

Hwy. 401 truck inspection stations slated for relocation

Preliminary design study to wrap up in 2018

The Province's truck inspection stations along Hwy. 401 in Milton will soon be on the move.

According to an Ontario Ministry of Transportation (MTO) spokesperson, the commercial vehicle inspection facilities (CVIF) on the busy thoroughfare will be relocated in the coming years due to Hwy. 401 widening plans. The MTO started a class environmental assessment and preliminary design study for the relocation of the facilities last November. The study, which will help identify two new sites for the CVIFs between Hwy. 6 and Regional Road 25, is expected to conclude next year.

"Work is currently underway to develop contingency plans to preserve an enforcement presence and continue to deploy staff within the area of the current CVIFs while those stations are affected due to construction," MTO spokesperson Courtney Anderson told the Champion.

More details will become available once the study is complete.
