A Down Town Merchant,

having passed several sleepless nights, disturbed by the coughing and cries of a suffering child, and fearing the worst, was induced to try Mrs Winslow's Soothing Syrup, which he had seen advertised. He was convinced that Mrs Winslow's Soothing Syrup was just the article needed, procured a bottle and gave it to the child. On reaching home, and on relating his wife with what he had done, she was at first alarmed lest it should be administered to the child, as she was strongly in favour of homeopathy. The next morning, however, the child passed in suffering, and the mother without sleep. Returning home the day following, the father found the baby still worse; and while contemplating another sleepless night, his mother stepped from the room to attend to some domestic duties, and left the father with the child. During her absence he administered a dose of the Soothing Syrup to the baby, and awaiting. That night all hands slept well, and the little fellow awoke in the morning bright and happy. The mother was delighted at the sudden and wonderful change, and although at first offended at the deception practised upon her, has continued to use the Syrup, and when aching, crying babies, and restless nights have appeared. A single trial of the Syrup never fails to relieve the baby, and overcome the anxiety of the mother. 25 cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists.

Be sure and call for

"Mrs Winslow's Soothing Syrup,"

and take no other. Look for the fac-simile of "Curtis & Perkins" New York, on the outside wrapper. All others are base imitations.

Bad Boxing Horses.—A horse is said to be broken when his skin will not slip under the pressure of the hand, but sticks as if it was glued, and his condition is always dependent on a delicate state of the stomach and digestive organs. By correcting which, and giving them a healthy tone and condition, the disease or complaint will disappear. Experience has proved that the means adapted to this end is "Darley's Condition Balls and Arabian Heave Remedy.' It has been used in numerous cases with complete success, generally effecting a cure in a few days. It is the best condition medicine known, and can be given with perfect safety at all times. It does not require that the horse be kept off his work. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package.

Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

Is health worth having? If it is, protect it—it is a jewel as easily lost as virtue, and in many cases as difficult to recover. In this climate, and more particularly at this season of the year, people are very apt to take cold and suffer from sore throat, coughs, spitting of blood, and pulmonary complaints generally, which if not checked immediately lead to serious consequences. The question arises—which is the quickest and most effectual remedy? Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers have been before the public for twenty years, and have always given perfect satisfaction, and invariably effect permanent cures when taken in season. Sold by all medicine dealers and country stores generally throughout the Province at 25 cents a box.

A CASE OF TWENTY YEARS' STANDING.

Philadelphia, Penn., June 25, 1867.

H. T. Helmbold, Druggist:

Dear Sir—I have been a sufferer for upward of twenty years with gravel, bladder and kidney affections, during which time I have used various medicinal preparations, and been under the treatment of the most eminent physicians, experiencing but little relief.

Having seen your preparations extensively advertised, I consulted my family physician in regard to using your Extract Buchu. I did this because I had used all kinds of advertised remedies, and had found them worthless, and some quite injurious; in fact, I despaired of ever getting well, and determined to use no remedies hereafter unless I knew of the ingredients. It was this that prompted me to use your remedy. As you advertised that it was composed of buchu, cubebs, and juniper berries, it occurred to me and my physician as an excellent combination; and, with his advice, after an examination of the article, and consulting again with the druggist, I concluded to try it. I commenced to use it about eight months ago, at which time I was confined to my room.

From the first bottle I was astonished and gratified at the beneficial effect, and after using it three weeks was able to walk out. I felt much like writing to you a full statement of my case at the time, but thought my improvement might only be temporary; and therefore concluded to defer, and see if it would effect a perfect cure, knowing that it would be of greater value to you and more satisfactory to me.

I am now able to report that a cure is effected after using the remedy for five months.

I have not used any now for three months, and feel as well in all respects as I ever did.

Your Buchu being devoid of any unpleasant taste or odour, a nice tonic and invigorator of the system, I do not mean to be without it whenever occasion may require its use in such affections.

HOW THEY MADE FOOLS OF THEMSELVES!

'TWAS about 9 a.m. on Saturday last that two ladies entered my Store, and asked the price of my best FAMILY FLOUR. I told them in plain English. "Oh," said one, "we can get the best flour a quarter-dollar a barrel less at a little place where they have not near such a stock of flour as you seem to have." After a little further conversation they left. Ah! but little further conversation they left. Ah! but how disappointed they returned about the same hour this morning, and told me how they made fools of themselves. Of course I was aware of it.

EXTRAORDINARY ACTION BY A SISTER OF MERCY.

SAURIN V. STARR AND ANOTHER.—SECOND DAY.

