WEDNESDAY EVENING, APRIL 8

A FRAYFUL CONTEST WITH A FEROCIOUS ELEPHANT.

One of the most interesting, exciting, and hazardous incidents which has occurred for many a day was the recapture of a wayfaring on Saturday last of the large Asiatic elephant "Romeo," belonging to Adam Forepaugh's menagerie, on the farm of James S. Miller, in Hatboro, a small, straggling village, twelve miles from Philadelphia, upon whose premises he has been quartered during the past winter. It will be, no doubt, remembered by the majority of our readers, that this is the same elephant that killed his keeper, Mr William Williams, last December, not long after leaving his winter quarters. Being secure in his winter quarters, and in this predicament he has remained all winter, no person dreaming that he would be harmless enough, but the following season for the menagerie appeared, and his lordship's needed some other exercise, and some means, therefore, must be devised by which he can be subdued and made available for the approaching campaign. In this extremity Mr Forepaugh was obliged to secure the services of his old friend, Mr Stuart Craven, who had charge of him before he was imported to America, and for six years since that event. Mr Craven, being an experienced elephant driver, was deemed the most advisable person to take charge of the recapture of "Romeo," as he is the only person who has ever succeeded in subduing this, the largest specimen of an Asiatic elephant on this continent. To this end, Mr Craven proceeded on Saturday last, accompanied by that fearless and intrepid elephant performer, Mr James Forepaugh, Jr., accompanied also by an army of men with ropes, tackles, and chains, to bring this monarch of the Oriental jungle to the launches, who has been a kind of terror to that community ever since the unfortunate death of Mr Williams. At the sight of these men enraged the elephantine animal to such an extent that for a moment his pursuers hesitated to approach him, and apparently succumbed to the matchless power of this giant of the desert. Soon, however, preparations were made to conquer him; but "Romeo," conscious of his superior strength, became more combative, and contemptuously spurning every effort to secure and subdue him, still it was evident that some more effectual means must be resorted to in order to dislodge him from his strongholds. The chief point now to be accomplished was to hamper and entangle his legs in the massive chains with which he was confined to his stall, was to render him at mercy for the conflict. In this, Mr Craven, assisted by George Forepaugh, the renowned elephant hunter, was more than equal to the task. By an adroit movement of a noose of hemp, a large rope was looped around his hind leg, instantly tightened by the block, and by the aid of a considerable crowd of people, attracted by the news to witness the capture, he was made to realize for the sixth time in his life that "knowledge is power," and to its influence he must sooner or later succumb. After struggling, however, he made some desperate charges at his keeper, and several times came near annihilating him with his trunk. It was hard for "Romeo," however, to kick against the goads. He gradually found himself in a rack which out Heroded the darkest days of the Inquisition. In spite of himself he was finally brought down, to the no small delight of the spectators. But he was so obstinate and indomitable that he would not beg for mercy. When the elephant is subdued he usually makes a concessionaire manifest by a plaintive cry which those accustomed to the animal know and understand as well as a mother knows the cry of her child. All day Saturday was consumed, and Saturday night found him still obstinate. Sunday morning came, and still he was unwilling to work. However excruciating the torture, writhing all day Sunday in his galling chains. Monday morning came, and with it a disposition to yield to the conqueror. At 9 o'clock on Monday morning, Mr Craven had him completely under his control, and never was a whipped spaniel more docile. Something of an adequate idea of the marvellous size of this mastodon of the animal kingdom may be formed when it was discovered, on weighing him after his capture, that the scales were brought down to five tons and three hundred pounds.—Philadelphia Inquirer, April 1.

MR DISRAELI'S DEFEAT.

The defeat of the British Ministry in the House of Commons, we can imagine, came with a surprise more startling to Mr Gladstone than even to Mr Disraeli, in whose mind there seems to have been some foreboding of disaster when he moved an adjournment to the 20th April, upon the contingency of an Opposition triumph. Regarded as a dramatic catastrophe to a most remarkable political career, the sudden tumble of Disraeli from the giddy elevation of the Premiership is sufficiently striking, and recals the trite moral of all earthly ambitions. Why scorn delights and live laborious days, if the fair guerdon is to be wrested from us in the very hour of its attainment? What avails it to be Prime Minister for one revolving moon, "and then no more"? But will the Ministry resign? It is most fortunate for the discomfitted Premier that the adjournment is so timed that it will tide over the Easter recess, and that it will give Ministers the opportunity of deliberately electing between resignation, and a dissolution and appeal to the country. It may well be that, in the political changes of the last few years, the duty of resigning power upon a defeat in the House of Commons, has come to be considered less imperative than it was held in times past; but in the existing state of things, which even temperate men and non-alarmists must recognize as a crisis in English politics, there must be a change of Ministers or a general election. The grand old Tory party of England would make on the hustings a very strong fight for the ancient institutions of the land, all of which would seem to them imperilled by the overthrow of the Established Church in Ireland; and they would be strongly reinforced by the Whig aristocracy, whose vested rights in Church and State at home are large, and with whom Gladstone is hardly more acceptable as a leader than Disraeli with the proud and impracticable descendants of the Tudors. Though the vote last night does not in itself "disestablish" the Irish Church, it settles the question of its severance from the State; and is undeniably one of the most important events of our time.

