DR. PHILLIPS ON TREATMENT OF ASTHMA.

LETTER NO. XXVIII.

TO THE EDITOR OF DAILY NEWS.

SIR, — Treatment of asthma by the stomach is liable to the same objections as that of consumption, and has met with quite as much, if not a greater want of success as in that disease. So much is this the case that asthma has long been considered incurable, and would no doubt continue to be so, did we not possess a way of reaching the spasmodic action by a direct application to the diseased part.

Of all the chronic diseases to which the lungs are subject, there is perhaps not one which is more certainly curable, or which manifests more speedily the beneficial influence of direct treatment than spasmodic asthma. It is seldom incurable except in those aggravated cases in which the bronchial tubes and cells of the diseased part are already destroyed, or rendered incapable of performing their functions.

Now while yielding its ready yielding to proper treatment there is probably no other disease which requires a more persevering course of treatment. In cases of long standing not less than six to nine months should be set apart for treatment; and even in recent cases it should be continued from two to three months. The patient should never discontinue its use for two or three months after the last trace of asthma has disappeared, as it leaves a very great tendency to recur if the treatment be discontinued immediately on the disappearance of the symptoms.

The plan of treatment which I have found most successful is as following: — During the attack to overcome the spasmodic action of the muscular fibres of the bronchial tubes, and during the interval to remove the tendency to a recurrence of that condition. Both of these are performed by inhalation. We inhale some vapors to overcome the spasm of the muscular fibres, — others ones to allay the irritation of the mucous membrane; — and others to change the action of the diseased part.

The cure is assisted by fumigating the apartment of the patient at night, and during the day if pressed for breath, with medicated vapors generated either by burning pastiles, or by chemical decomposition. If there be much mucus obstructing the free passage of air through the tubes, I combine expectorant medicines with the others to assist in its removal.

At the same time the patient should avoid as much as possible those circumstances which experience has taught him have a tendency to cause a return of the paroxysms, such as taking cold, inhaling dust, etc., and to resort to any other organs of the body which may be suffering or diseased to their natural state of health.

Tea and coffee of late and coffee has an injurious effect on a majority of asthmatics, and should be dispensed with.

These principles of practice, if faithfully and vigorously carried out, will succeed in all but the most inveterate case of asthma in a period of ten, fifteen, twenty, or even thirty days, unless organic changes have taken place.

Notwithstanding its efficacy in very many cases I would recommend no one to undertake the disease until it has become very troublesome, feeling that it will do quite as well a few years hence, for experience has proven to me that in most cases a much longer time and much more trouble is entirely necessary. Hence I would advise any person who has the slightest symptom of asthma to have it cured as speedily, lest it be just at that critical time when the change which cannot be cured by any human agency.

Your obedient servant,

M. PHILLIPS, M.D.,
Physician for Diseases of the Throat and Lungs
No. 70 Bay Street, Toronto.

Note.—Persons unable to visit the Office can consult by letter.

COACHMAN WANTED.

WANTED, a Coachman. Apply at the residence of SIR HENRY SMITH.

Kingston, May 1.

One of the most Useful Discoveries of the Age.

A NEW method, and one which must come into general use, for securing or fastening stove pipes, by which invention that great bore so long felt in every household is entirely removed. Any person can put them together or take them down with the greatest ease, and when together cannot possibly come apart. For safety and convenience it stands unparalleled.

This is the discovery of a Canadian, by whom it has just been patented for the Province of Ontario and Quebec. The undersigned have purchased the patent right for said Provinces, and are prepared to sell county rights. Liberal terms offered for parties to purchase for several counties the right to sell again for shop rights.

Parties wishing to examine this invention can do so by calling at the City Hotel for a few days.
