THE NEW YORK TIMES ON THE ALABAMA CLAIMS.

Of all the absurd projects that are afloat none is more absurd than that which points to the surrender of the Canadian Provinces to the American government in settlement of the Alabama claims. The Tribune has the credit of being its inventor, and down to this time its chief advocate. Somebody in Washington, however, has so far adopted it as to give it the broadest, through the Associated Press, the following despatch, which we recognize as a sample of the folly, falsehood, and ignorance in which the device originated:

"The project of Canadian annexation in settlement of the Alabama claims, with the consent of England and the colonists, begins to attract attention in governmental and diplomatic circles, and is by some regarded as likely to become a prominent feature of President Grant's administration. The views expressed on this subject by most of the American press, the favourable response of the English newspapers, and the demand for annexation among the people, especially in Nova Scotia, have engendered a belief in the feasibility of the plan, if managed with diplomatic tact and careful regard to English honour. Obstacles to the possibility of its accomplishment and doubts as to the policy and safety of such an enlargement of the Republic, are strongly urged by individuals; but it is confidently asserted by others that public opinion is gradually setting in favour of our acquisition of the Canadas, should they be followed by Great Britain, as the surest means of harmonizing the interests and ending the jealousies between the two countries, and affording the basis of a permanent and cordial peace."

To these very positive statements we have to say there is not the slightest foundation in fact. Among American journals the Tribune stands almost, if not absolutely alone in support of the proposition. No English newspaper, nor one Canadian newspaper, has given it the faintest encouragement. The Canadian journals which we noticed in here done so only to scout it in the indignant terms; and we predict that the English press will do the same when the Times's statement of the case finds its way across the Atlantic.

What is proposed? That England, which has expressed a willingness to arbitrate the question of damages occasioned by the rebel cruisers, shall, without arbitration, without warning, cede to the United States its possessions on this continent, partly by way of compensation, but principally by way of atoning morally for its sins during the war, and evidencing its desire for "a permanent and cordial peace." Such a project was never before heard of. It implies nothing less than pusillanimity on the part of England, and a reversal of her whole policy, imperial and colonial. It is not her fashion to cede territory. That her government will not cede Canada and the adjacent Provinces to become an independent nationality, whether their people so desire, is more than certain. That the connection, if it continues, will be subject to some important changes, is highly probable. But that she will tender them bodily to the United States, with or without the consent of their people, in settlement of the Alabama claims, on any ground whatever, cannot for a moment be imagined by anyone familiar with her history or the character of the men who administer her affairs. The mere proposition is an insult so gross that neither the Gladstone government, nor any government that might succeed it, will even listen to it so far as to make it the subject of negotiation. To suppose the British people with a desire for war, when it is not necessary to assume that they are ready for any humiliation which may be suggested to them from this side of the water.

But what is the prospect in Canada? Is there a disposition in some quarters to favour annexation as a topic of prevalent discussion in the Provinces. No evidence of it comes before us which sustains this view. There is a considerable discontent in Nova Scotia, undoubtedly. A strong party opposes the Confederation scheme with an intensity which may ultimately lead to a demand for annexation, but as yet no organization supports the measured, which is reported in the newspapers as a possible measure rather than a preferred change. New Brunswick has its annexationists, too, but their numerical strength may be inferred from the fact that Mr Cudlip's resolution in the local legislature were not seconded, and were not even formally recorded. Prince Edward Island, again, is dissatisfied with local causes, but without mentioning annexation. As to Canada proper, the subject is rarely been the subject receives little attention from the local press. Some years ago an annexation movement had a formidable reality. Four or five years after the termination of the Reciprocity treaty revived the feeling, though in a less definite shape. Now it has no distinguishable existence. The newspapers mention it only to tell those who echo Washington opinion that they misapprehend the feeling. All the signs lead us to believe that the masses of the people in Ontario and the lower-formerly Upper and Lower Canada are averse to absorption by the United States. A proposal to transfer them in settlement of the Alabama claims would scarcely find a seconder.

We are not now discussing the annexation question on its merits. We may be as decidedly as does the Tribune, that the Province would consult their interests by breaking the connection with England and joining their fortunes to those of the United States. But we are not required to consider what is desirable in the abstract, but what may some day be inevitable. It is to deal with things as they are—to face the facts as they actually appear; and this course satisfies us that the Washington despatch is as untrue in its allegations respecting Canada as it is preposterous in its exposition of international policy.

We recommend those who sincerely desire to see a termination of British rule on this continent to leave events to run their course. To propose its termination as a means of satisfying ourselves would be to propose its continuance for an idefinite period. Time and circumstances will achieve more than the Tribune's diplomacy. The Confederation on which the Provinces have entered leads logically, and in our judgment inevitably, to independence. The colonial system cannot long endure the strain to which it is exposed. And when the British Government asks the Dominion, as well it may, to assume the burden of its own defence, prudence and poverty will suggest to loyalty the expediency of severing a connection never profitable to the parent country, and fit only for the pupilage of the colonies. They have reached a stage when independence is desirable for their own sakes, and for that step the statesmanship of the Dominion should forthwith prepare.

With the decision of the Canadians upon this subject we have meanwhile nothing to do. It is enough for our present purpose that they cling to British connection, and that the British Government, true to its traditions, will stand by them to the last. While, then, we make up our minds to push forward the Alabama question until we exact a settlement, we must at the outset discard as a delusion the notion of peacefully obtaining Canada in consideration of outraged honour or the damage inflicted on our interests.

LORD STANLEY ON EDUCATION.