The interest with which the subject was regarded in England is manifested by the crowded benches and lobbies of the House of Commons, and by the presence of several members of the Royal family, among them the Princess Alexandria, till the close of the debate at half past three in the morning. It is little short of a political earthquake that has shaken the land, yet its effect may be salutary in extinguishing the crater of Irish discontent. The confusion of the moment is so great, however, that we cannot say what may appear when the elements shall have relapsed into their usual order, or what great leader, whether Gladstone or Disraeli, Bright or Lowe, will be able to ride upon the whirlwind and direct the storm.—Every Afternoon.

Ten thousand Germans are engaged to come over from Bremen to Baltimore this year, and from thence be distributed South.

It is stated that the lace trade of Nottingham is now in a condition of activity unexampled within the last eight years. Every available machine is in motion, but hands are scarce. Young girls who have been only a few months at the business receive in many cases as much as 20s. week

Colonel Grenfell, an Englishman and an ex-Confederate officer, sentenced to penal banishment to the Dry Portugas for life, on a charge of being concerned in a plot to burn Chicago, has escaped from the island. He was Lieutenant-Colonel in Morgan's band of guerillas.

At the Liverpool Police Court, about three weeks ago, Mr. C. D. Wilson, shipbroker (the Persian Consul), was fined £5 and costs, for cutting a small piece out of a newspaper in the Exchange Room. The defendant denied that he had any malicious intent. The paper was one of a file made for the use of the subscribers visiting the Reading Room.

At the last meeting of the Quebec Literary and Historical Society, Dr Anderson read a paper on the remains of the fossil elephant, and the jawbone recently found in the St. Charles, which he lately declared to be the jawbone of a young African elephant which had been imported many years ago by Dr Douglas, and had been lost sight of for twenty years.

A curious point arose the other day at the Rolls Chambers as to Lord H. Seymour's bequest to the charities of London. His Lordship died in 1859 and the definition of London by the Master of the Rolls was not a four mile radius, nor the Metropolitan police district, but a "continuous line of houses." An application was made to participate in the fund on the part of the Home for Soldiers' Daughters at Hampstead (within four miles), and the Chief Clerk, Mr Marshall, refused the application, on the ground that there was not in 1859 a continuous line of houses to the Home.

THE BOY ABBOT.—The Pall Mall Gazette having stated that the poor boy Abott, in the Royal Free Hospital had "suddenly" recovered his sight, Mr Gant, the medical attendant, has written a letter to the Times, in which he states:—"I wish to correct an error, the absurdity of which would otherwise be commented on by a large circle of your medical readers. No such sudden recovery is possible in the case of vision impaired by gunpowder; but what has taken place is, I am thankful to say, simply this—that, in gradual course of those reparative changes which are most active in youth, and aided by appropriate treatment, the patient has partially recovered the sense of vision in the left eye and slightly in the right eye. He can now just distinghish the colour of his nurse's dress, and find his way to the end of the ward.

IN RE LEOPOLD REDPATH.—The bankruptcy in this case occurred 12 years ago, and excited great interest at the time from the frauds committed by the bankrupt on the Great Northern Railway Company, for whom he had acted as clerk in the share transfer office. He was tried at the time and sentenced to a long period of imprisonment. To prevent the confiscation of his property he was made bankrupt at the time. The claim of the Great Northern Railway amounted to nearly a ¼ of million sterling; and they were allowed to take the whole of the assets, some £20,000 on undertaking to satisfy the other creditors. Three dividends have since been paid, and this was a final sitting for dividend.—Mr Graham, the official assignee, reported that there was about £800 in hand; but some formalities not having been complied with, an adjournment was necessary.

TESTIMONIAL
From Sig. Carlo Mora, Professor of Music, Kingston:
HAVING had ample opportunity of testing Mr Reyner & Son's Tuning and Repairing of Pianofortes, &c, since I have been in Kingston, I heartily recommend them to all those having Instruments to tune or repair, and would further advise those that have Instruments that are not in good order, to give them a call at once, as delay will only occasion more work and money when it is done.
SIG. CARLO MORA,
Professor of Music,
Kingston.

FROM MR RIDDELL.
MR REYNER has recently re-covered the Hammers of the Pianoforte used in my family with the new improved patent leather, and otherwise repaired it. He has also tuned it, and it is altogether much improved, the quality of the tone being greatly better than before the Instrument was put into his hands. I shall certainly continue to keep the piano under his charge for the future.
