought before Congress by an application for a private charter to incorporate a Telegraph Company, and by the introduction of a bill to create a telegraph system. The opinion of Postmaster-General Dennison was again invoked in 1845, and he reported against the adoption of the proposed system of Government part of the postal system, not withstanding its doubtful financial success, and in questionable feasibility under our political system. The result was a total capitulation of a private or personal interest and the passage of a general law applying to all telegraph companies then existing or to be in future created by State authority granting the right of way over the public domain, over post roads or navigable streams, and across navigable rivers upon condition that they should accept the privilege of the use of the lines by Government officials on public business at rates to be fixed by the Postmaster-General, and also agree to sell their entire lines and property to Government at an appraisement at any time after five years. All the leading companies accepted this act and became subject to its obligations. The action so accepted created a compact between the Government and the Corporations, and the reasonable construction of that compact is that during the period which the Congress Government should do no act which would impair the value of property in which it held the suspended right of purchase. Mr. Washburn's plan is not intended to succeed for several reasons. The appropriation is entirely inadequate. The Bankers' and Brokers' Telegraph is a substantially built four wire line between Washington and New York and therefore exactly corresponds to the proposed experimental line of Mr Washburn. The President of the Company states that with the exercise of the utmost economy and diligence, and with the very large class of customers, the line cannot at existing rates be made to pay more than its operating expenses, and has not paid dividend or interest on its cost. There are already three lines between Washington and New York, and a fourth building. When Government enters the field it will encounter the opposition of not less than five and in that competition its lines must go to the wall, for however unremunerative the tariff may be, private Companies may make up their losses out of other sources which they own in other territory. With the Government must meet its deficiency out of the public purse. Two systems, one public and the other private, cannot work together with success either, or with benefit to the public. The functions of government are necessarily exclusive, and when once assumed, private citizens cannot be allowed to exercise them, but must be rigidly excluded, as was the case with private expresses which attempted to carry the mails. A part of the press is dissatisfied with the existing arrangements for the collection and transmission of news, but it is not claimed that the prices charged by the Telegraph Companies are unreasonable. On the other hand, many of the most influential journals are openly opposed to any meddling with the Telegraph by Government. The constitutional right of Congress to grant a charter to a private company to build telegraph lines within the States without their consent is very questionable.

Congress is asked in Hubbard's bill to confer on him and his associates the right of eminent domain, a right which the federal government never exercises if it possesses it even when it desires to acquire land in states for purely public purposes. An extremely objectionable feature in the proposed postal telegraph system is the right to secure priority in the transmission of messages by paying an extra price for it. The rule of all American lines is, first come, first served—any other rule would destroy the usefulness of the service, and transform it into a pandemonium of speculation.

Mr Hubbard's scheme violates a radical principle in regard to government work. Whatever service falls within the proper functions of government should be performed by it immediately, and not through intervention of private parties reaping an intermediate profit. It is a proper subject of taxation, and the whole revenue which it yields belongs to the Treasury. The Government has no occasion to build Railroads for transportation of mails, because they already exist for the much more important business of carrying freight and passengers. But the transmission of a telegram over wires is an essential element of that service to which all skill and responsibility attaches, and it cannot be done successfully except under immediate responsibility to the party sending. The report closes by saying, in a business so well established as that of the telegraph, the introduction of improved machinery may safely be left to the stimulus of competition seeking to avail itself of the latest and best instrumentalities, and whenever iron posts and air cables commend themselves to the judgment of the telegraphic managers, a new machinery will probably be found ready to make them. The obligation which would be imposed on Government by Mr Hall's bill to buy his lines at cost and interest after three years, is such as Congress ought not to sanction.

Philadelphia, Feb. 23.—The doors of the Fourth National Bank were not opened this morning, owing to the defalcation of the cashier, Mr McMullen. The suspension caused a large crowd to collect in the vicinity. McMullen is here, but refuses to give any information. The police have him in their possession. The bank has been in bad order for some time, and the event has not caused much surprise. The capital of the bank is $225,000; deposits, $500,000, and the circulation $130,000 at the last report.

St. Louis, Feb. 24.—It is thought General Sheridan will be assigned to the command of this military division when General Sherman assumes the duties of chief at Washington.

San Francisco, Feb. 24.—The large distillery owned by General Naghee at San Jose was burned to-day. Loss $100,000, including a large stock of native brandy.

Washington, Feb. 24—The Conference Committee appointed to reconcile the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the constitutional amendment discussed the subject last evening for an hour, and will meet again to-day. The general drift of the discussion was in favour of adopting the original amendment of the House which was introduced by Mr Boutwell, and it is more than probable that the committee will so report to-morrow.

The residence of General Grant, which has been purchased for General Sherman, with furniture, will be at once put in readiness for him.
