CLASSIC RITES IN HONOUR OF MERCURY.

The Rev. Samuel Osgood, D.D., states, in this week's Liberal Christian, that at the recent exercises in honour of the Roman god Mercury in the Fifth avenue, the pageant was both rich and rare. As the reverend divine entered the apartments set apart for the rites of the evening, a young usher, robed in some style which the Rev. Dr. Osgood does not mention, asked him to "dip his hand in a vase of water, and to be crowned with a wreath of flowers, and to wear a golden lamp upon the breast. Such was the order of the evening, and the rooms were nearly full of guests thus adorned. There were generals, admirals, poets, editors, lawyers, merchants, divines, all in that strange rig." The rites consisted in "the singing procession of priests, the lustration, sacrifice, unveiling of the statue, speeches, poems, banquet, libations, sentiments, recitations, &c. "Two of our preachers," adds Dr. Osgood, "were there, and both spoke a good word for Mercury;" but it must have seemed curious to them, we should say, to stand up there, on Shrove Tuesday, with a singing procession of heathen priests, all in that strange rig, and, amid libations and lustrations, to preach in favour of a pagan divinity whose mythological merits were cunning and thievery! We wonder how they felt the next day, as they appeared once more in their own Christian churches, to commence with the solemn services of Ash Wednesday the penitential observances of Lent.

Some of our readers may remember a story, much in vogue a few years ago, of an English scholar who had quite gone over to the antique paganism, and who offered sacrifices to Jupiter at his own house in some part of London. He was assisted by his beautiful daughter, who was as devout a classicist as himself, and appeared, like him, before the altar, clad in priestly robes, pouring libations and offering worship to the god. She even lent her help on one occasion in the sacrifice of a white bullock with a grace and elegance that could scarcely have been surpassed by either of the Mercurial preachers spoken of by Dr. Osgood. At the time this English tale appeared it was believed to possess some foundation in fact; but the author afterwards confessed that it was pure fiction. The narrative of Dr. Osgood seems almost as incredible; but we believe that the occurrence which he recounts really took place in this city, and that none of its features are exaggerated in his narrative.—New York Sun.

It seems that a veritable black diamond was found by a Federal soldier, back of Atlanta, Georgia. It is seven-eighths of an inch long, two and a half in circumference, weighs two ounces, and is worth several thousand dollars.

Robert Simson, the Scottish mathematician, was noted for his absent-mindedness. He used to sit at his open window on the ground floor, deep in geometry, and when accosted by a beggar, would rouse himself, hear a few words of the story, make his donation, and dive. Some wags one day stopped a mendicant on his way to the window with "Now, do as we tell you and you'll get something from that gentleman and a shilling from us besides. He will ask you who you are, and you will say Robert Simson, son of John Simson of Kirkstonhill." The man did as he was told; Simson gave him a coin and dropped off. He soon roused himself and said, "Robert Simson! son of John Simson of Kirkstonhill! why, that is myself! that man must be an impostor!"

President Johnson made a funny speech the other day to a party of copper smelters from Baltimore. "To me," said he, "civil honours are far more agreeable than the incense that ascends to heaven from fields of carnage. I would to-day rather wear on my face the furrows of care and responsibility marked by arduous service in the paths of peace, than wear the glittering epaulets on my shoulders, or the ringing sword hanging by my side, as the insignia of ruthless war."

The exposures which have been made during the great nunnery trial, which is not yet completed, will probably do more to damage the social influence of the Roman Catholic Church than all the lectures, sermons and writings of half a dozen Dr. Cummings. I may add that Miss Saurin has thoroughly impressed those who have narrowly watched her in the Court of Queen's Bench with a belief in her truthfulness and sincerity. She is now about 36 or 37 years of age, but retains traces of considerable personal beauty. She is evidently a most intelligent woman; and the wonder is how she could have submitted to be bound hand and foot to priestcraft. The Roman Catholic hierarchy had better have paid many more thousands of pounds than this trial will cost them rather than have allowed the case to go into Court.

The Golos of St. Petersburg has the following: "We are informed that, on the proposition of the Minister of Public Works, the Emperor has accorded to MM. Koui, Lazareff and Miller the necessary authorization to proceed with the levelling and other works required for a railway between the Caspian Sea and Lake Aral. This Imperial decision has been communicated to the Governors of Orenburg and Turkestan. The projecting line, in uniting two of the largest rivers, the Volga and the Sir Daria (Jaxartes), will serve as a bond of union between Russia and Central Asia from a commercial, strategical, and political point of view.

The Pungolo of Milan details a calamity which occurred a few days back during a ball at the Prefecture of Binasco, which now occupies the historical castle in which the unfortunate Beatrice di Tenda was formerly tortured and put to death by her jealous husband, Duke Filippo Visconti. A temporary gallery in which the musicians were placed caught fire, and as the ladder by which they had gained access to it was removed, some jumped out and were injured on falling on each other, while those who remained were more or less severely burnt before they could be rescued. Of 20 in all, 16 had to be removed to an hospital; one has since died, and others are in a critical state. The flames were extinguished without doing any serious damage to the building.

