A Down Town Merchant,

who has passed several sleepless nights, disturbed by the groans and cries of a suffering child, and who was convinced that Mrs Winslow's Soothing Syrup was just the article needed, procured it for the child. On reaching home, and relating his wife with what he had done, she consented to have it administered to the child, as he was strongly in favour of homœopathy. That night child passed in suffering, and the parents without sleep. Returning home the day following the father found the baby still worse, and contemplating another sleepless night, he hastily stepped from the room to attend to some business duties, and left the father with the child. During her absence he administered a dose of the Soothing Syrup to the baby, and waited. That night all hands slept well, the little fellow awoke in the morning well and happy. The mother was delighted at the sudden and wonderful change, and almost felt offended at the deception practised on her, but continued to use the Syrup, and her crying babies, and restless nights have ceased. A single trial of the Syrup never fails to relieve the baby, and overcome the fears of the mother. 25 cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists.

Wait and call for

"Mrs Winslow's Soothing Syrup,"

having the fac-simile of "Curtis & Perkins" on the outside wrapper. All others are base imitations.

HIDE BOUND HORSES.—A horse is said to be hide-bound when his skin will not slip under the pressure of the hand, but sticks as if it was glued, which condition is always dependent on a deranged state of the stomach and digestive organs—by correcting which, and giving them a healthy tone and condition, the disease or complaint will disappear. Experience has proved that the means best adapted to this end is "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." It has been used in numerous cases with complete success, generally effecting a cure in a few days. It is the best condition medicine known, and may be given with perfect safety at all times and does not require that the horse be kept from work. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

Is health worth having? If it is, protect it—it is a jewel as easily lost as virtue, and in many cases as difficult to recover. In this climate, and more particularly at this season of the year, people are very apt to take cold, and suffer from sore throat, coughs, spitting of blood, and pulmonary complaints generally, which if not checked immediately lead to serious consequences. The question arises—which is the quickest and most effectual remedy? Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers have been before the public for twenty years, and have always given perfect satisfaction, and invariably effect permanent cures when taken in season. Sold by all medicine dealers and country stores generally throughout the Province at 25 cents a box.

Pocket volumes containing these Lectures, will be forwarded post-paid, on receipt of 25 cents, by addressing "SECRETARY, New York Museum of Anatomy and Science, 618 Broadway, New York."

NOTICE is hereby given that the undersigned will apply to the Judge of the Surrogate Courtof the County of Frontenac to be appointed Guardian of John B. McIver, Kenneth McIver, and Mary A. McIver, minors, children of the late William McIver.

A CASE OF TWENTY YEARS' STANDING.

Philadelphia, Penn., June 25, 1867.

H. T. Helmbold, Druggist:

Dear Sir—I have been a sufferer for upward of twenty years with gravel, bladder and kidney affections, during which time I have used various medicinal preparations, and been under the treatment of the most eminent physicians, experiencing but little relief.

Having seen your preparations extensively advertised, I consulted my family physician in regard to using your Extract Buchu. I did this because I had used all kinds of advertised remedies, and had found them worthless, and some quite injurious; in fact, I despaired of ever getting well, and determined to use no remedies hereafter unless I knew of the ingredients. It was this that prompted me to use your remedy. As you advertised that it was composed of buchu, cubebs, and juniper berries, it occurred to me and my physician as an excellent combination; and, with his advice, after an examination of the article, and consulting again with the druggist, I concluded to try it. I commenced to use it about eight months ago, at which time I was confined to my room.

From the first bottle I was astonished and gratified at the beneficial effect, and after using it three weeks was able to walk out. I felt much like writing to you a full statement of my case at the time, but thought my improvement might only be temporary; and therefore concluded to defer, and see if it would effect a perfect cure, knowing that it would be of greater value to you and more satisfactory to me.

I am now able to report that a cure is effected after using the remedy for five months.

I have not used any now for three months, and feel as well in all respects as I ever did.

Your Buchu being devoid of any unpleasant taste or odour, a nice tonic and invigorator of the system, I do not mean to be without it whenever occasion may require its use in such affections.

