PROTESTANT DECLARATION.

Many thousands of English and Irish have attached their names to an Protestant declaration, in which they solemnly protest against the spoliation of the Church. The Protesters declare that the Church of England, as established in England, as an integral part of the Establishment of Great Britain, and acknowledged in all foreign jurisdiction, ecclesiastical as well as civil; that the right of the Established Church in Ireland to tithes and glebe lands has been recognised and confirmed by acts of Parliament, and was finally confirmed by the act of settlement at the restoration of King Charles II., besides being evinced by charters and patents from the Crown on record, which having gone with the title for some three hundred years. In reference to Anglican Dominion it is affirmed that in the seventeenth century large numbers of Scots, mostly Presbyterians, settled in Ulster in consequence of loyal services rendered by them to the Crown, and to the cause of civil and religious liberty, as a reward for their sufferings and losses, which payment called the Regium Donum was secured to them out of the Customs duties for the purpose of maintaining a Presbyterian ministry in Ireland, by means of which Mr Gladstone is about to deprive them was secured and placed on more permanent footing by several Acts of Parliament. The Protesters state that the Act of Union passed in the reign of Queen Anne expressly guaranteed the security of the Established Church in Ireland, was further confirmed by the Emancipation Act, passed in 1829, and enjoined the state and sequester the property and revenue so secured and guaranteed, is not only be a direct violation of all faith for the possession of property, but tends to shake, to their very foundations, all titles to land in Ireland, and to create strife and animosity instead of promoting peace and good will.

LION AND AN ELEPHANT AT LARGE.

[illegible] Miss., March 24.—Several days past immense posters were pasted on the walls in town, announcing that Reynolds' great Mexican Gymnasium and Menagerie would exhibit in Forest on that day. Early in the morning all the roads leading into the town were thronged with people, on all horses, and colours, and by 10 o'clock the whole town was alive with visitors awaiting the arrival of the menagerie. At 12 the brass band announced the arrival of the show, and by 12 the canvas was pitched, and the cages of the animals arranged.

Among the elephant Hercules—the largest ever imported into this country—was chained to a stake; and, by way of caution to those entering the canvas, John Alston, his keeper, stated that he had for several days manifested a disposition of insubordination, and urged that no one would approach too near to receive a blow from his trunk. Mark Kite, from the northern part of this country, coming in after Mr Alston, thoughtlessly handed a plug of tobacco, which so enraged the elephant that he struck at him with such violence as to dislocate his shoulder, although not dislocating blow. He plunged with fury that he broke his chain, and, though his keeper used every effort to quiet him, he was entirely uncontrollable, and would strike and kick at every object near him. By this time the scene was beyond description. The vast crowd flew in all directions. He flew at his keeper and pursued him under the canvas.

A 10 o'clock freight train being behind time, and not having any freight for Forest, the engineer not intending to stop, was running along at the rate of twenty miles an hour. When it had approached within 300 yards he looked up the road and seemed doubly enraged. He immediately ran toward it with great speed and struck with such a shock that he broke one of the drivers and was immediately killed. The engine was detached from the train and thrown from the track, and Mr Wharton, the engineer, having failed to shut off the steam, unfortunately ran into the canvas and attacked the lion's cage, killing the lion and releasing the lion. The lion found himself uninjured and at liberty, and being frightened by the steam and noise of the engine, started at full speed down Homewood road, roaring terrifically. He had gone but a short distance when he met Mr George W. Sheppard and his son. Mr Sheppard finding that he was gaining on him rapidly, and that he would certainly be overtaken, attempted to cut a sapling. He struck at him with an axe as he ascended, but fortunately did no other damage than to tear off his hat and carry away a part of his coat.

Colonel Smith, of Raleigh, who was on his way to Forest, riding his fine pacing mare, with his little son behind him, met about two miles from here. As soon as his horse saw him he neighed, when the lion ran at him, seized him by the throat and threw him to the ground. Mr Smith and his little son escaped to the woods and made their way to Forest on foot.

