MANUFACTURE OF WINES.

The London Review quotes largely from a work of M. Lebeuf on the Culture and Treatment of the Vine, in its relations as to how wines are made, and the proportions of the genuine and the artificial, or those made by the addition of alcohol and spirituous essences to the original juice of the grape. The favour with which the wines of Burgundy, Bordeaux, Macon, Chablis, Campaigne, and others, have been received, has tempted the cupidity of the wine merchants, and induced them, says M. Lebeuf, to make vinous imitations with avidity. These manufacturers undertake to make all sorts of wine to order, and they often make good imitations, but these do not always resemble the type that they represent. An old saying is applicable here—"There are more purchasers than connoisseurs." These products find a rapid sale, and some people become so accustomed to them, that they are often preferred to the real article. A similar preference for adulterated porter was asserted several years ago by a London brewer, in an examination before a committee of the House of Commons. It is somewhat curious that the receipts given in M. Lebeuf's work have not a drop of the real wines they are intended to imitate. There are three plans for making new wine old. First, letting it become old by age. Secondly, ageing it by a stove or hot-house. Thirdly, ageing it chemically. In order to make two hundred and thirty quarts of new wine old, M. Lebeuf describes one of these chemical concoctions for giving "age" to new or manufactured wine, but it would not be understood here.

It is enough that we point out that many of the liquors called French clarets, or other alleged products of the vintage in different parts of France, are mere chemical compounds. No more dependence can be placed upon the light wines of France, as pure, than the heavier and more spirituous wines of Spain and Portugal. As the sun is not strong enough to ripen thoroughly the grape in France, the necessity is claimed of adding alcohol to give the wine strength. This difficulty does not occur in Spain and Portugal, and yet to the sweet wines of these countries spirit is added. The explanation is found in the fact that the English, the chief customers for these wines, want not only a sweet wine but a strong one—two qualities entirely opposed to each other in pure wine. Even in the mildly astringent Port wine, it is the practice, as a matter of course, to add brandy largely, or now more frequently, potato spirit, before it is shipped from Oporto. The American market calls for nearly the same kinds and qualities of wine as the English, and what is said of the one may be applied to the other. When would-be connoisseurs inhale, with apparent delight, the delicate "bouquet" of European wines purchased by retail, they are not aware that, in all but the very finest vintages, this bouquet is the triumph of the chemist rather than a product of the grape.

A trooper of the name of Thomas Dust, in the 2nd Life Guards, quartered in the Spittal Barracks, Windsor, has met with his death in the following extraordinary manner:—On the 21st ult. he complained of pains in his stomach. On the following Monday, the pains continuing, he consulted the surgeon who had the man brought into the hospital. On Thursday evening he was suddenly seized with vomiting blood, and died in less than two minutes. At a post-mortem examination, to ascertain the cause of this mysterious affair, it was discovered that he had swallowed a splinter from a bone of beef, not more than an inch and a half in length, and an eighth of an inch in thickness, which had pierced the gullet and was found sticking into the heart. The young soldier bore an excellent character in his regiment, which he entered only in October last, at the age of 22.

A Paris correspondent writes:—A manifesto from the Emperor is spoken of. It will not relate to a modus vivendi for the Pope, but will be an expose of the whole external situation. The Emperor is said to be at times in a state of great political exaltation. When Prince Napoleon paid him a visit the other day, after his return from Berlin, his Majesty was reading the journals. Taking up La Liberte, which alluded to his "senility," he is reported to have said, "See how your friends speak of me. You can assure them they are mistaken. They think me aged, used up; they are wrong. I shall soon show what I can do yet. They will not be kept waiting long—six weeks at most." What does it mean? The report addressed by Marshal Niel on the organization of the Garde Nationale Mobile is regarded as a warlike symptom. The volunteer companies are almost regimented. Another warlike symptom is that M. de Pradine, a naval officer of high rank, has left Toulon for Brest with 16,800 metres of telegraphic wires intended to connect the islands on the coast with the mainland. Mounds are also to be raised along the coast for the purpose of supporting flying batteries or torpilles.

It has been tested in every variety of climate, and by almost every kind of constitution, and it is the almost constant companion and inestimable friend of all who should be without it. Like every other good thing, the Pain Killer has been counterfeited; which, (while it is an acknowledgment on the part of the spurious worth) is a serious hindrance to its usefulness as the deceived purchaser of the Pain Killer by the base compound he has purchased for the genuine article.
Purchasers should be careful and not allow the dealer to palm off any other article which they realize a larger profit, but take only the Pain Killer and see that the name "Perry Davis" is on the bottle.
The Pain Killer is sold at wholesale by Druggists and Medicine Merchants in the principal cities, and retailed by Apothecaries, Grocers and Dealers generally throughout the world.

ARE a certain and safe remedy for Children and Adults. Worms are a fearful and melancholy fact that many a death among children is attributed to other causes, cannot be too deeply impressed on the minds of parents the necessity of a remedy for their children. By the use of Holloway's Worm Cakes the symptoms and causes of Worms are at once removed, and thousands of children saved from premature graves.
SYMPTOMS OF WORMS.—Very few of the very common complaints which are caused by Worms are at first supposed to be Worms. Loss of appetite, emaciation, pain in the head, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, restlessness, frequent slimy stools, fever, convulsions, fits, pain in the back, palpitation of the heart, fainting, trembling, nervous irritation, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a wasting away of flesh.
They are palatable as candy, and children will not know but they are taking a piece of candy. They are a positive cure for the worst cases of Worms, and will rid the child of them without giving any medicine, without pain, and without the child knowing it. Parents can thus cure their children of Worms without any trouble, and thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Cathartic Medicine, which is in the most of cases injurious to the child, and should be avoided when possible.