Lord Stanley, who, in November last, was elected Lord Rector of Glasgow University, was installed on Thursday in the City Hall, and, in the presence of the students and a large assemblage of the general public, delivered his inaugural address. In the course of his remarks his lordship said that in affording facilities to comparatively poor men to obtain knowledge and to compete on equal terms with the wealthy, the Scotch Universities set the English a good example, and one they would do well to follow. With reference to education, he insisted on the importance of acquiring perfectly accurate habits of thought and expression. He maintained the value of classical training if rationally conducted and gone into to such an extent as to acquire familiarity with the models of ancient literature. To acquire a mere smattering of Latin and Greek he considered a sheer waste of time. In general he advocated thoroughness. The student should only take up what he had a reasonable prospect of overtaking, and master that completely. The address throughout was warmly applauded. In the evening his lordship was entertained by the Professors at a private banquet in the College hall.

THE MODEST IDEAS OF ROBT. J. WALKER.

The Washington correspondence of the Cincinnati Gazette has the following in reference to the Alabama difficulty:

Notwithstanding the surface calm here regarding this subject, there is great anxiety to learn the probable course of the new Administration regarding foreign policy, and every indication is closely watched. The general views which President Grant and Senator Sumner are believed to hold concerning the extent of England's debt on account of the ravages of her pirates are creating a deep impression in diplomatic circles. An extract from a letter written by the Hon. R J. Walker a few weeks since, is also attracting attention. It is as follows:

"My opinion is most unfavourable to the treaty for the settlement of the Alabama claims. The treaty provides for less than a fiftieth part of the damages sustained by our citizens and government. Yet, while so small a part of our claims is submitted to arbitrament, all the rest are barred by the treaty Now, all our claims must be submitted or none. This is no technical case, to be submitted on special pleas, and demurrer, but a great question between nations, to be decidedon the principle of justice and international law. If England is responsible, she is responsible for like injuries inflicted on our commerce, tonnage and revenue, the driving of our flag from the ocean, and the prolongation of the war. There are but three modes of settling these questions:

"1. By war, which, it hoped, may be avoided.

"2. By submitting all the claims, as well of our Government as citizens, to fair arbitrament.

"3. By the recognition by England of the independence of all the British North American Colonies.

"There is nothing in this last suggestion humiliating to England, and it is only what she will have to do sooner or later."

The method proposed in the paragraph numbered three is beginning to be earnestly considered by many in Congress and in executive circles.

William R. Prince, the widely known seedsman and florist, who died recently in Flushing, N. Y., claimed to carry on his horticultural labours of late years under the care of his father's spirit. The old gentleman continued in the sphere above his mundane business and sent Prince occasionally celestial seeds and bulbs, which were nurtured with a jealous exclusiveness but never grew, because, as Prince said, he could not import the atmosphere of heaven so near to New York.

Andrew and Elizabeth Walsh, accused at Pittsburg of cruelly treating a little girl, Mena Wesner, have been committed to gaol for trial, in default of $2,000 bail each. The testimony shows that the girl was most outrageously abused. She had been beaten with a poker; had it run down her throat and her teeth knocked out. On several occasions her hands and feet had been tied with thongs, and she had been thrown into a dark room and compelled to remain there for half the day. On one occasion she was hung up to a cupboard door until black in the face, and other enormities unfit to relate. These brutes in human form have six children of their own. They made no defence whatever. Public indignation against them runs very high.

All the hands on board of a freight train on one of the roads running into Toledo fell asleep the other night while waiting on a switch for a passenger train to pass. In due time the passenger train went thundering by, but the sleepers were accustomed to such sounds, and not a man was aroused by it. Morpheus had got a firm hold upon the men, and it was daylight before anyone awoke. On being aroused from their sleep, seeing that they had been on the side track about five hours, they were somewhat alarmed, but could not be certain that the passenger train had passed. After consultation they decided to start out again, and soon reached Toledo, where they related the cause of their being so much behind time. That morning ten railroad employees were discharged.

Special Notices.

VERY NATURAL.—When a person has proved an article and found it good, and answering the purpose for which it is intended, he will not readily abandon it for one of doubtful reputation, or concerning which he knows nothing. We are led to make these remarks owing to the course always pursued by those who have used that celebrated and truly valuable horse medicine known as "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." All are so well pleased with t that they will not use any other; many have waited several weeks until the agent could obtain a new supply. There is nothing equal to it as a condition medicine, or for any complaint affecting the wind of horses. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. s on each package. I have had over forty horses in constant use, in the omnibus business, and have never known it to fail in any case where I have used it. LEWIS A. PHILIPS.

Philosophy of Marriage.

A new Course of Lectures, as delivered at the New York Museum of Anatomy embracing the subjects:—How to live and what to live for; Youth, Maturity, and old Age; Manhood generally reviewed; The cause of indigestion; Flatulence and Nervous Diseases accounted for; Marriage philosophically considered, &c., &c. TWO QUESTIONS EASILY ANSWERED.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance. Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c, they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all medicine dealers at 25 cts per box.

TWO TABLESPOONFULS of the Extract of Sarsaparilla, added to a pint of water, is equal to the Lisbon Diet Drink, and one bottle is equal to a gallon of the Syrup of Sarsaparilla, or the decoctions as usually made.

AN INTERESTING LETTER is published in the Medico-Chirurgical Review, on the subject of the Extract of Sarsaparilla in certain affections by Benjamin Travers, F.R.S., &c. Speaking of those diseases, and diseases arising from the excess of mercury, he states that no remedy is equal to the Extract of Sarsaparilla; its power is extraordinary, more so than any other drug I am acquainted with. It is, in the strictest sense, a tonic, with this invaluable attribute, that it is applicable to a state of the system so sunken, and yet so irritable, as renders other substances of the tonic class unavailable or injurious.