The lion was devouring Mr Smith's horse, when James J. Ritch, who was on his way to town with a load of chickens, drove up. The lion, when he saw him he reared on his hind feet, lashed the ground with his tail, and sprang at him. Mr Ritch eluded him by jumping from his waggon, when he turned and began to tear open the boxes and eat the chickens and turned them loose. He then seemed to lose sight of Ritch in his efforts to catch them.

When the excitement in town abated, twenty mounted men, well armed, and accompanied with all the dogs belonging to the menagerie as well as many that had followed their owners. Mr Reynolds, the owner of the lion, begged them not to kill the lion, and sent several men with the crowd with instructions to capture him if possible, for he feared the citizens will kill him as soon as they overtake him.

It is reported that he killed a freedman in this county, near Mr Thomas Hussey's, and that when last heard from he was coming down Ocoba. The news that a lion is at large spreads like wild fire, and the citizens are greatly excited.

A boy advertised for adoption in London received by 270 applicants, all of whom sent back with a pledge of good faith.

A NEW PAPER MAKING MATERIAL.

The Chickasabogue Manufacturing Company in Alabama is about to make experiments in a new and very important use of okra plant. It is considered certain that the okra can be bleached to any required degree of whiteness; that the cost of reducing it to "half-stuff" and pulp will not, on a considerable scale, be greater than the cost of converting rags into pulp. The paper itself (says a Mobile paper) is as soft as rag paper, and almost as strong as that made from pure linen—thus combining in one material a great desideratum in paper making—flexibility and strength. The paper made of cotton rags requires an admixture of hemp and other material of strong fibre to give it the requisite strength, but the okra may be used either as "chard stock," to give strength to any other material, or by itself alone. It will work well in combination in any desired proportion with any other stock, or it may be made to alternate with rags, as the circumstances or exigencies of a mill may at any time demand.

The point yet to be demonstrated is the cost of okra stalks in comparison with that of other paper stock. This, of course, cannot be fully determined without further experiment. It may be taken for granted, however, that okra can be grown on a large scale very cheaply, and that it can be made to pay a handsome profit to the producer, and yet be sold to the manufacturer at a price so low as to enable him to reduce the cost of the manufactured article to consumers and "take the market," even from the manufacturers of straw and wood papers. The okra plant is indigenous to the South, and with a soil moderately fertile will grow luxuriantly. The fruit is a valuable and increasingly popular article of diet, and, if produced in too large quantities for the table, it will be found an excellent article of food for cattle and hogs. The seed is valuable, and will at all times command a ready sale at good prices. It is estimated that the seed product will be ample to pay the entire expense of cultivating the plant. The Chickasabogue Mills will begin using the material as soon as a sufficient supply of it can be obtained.

Proceedings have been commenced against Mr James Fisk, jr., by the Union Pacific Railroad Company, for the recovery of $1,000,000 damages, for trespass and breaking open of the safe in their office.

A few nights ago, Marion Hall, a worthy citizen of Gibson county, Tenn., hearing a disturbance among his chickens, arose from his bed, took his pistol, cocked it, and started out of the house, but stumbled over a chair, accidentally discharging the pistol, the contents of which took effect in his wife's head, killing her instantly. Mr Hall is now a raving maniac.

Mr Frederick Hanlon offers to race any velocipedist of the United States for a thousand dollars a side and the championship. The race to take place in New York or Brooklyn, half mile heats, best two out of three. The time between the heats to be ten minutes. The party accepting the challenge to choose his own velocipede, the fore wheel of which shall not exceed 37 inches, except it be a Demarest, in which case the fore wheel shall not exceed 41 inches.

In 1859, Remy, a farmer, was married, and their happiness duly crowned with a son. In 1864, another olive branch appeared, which the father wished not to live. One days the child's tongue was found bleeding profusely and the wound filled with snuff. The child died—the mother "kept all these things and pondered them in her heart," not forgetting to hear her son remind a playmate, that "if he was bold, his father would cut his tongue, as he did to his brother's." In time another baby appeared and the mother never left it a minute alone; while sleeping with it one day, she heard an agonizing scream; the infant's mouth was full of blood. But the father had escaped unperceived. On another occasion, while momentarily absent in the kitchen, she heard the same scream, rushed into the room, and caught her husband cutting the poor innocent's tongue with a scissors, coolly adding, that he was opening an abscess. It was too much; the wife denounced the unnatural father to the police, and the Tribunal at Reom has sentenced the brute to transportation for life.