Miss Saurin's examination was resumed on Thursday. She said that up to August, 1863, no charge had been brought against her except that of having written to her uncle, Father Matthews, surreptitiously, asking his influence to have her removed to another convent. It was not a rule of the order that the nuns should submit their letters to the superior before writing home; but it was the custom nevertheless. On August 4, 1862, a letter was written to the bishop charging her with being wanting in truth, with general levity, with habitual disregard to rules in minor matters, and with unauthorized intercourse with externs. At that time she was not aware that a "chapter" or "council" of the order had been held to consider her case; nor that Mrs Starr was proposing to the bishop that she should be released from her vows. In August, 1862, she went from Clifford to Hull to enter upon the Retreat which Father Porter was to conduct at the convent. Before the Retreat commenced Mrs Starr saw her and wished that she should acknowledge having written surreptitiously to her uncle, but she would not do so. Mrs Starr then wanted her to write to her uncle to remove her, but she desired to postpone doing so until after the close of the Retreat. Subsequently she saw Father Porter, and she acknowledged to him that she had been writing to her uncle. He advised that she should also write to Mrs Starr, and she obeyed his direction. Mrs Starr told her that the bishop might wish to have an acknowledgment in writing, and accordingly she signed one drawn up by Mrs Starr. Mrs Starr then said that it would raise her greatly in the estimation of the community if she would make a public acknowledgment of her fault, and accordingly she did so upon her knees in the presence of Mrs Starr, Mrs M'Owne, and Mrs Kennedy. The next day there was to be a "public chapter for the acknowledgment of faults," but Mrs Starr discouraged the idea of her referring to the letters to her uncle, as the younger members of the community might be "disedified." Before she returned to Clifford after the Retreat closed, Mrs Starr mentioned to her that her father had been unwell, and that he desired to see her. Upon that occasion also it was enjoined upon her that once a year was sufficient to write to her friends. After her return to Clifford she was again under Mrs M'Owne. She imagined that her transgression in respect of the letter writing would now be overlooked, but it was no to be so. By Mrs Starr's directions she, a professional nun, was to be regarded as the lowest of the community. At that time, except Mrs Starr, she was the oldest member of the sisterhood attached to the convent, and nevertheless she was placed in subjection to a novice, and was appointed to do all the menial work usually allocated to the youngest novices—such as scrubbing the floors, making the beds, and cleaning out the closet. By Mrs Starr's directions also a "distribution of time" was prescribed for her—that was to say, every hour of the day had its fixed duty. This was quite unusual in the case of professional nuns. She was likewise compelled to stand in the schools, although she was extremely delicate. It was known to Mrs Starr that mutton was extremely distasteful to her; nevertheless, it was almost her continual diet at this time, although there was other meat in the convent. She had an interview with the bishop in the month of December, and complained to him of the treatment she was subjected to, but still there was no improvement. Shortly afterwards her mother came to see her, but she did not communicate her troubles to her, as it would have been contrary to rules to have disclosed what was going on in the convent. Subsequently to that she discovered that letters written to her by her Jesuit brother had been withheld from her by Mrs Starr. She went to a particular drawer by Mrs Starr's directions to look for something, and there she saw a parcel of her brother's letters. After that a watch that her father had given her on the occasion of her profession was taken from her under the pretence that it was required for the purposes of a lottery that was going to be held. However, it was returned to her just before she left the convent. She found it one morning on her plate. Miss Saurin then described the treatment she had met with from the superiors of the convent on the occasion of the death of her brother Thomas—how she was kept in ignorance as to his condition, and debarred from opportunities of giving expression to her grief when his death was announced to her. Further details as to her treatment during her residence at Clifford were subsequently given. The case was again adjourned.

THIRD DAY.

On Friday the direct examination of the plaintiff was resumed. She said before the close of 1865 all her prayer-books were removed from her stall in the chapel, as well as her manuscript book, which contained her private devotions. There were flyleaves in the manuscript book, and these were all taken out. When she received letters from her friends she was only allowed a couple of minutes to peruse them, and they were then taken from her, and either kept by Mrs Starr or torn up. Sometimes they were in great part obliterated when handed to her—one especially which she received from her father.—To the Chief Justice: According to the rules of the order no limit was placed upon the receipt of letters.—Examination resumed: One evening, at the close of May, 1865, after she had come home from the schools, she was ordered up to Mrs Starr's room. Mrs Kennedy was present, and when she entered the door was locked. Mrs Starr said she was to take off her clothes: she hesitated to do so until she remembered that she was bound to do everything that her superior ordered. As each article was taken off she paused, but Mrs Starr hurried her on and examined each article. When she had loosened her pocket Mrs Starr pulled it very roughly from her. As she was crying, she asked to have her pocket-handkerchief returned to her, and Mrs Kennedy was ordered to return it. Her clothes were entirely removed, and after she had put them on again she was ordered out of the room. In her pocket there was a book in which were some notes relative to her confession. She never got her pocket back again. On the last Saturday of December in the same year she was ordered by Mrs Starr into a small room off the community room. Another of the sisters was called in also. Mrs Starr told her that she wanted to see her stays off, and she ordered her to undress.