EFFECT OF ADVERTISING.—It is amusing at times to observe the stores of the merchants who don't advertise; to see the anxious proprietors looking into the streets and see the people go by, wondering why they don't come in, while the stores of their neighbours who do advertise are thronged with customers. Some people will learn by observation, others will not.—Daily Palladium.

convent where she had a right to live, and out of any order to which she had a right to belong, she will succeed. The conspiracy and libel are the main issues between us. Now I maintain that the count for libel has been substantially proved. The plaintiff has had to draw her evidence from inside the walls of a convent, from nuns who are strained strictly to the rules and to obey the will of the superior, and see things so far as they can with their eyes, judge with their judgment, and act upon them according to her directions. This so-called scandal they all endeavoured to prevent, and they tried all they could to defeat it. They not merely give up their freedom of action when they enter this establishment, but they in fact act under a despotism. I now come to the most important part of the evidence, viz, the monthly statements of conscience. I am told my learned friend Mr Mellish said nothing about them, and perhaps that was the best thing he could do, for when you read the letters, and regard the facts in connection with them, and the way in which they have been dealt with, I feel you will be of opinion they are most material, and substantially confirm the plaintiff's statement. It may be these monthly statements are ill-spelt, and I should have thought comments on the ill-spelling and want of education by ladies who were always taking sacred and charitable names in their mouths might have been spared. Why were these letters kept after others had been destroyed but because they were thought to tell in favour of the defendant and against the plaintiff? Mrs Starr destroyed a great many letters, she said, she thought might be useful, and as she kept these and no other nun's letters, I suppose she kept them for a purpose; and I don't think I am guilty of great want of charity when I suppose it was that they might prove unfavourable to the plaintiff. If these are genuine letters I contend they prove my case, because they are the letters of a broken-down, unhappy, very much persecuted, scared, and, to use an old word, dispared woman. There was not a word said against their spelling before this trial. These letters were the production of a humiliated, broken-hearted woman, but if the defendants doubted their genuineness, where, I ask, is the evidence of her hypocrisy? Things for which slight penances were imposed on others, or for which sweet and godly admonition was administered according to the rules, was not adopted towards the plaintiff, and can you wonder that Miss Saurin came to the conclusion that a different rule was exercised towards her than towards the other sisters?—and though the superior might not have exercised her powers, can you doubt she exercised them with more severity towards Miss Saurin than the others? There, again, was the case of the duster; and can it be possible that these things are pleasing to God, and that spiritual Christianity can be advanced by such rubbish? Nothing could be more humiliating and abominable than the so called stripping. Not a crumb was found; and I put it to your common sense, from the recollection of your schoolboy days, would not crumbs be found if she had taken the child's food? And can you doubt that Mrs Starr would have discovered the minutest crumb the human eye ever discovered at the bottom of the largest pocket, if such a thing had been there? The pictures and papers taken from her were taken simply for the purpose of annoying her, and submitting her to humiliations which there was no pretence for inflicting on her. Mrs Starr's conduct in this respect was that of insolent contempt towards this young girl. The excuse was that they were taken away because Miss Saurin should not write on them. There was the relic cross and a piece of the true cross, but surely she could not write on them. I may have doubts as to the wood of the true cross; but assuming it to be so, I hope I have sufficient Christianity to say I should view it with reverence. If she thought it was so to take it from her, and never restore it, and give a general answer why it was taken, is strong proof of how she was treated. I now come to the brother's letter. That it is a strange letter no one can deny, and I should like to have Father Saurin here to explain it. We did our best to produce him, but were unable to do so. He is a Jesuit, and I have every desire to speak of that great body with respect; but, nevertheless, we know that the discipline of that body is proverbial, and it is exceedingly hard on Miss Saurin to have this heated letter from her brother hurled at her head without preparation, and asked by the Lord Chief Justice for an explanation upon the supposition that she had been a party to the concoction of a heated, exaggerated and probably untrue letter.—The Lord Chief Justice: You are quite wrong. I desired to know if it was the spontaneous production of her brother, or if she had said anything to him that could authorise the writing of such a letter. Either she endeavoured to impose upon her brother, or he tried to impose upon the bishop. From one of these two alternatives there is no escape.—The Solicitor-General: I can see a third course, and a perfectly consistent one. Father Saurin is an Irishman: he saw her in what he considers a humiliating position. He is also a foreign Irishman, having resided at Bordeaux, and no doubt he has greatly exaggerated his sister's story under a heated and excited imagination. All that the bishop did after his letter requesting the brother to remove his sister was a farce, because he had sent to Rome for faculties. Hardly anything more monstrous was to be supposed than that, unseen and unheard, the bishop should have proceeded to execute judgment against her. No one had shown Mrs Starr's right or authority to take Miss Saurin's ring, and her doing it was a deliberate, simple, indefensible feeling of hostility to annoy her, and was clearly unjustifiable. And does she not cast a light over many things in this Mrs Starr when she says that she did? Do you believe that it would be felt by the plaintiff, as a most grievous indignation, her Saurin's appeal to this mystical sign? Mr to the Pope was the Archbishop and Sydney Smith said absurd. It was like a delinquent curate in reference to a bench of bishops—very like an appeal of a delinquent frog an appeal to the Zoological Society of London.—The Solicitor-General had not concluded when the Court rose.