A curious case of disappointed love and attempted suicide occurred recently in New Jersey. A florist, named Bondbrook, became deeply enamoured of a fair young blossom named Poynton, the niece of a gentleman whose garden the hapless swain was in the habit of cultivating. All his time was spent in making up bouquets for the lady, and the language of flowers and the language of eyes soon revealed the secret which his lips dared not utter. Waxing bolder by degrees Bondbrook made an offer to the object of his admiration, and was accepted. For a short time Fortune favoured the lovers; but, after a few weeks has passed Poynton discovered what was going on, the gardener was ignominiously driven out of his Eden, and the lady was taken to Montreal. Bondbrook ascertained her whereabouts, followed her to Montreal, and the acquaintance was renewed. But again the secret was discovered, and once more the lady was taken away. Unable to find her, the unhappy gardener at length retired to his home in New Jersey, and, becoming desperate, gave himself up to dissipation. The result was that "delirium tremens" at length ensued, and, on Thursday last, he threw himself into the canal. He was fortunately rescued before life was extinct.

The New York World points out that a change of administration ought not to "break the continuity of diplomatic action," and that when Mr Reverdy Johnson was sent to England with instructions to ask the Imperial Government whether it would assent to a certain mode of settlement, to which it has assented, and when he, still acting under explicit instructions from Mr Seward, promised the agreement of the United States Government to every stipulation which the treaty contains, there ought certainly to be a very clear case of inexpediency made out, before the Senate can rightly refuse to ratify a treaty to which a foreign government has been asked to agree, and to which it has agreed in consequence of the friendly representations made by the accredited envoy of the United States Government. The World says:—"From all the private advices that we have seen, we are satisfied that the feeling is general in England that if America does not choose to ratify this treaty, England is well out of the difficulty. It was a mode of settlement which our government itself proposed; it obtained the assent of two successive ministries. Private letters received here within a week declare that the feeling in England is almost universal that, if we are not disposed to meet them half way now that they have advanced half way at our solicitation, there is nothing more to be done."

VERY NATURAL.—When a person has proved an article and found it good, and answering the purpose for which it is intended, he will not readily abandon it for one of doubtful reputation, or concerning which he knows nothing. We are led to make these remarks owing to the course always pursued by those who have used that celebrated and truly valuable horse medicine known as "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." All are so well pleased with it that they will not use any other; many have waited several weeks until the agent could obtain a new supply. There is nothing equal to it as a condition medicine, or for any complaint affecting the wind of horses. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

TWO QUESTIONS EASILY ANSWERED.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance. Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c, they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all medicine dealers at 25 cts per box.

TWO TABLESPOONFULS of the Extract of Sarsaparilla, added to a pint of water, is equal to the Lisbon Diet Drink, and one bottle is equal to a gallon of the Syrup of Sarsaparilla, or the decoctions as usually made.

AN INTERESTING LETTER is published in the Medico-Chirurgical Review, on the subject of the Extract of Sarsaparilla in certain affections by Benjamin Travers, F.R.S., &c. Speaking of those diseases, and diseases arising from the excess of mercury, he states that no remedy is equal to the Extract of Sarsaparilla; its power is extraordinary, more so than any other drug I am acquainted with. It is, in the strictest sense, a tonic, with this invaluable attribute, that it is applicable to a state of the system so sunken, and yet so irritable, as renders other substances of the tonic class unavailable or injurious.

EFFECT OF ADVERTISING.—It is amusing at times to observe the stores of the merchants who don't advertise; to see the anxious proprietors looking into the streets and see the people go by, wondering why they don't come in, while the stores of their neighbours who do advertise are thronged with customers.
