PRIMA VISTA.

BY THE HON. T. D. McGEE.

(From New Dominion Monthly for April.)

"Land!" how welcome is the word
To us, landsmen bred or seamen? I
Who have lain sick and sick are stirred—
Who are thronged with smiling women,
Who that had go e down in tears,
Who that had crossed in the British Channel,
Who shivers, re-appears—
Who, wrapped in furs and flannel,

Gives a Yonder, on the right—dost see?
Yon dark line; and, close thereunder,
Where we along the sea—
Where, whose voice is thunder,
Breaks in a fearsome consort—
Where no hospitable whiffs
Reach the crew whose ship is lost
Under homicidal cliffs?

Hail! by that sweet prayer,
We had indeed looks sad and stern,
Made Jeremiah field day there,
Scaring butterflies and fern.
Then land it seems from far,
Which no shepherd's flock reposes;
Lit by the eternal war,
Land is age a land of roses."

Ah! Prima Vista, still—
Are swings the sea-hawk's fearless pinion—
Are rushed from every hill
Banner of the New Dominion,
Who advanced the Union standard—
Who may its welcome be
Are—seaward bound, or landward!

Ah! Prima Vista—long
Break the billows on thy boulders,
Cheers hail thy lights with song,
Have hopes quicken all beholders
As thy headlands point the way
Man's old and new creation,
Fall from thee like the spray,
Hope illumine every station.

Long thy hardy sons count o'er
Spoils of Ocean, won by labour;
Long the free, unbolted door
Bids to each trusty neighbour.
Long, may blossom on thy rocks
Fragrant as the heather,
Of the flowing locks,
Gathered from life's stormy weather.

Hail, Prima Vista—this
Your landmark we have prayed for;
Hail, wonder who have miss-d
Glimpse you stern land was made for.
Not homicidal, then—
The World's outwork, grim its beauty;
Guardian of the lives of men,
Hail in the pch that does its duty.

Gaily sings the lever lark
Over the raging swain, at morning,
Sings thro' mists chill and dark,
Some of welcome and of warning.
Sooner to his cell may go
Exalted, triumphant over remptation,
Than some captain turns below,
Hail, by a revelation.

Hail when Cabot ventured o'er
Northern sea, yon rocks rose gleaming;
Hail land opened Labrador
Hail, the promise all in seeming);
Hail, still it stands to guard
Island, fertile, fair as any,
Hail—but the unrewaped—reward
Cabot and of Verrazzani.

BAD AFFAIR.—An inquest was held by Dr. [illegible] Biddell and a jury at Mackinon's hotel, last evening, on the body of a woman named Moore, a resident of the same street, whose death occurred under peculiar circumstances during the afternoon. It appears that shortly after twelve o'clock, two boys named Maclean and Winstanley, each about 15 years of age, were in the act of pushing the store kept by the husband of the deceased, next to the Yonge Street Police Station, when some lads inside began calling them [illegible] The offensive epithets had been so oft-repeated previously that the boys addressed turned back and chased the other three boys into Mrs Moore, the eldest 12 years of age, who was at the store. Here the eldest Winstanley had barricaded standing in [illegible] a thrust at Maclean; but the latter had a weapon, he only received a [illegible] hand. WHAT THE ABYSSINIANS THINK OF THE ENGLISH.—The correspondent of the London Daily News, accompanying the Abyssinian expedition, writes as follows from Antalo: "I asked yesterday one of our interpreters, a gentleman who resided for a considerable time in Abyssinia, what was the native opinion regarding us. He said, first they disbelieve that you are bona fide Christians; they say, 'You certainly pretend to be so, but you never come to our churches except to look at them; then, you do not kneel down or kiss the ground. You drink coffee, you eat the unclean hare and even the pig.' How they discovered this last item I don't know, as I have seen no tame swine to eat in Abyssinia. The same gentleman told me that there were two bonds of sympathy connecting the inhabitants with us—dollars, and hatred to Theodore; and that it was to the last he attributed the fact of our transport being so little plundered. When Theodore is conquered he considered our small parties must look out, as the wealth they carry with them may then be an irresistible temptation to the Abyssinians. With regard to our military strength, those who know the population say that the impression made is not what we would expect; our numbers at first produced an effect, for all our camp followers, our real source of weakness, at the commencement of the campaign, when there were a as fighting men; but this has been great many of them, were set down much lessened by what in Europe would make an army respected, namely, our habit of paying for everything, and molesting no one. This they say is the conduct of traders, not of soldiers. Our tactics, and our movements from column into line, they utterly despise; they believe that, man to man they are superior to us. Our cannon certainly interest them; but then those of Theodore are much bigger. Two points alone shake their conviction in their own superior fighting power; first, we are evidently taking a great deal of trouble to meet the King, whom none of their own princes care to confront; secondly, we are undeniably possessed of a large number of excellent fire-arms, such as they themselves covet more than anything else in this world; but to the discipline shown by our soldiers they do not attach any weight, and do not yet acknowledge the moral and physical superiority which the white man feels he possesses over the black and the brown."