A singular chase was witnessed in Paris on Tuesday. A young roebuck, exhibited alive in a sort of cage at the door of a restaurant in the Faubourg St. Martin, to attract customers, escaped and started off at a full speed along the Boulevard de Magenta, followed by a crowd of men, boys, and dogs; their shouts only terrified the poor animal, which rushed madly on down the Faubourg St. Denis, under the triumphal arch, and across the old boulevard to the Rue de Caire, where it was stopped by two sergeants-de-ville, who restored it to its owner; but before reaching this point the hunt had been joined by more than a thousand persons, who evidently thought the exciting sport too promptly terminated.

In Buffalo, on Tuesday afternoon, Mrs Esther Baetzhold met with a shocking accident which may terminate in death. It seems that her husband, who is a dealer in various liquid decoctions, had placed upon the stove, in a tin pail filled with water, a two-gallon jug containing a quantity of high wines, with orange peelings, spices and other ingredients, where the same were left to the action of the heat. The water becoming very hot, the cork flew out of the jug, with a loud report, the liquid following it freely and dropping all over the room, and bespattering the woman's dress. Her proximity to the stove caused her dress to ignite, and soon she was wrapped in flames. In the excitement she ran out upon the sidewalk, whither Mr Baetzhold followed her, and by means of a blanket and the free use of snow the flames were finally extinguished. Even while her husband, aided by others who had been drawn to the spot, was engaged in subduing the flames which enwrapt her suffering body, she begged them to see to her children before attending to her, she supposing the house to be on fire. She was heroically the mother, and preferred to have her little ones saved, and she left in anguish, rather than be relieved of her sufferings at the risk of their lives. After her garments of fire had been rendered harmless, she made a terrible effort, and walked to her children, when to her great joy she found them uninjured, the fire in the room having been suppressed before any serious damage had been done. She was found to be terribly burned about the body and limbs, and but feeble hopes are entertained of her recovery.

Count d'Espeleta, Grand Master of Queen Isabella's household, has written to the journals to state that the document published by them as "A Manifesto of the Queen of Spain" is apocryphal.

General Peel has expressed a wish that the £900 subscribed by his friends and neighbours in Huntingdon for a testimonial to him should be handed over to the County Hospital.

It is said there was, a few years ago, a signboard in front of a house in Buffalo which read as follows: "Stages start from this house for China, Sardinia, Holland, Hamburg, Sweden, Java, Cuba, Havre, Italy and Penn Yan."

Mr Charles Bell, the newly-elected Conservative member of the City of London, died on Tuesday night at his residence, Terrace House, Richmond. The deceased gentleman was in the 65th year of his age. The cause of death was an affection of the lungs, broughton by an attack of cold.

The return of Metropolitan Pauperism just issued shows that on the late day of the fifth week of January, 1869, the total number of paupers (exclusive of lunatics in asylums and vagrants) in the unions and single parishes of London was 154,067, as against 165,746 on the corresponding day of 1867.

At a conference held at the Mansion house on Wednesday, the Lord Mayor in the chair, it was resolved that a subscription should be commenced, with a view of promoting emigration as the most efficient means of alleviating the distress in the East of London.

A short time ago the tobacco factory of Messrs J. D. Lewis & Co., Nelson street, Toronto, was seized by the revenue officers for alleged infraction of the laws by the proprietors. The entire premises were taken possession of, together with a large stock of tobacco in raw state and manufactured, and from that time to this the authorities have held possession. They have examined the books, inquired into the workings of the establishment, and investigated all the circumstances, and are now convinced that for a length of time the proprietors have been 'doing' the Government regularly out of large amounts of revenue.

A strange incident occurred at a wedding of a Spanish lady of high rank in Paris on Saturday last. A Bourbon prince and his young wife attended the religious rite. There was an immense crowd congregated around the porch. As the carriage of the bridegroom drew up beneath the open portal, a young and modestly dressed person, holding in her arms a lovely child of eight or nine months, dashed forward, and, throwing some photographs in the face of M. de —, exclaimed, "There is your child, but you are unworthy of her, and I shall bring her up without your aid." The scene which ensued can easily be conceived. The bride, already his wife — as no marriage in a French church can be solemnised until the legal part of the ceremony has been accomplished at the Mairie—was carried in a fainting state to the sacristy. Parents interfered, and friends assured her it was all a mistake, as we may charitably hope it was.

EFFECT OF ADVERTISING.—It is amusing at times to observe the stores of the merchants who don't advertise; to see the anxious proprietors looking into the streets and see the people go by, wondering why they don't come in, while the stores of their neighbours who do advertise are thronged with customers. Some people will learn by observation, others will not.—Daily Palladium.