SOCIETY IN FRANCE.—The Paris correspondent of the Morning Post writes: "The large towns of France at the present moment show society in an abnormal condition. If we look at the causes of immorality in its various phases in the city of Paris we shall find that they originate in high places, in the example given by the aristocratic and wealthy classes. As at the period of the decline and fall of the Greek and Roman Empires, rottenness is in the head; the bad example comes from the Court, the Senate, the Legislative body, and the money-changers of the temple. Whatever may be the intentions of the Church, it has certainly failed in France in its most practical office, the improvement of the morality of the masses. The eloquence of the pulpit may have amused or frightened the people, but it has not corrected their vices. The richer classes of society are as immoral, frivolous, and egotistical in their habits as were the classes which produced the great revolution of 1789. Most of the more conspicuous men of society indulge in relations which offend the domestic hearth; and dozens of painted beauties who drive magnificent equipages in the Bois de Boulogne are a living proof of the eccentric direction of Frenchmen's affections and the peculiar investments in which they think proper to deposit their wealth. Such 'securities' are not quoted at the Bourse, but the merchandise is familiar to all classes of society, and creates among the working population a disrespectful feeling toward the rich, which on some occasions expresses itself as these courtesans drive to the races. Society has ever been dappled with these gaudy marks, but at no period were they so numerous, magnificently lodged, so expensively carriaged and horsed, and so lavishly endowed with jewels and gems. If the great preachers who are advertised for the Lent sermons were to direct their anathemas to this plague of society, which carries its discord and ruin into the bosom of so many families, instead of exciting their congregations, as they certainly will to subscribe Peter's pence for the Papal army, their Christian eloquence would be directed to profitable and practical ends. Of late the high ecclesiastics of France have embodied politics in their pastorals, and talked more about the rights of the sceptre than the attributes of the cross. The humbler classes of large cities are embued with a spirit of envy, hostility, and detraction towards the rich. Such a state of things is fraught with political evils. They witness the magnificent hotels built by speculators and directors of public companies, who have sold the people shares which give no dividend. They observe to what infamous objects the wealthy dedicate their money, and they cannot fail to remark that the representatives of the people in the legislative chambers are not seriously occupied with national interests. It is from such material that general discontent is engendered, and it was from such material in former times that disasters overtook dynasties and governments. A Lent well sermoned by the clergy and made a period of reflection for the higher classes of society in France, might be productive of beneficial results."

For the rapid cure of Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced stages of the disease.

So wide is the field of its usefulness and so numerous are its cures, that in almost every section of country are persons publicly known, who have been restored by it from alarming and even desperate diseases of the lungs. When once tried, its superiority over every other expectorant is too apparent to escape observation, and where its virtues are known, the public no longer hesitate what antidote to employ for the distressing and dangerous affections of the pulmonary organs incident to our climate.

NORTHROP & LYMAN, Newcastle,

The Florence Nightingale of the Nursery.

The following is an extract from a letter written by the Rev. C. Z. Weizer, to the German Reformed Messenger, at Chambersburg, Penn.:

A Benefactress.

Just open the door for her, and Mrs Winslow will prove the American Florence Nightingale of the Nursery. Of this we are sure, that we will teach our "Susy" to say "A Blessing on Mrs Winslow," for helping her to survive and escape the griping, colicking, and teething siege We confirm every word set forth in the Prospectus. It performs precisely what it professes to perform, every part of it—nothing less. Away with your "Cordial" "Paregoric" "Drops" "Laudanum," and every other "Narcotic," by which the babe is drugged into stupidity and rendered dull and idiotic for life.

We have never seen Mrs Winslow—know her only through the preparation of her "Soothing Syrup for children teething." If we had the power, we would make her, as she is, a physical saviour to the Infant Race. 25 cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists.

Be sure and call for

"Mrs Winslow's Soothing Syrup,"

Having the fac-simile of "Curtis & Perkins" on the outside wrapper. All others are base imitations.

TESTIMONIAL
From Sig. Carlo Mora. Professor of Music, Kingston:

HAVING had ample opportunity of testing Mr Reyner & Son's Tuning and Repairing of Pianofortes, &c., since I have been in Kingston, I heartily recommend them to all those having instruments to tune or repair, and would further advise those that have instruments that are not in good order, to give them a call at once, as delay will only occasion more work and money when it is done.

SIG. CARLO MORA,
Professor of Music,
Kingston.

FROM MR RIDDELL.

MR REYNER has recently re-covered the Hammers of the Pianoforte used in my family with the new improved patent leather, and otherwise repaired it. He has also tuned it, and it is altogether much improved, the quality of the tone being greatly better than before the Instrument was put into his hands. I shall certainly continue to keep the piano under his charge for the future.
