TELEGRAPH.

CABLE NEWS.

LONDON, May 11—The Right Hon. Henry Lord Brougham and Vaux, the statesman, reformer, legislator and ex-Chancellor, died in his rural retreat in England, France, to-day, in the eighty-first year of his age.

The news of his decease, although his demise was expected for at any moment during the past few years, produced a profound sensation in this city, as the people realize that the intellectual link which connected the present generation of the country with the anti-slave trade, and freedom of the colonies of 1810 and '12 has now passed at a most vital moment in the history of Britain.

LONDON, May 11—The memorial for war against Russia, to the Colonial Office by Mr John Bright, and other reformers and humanitarians, is circulated and urging that an ukase was issued in favor of the Fenian prisoners, condemned of the murder of Mary Jones by the Clerkenwell explosion, be given attention from the government.

In addition to the Home Secretary has declined to listen to the petitions of the petitioners, however, the last penalty of the law, by which he will be duly carried out on the 15th.

Parties sentenced to death by the Court of the Queen's Bench, at the Central Criminal Court in this city, on the 4th, after having made the defence that they had been employed at his trade as a shoemaker, in Glasgow, Scotland, on the day of the explosion at Clerkenwell prison. One of the prisoners swore that Barrett read the letter addressed to him and other persons at Gilbert's shop, in Scotland, next morning.

The prisoner addressed the court before sentence. In the course of his remarks he said: "It is useless for me to protest against the imputations of innocence, being charged that no declaration of mine would have the slightest tendency to prevent others from following the course I have determined upon. But this I can and do solemnly declare—there is no man more deeply commiserates the sufferers by the explosion, or more earnestly deplores the fatal consequences. No; I am willing to injure over misery or find fault with the sufferings of my fellow creatures. The statement of Mullany even to the contrary, from him I can forgive, though I may not be so great as he thinks, I would wish to correct an impression that has been made here that I was absent at the time of the explosion. I may have been a greater mistake I give no credit for such an attempt or what explosion. It was utterly impossible so, being, as I am, a stranger to acts of daring; and if it be proved to the Fenian organization I have been ridiculously absurd. The City of London, according to Sir Robert Peel and the Pall Mall Gazette, is full of armed Fenians, and that I had been to send to Glasgow to do the work, and there to select a person of my condition and no greater abilities than a humble person who now addresses you, is a stretch of imagination which the unbiased minds of the affrighted public alone be capable of entertaining."

The Lord Justice in passing sentence on the prisoners said: "The jury, after mature deliberation, have pronounced their verdict, and I have no propriety of that verdict I fully concur. There may be discrepancies in the evidence, as there always are in some of the witnesses in a case of this kind; but the principal facts of the case have been clearly established, and I am glad of the protestations you have made of innocence, for there has been no attempt on your part to repeat that part of your evidence which turned on the alleged fact of your being in Glasgow when the explosion took place in London."

The Judge did not name the day for his execution.

LONDON, May 11—Considerable excitement was occasioned to-day on the receipt of intelligence from Ashton-under-Lyne (in Lancashire), announcing the breaking out of the cholera in that city. The news produced the most startling sensation in the city. Crowds besieged the doors of the leading houses of business, and many persons were struck. At the last accounts the riot was still unpressed and the city was in a state of panic.

PARIS, May 11—The Emperor and Empress left for Orleans on Saturday. In response to the mayor's address of welcome, the Emperor made a pacific speech.

Brothers—We the representatives of the Fenian Brotherhood of the State of New York, in convention assembled, having carefully examined the strength and resources of the organization and the plan of operations submitted by General John O'Neil, declare that the organization is stronger at the present than at any time hitherto, and that the said plan of operations is entirely practicable. We have pledged ourselves to meet the enemy soon upon the battle field, and we earnestly call upon you to exercise your utmost energies to furnish the necessary means to equip and arm the many thousands of willing hands and brave hearts impatiently awaiting the order to march.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

AMERICAN TROTTING HORSES.

WE are glad to learn that the Farmers of the County of Prince Edward are becoming fully alive to the importance of improving their breeds of Horses, and are now pretty generally of the opinion that it costs no more to raise thoroughbred stock than the inferior breeds, and the profits are more than double. It is also gratifying to know that J. H. Allan, Esq., is receiving the thanks and patronage of his countrymen for having imported into this country one of the fastest thorough-bred Trotting Stallions to be found in the Dominion of Canada. We refer to GREY HAWK; this splendid animal is reported to have trotted on more than one occasion at the rate of 2:28; and we know that last year he fairly turned the heads of sporting men at Whitby and Belleville by the splendid time he made, as well as magnificent action. His Colts in this country are of great promise, being generally large and splendidly built; and must command high figures when they arrive at a proper age.

☞ This HORSE can be seen at BLANCHARD'S HOTEL, Picton, every Saturday; Kingston, HANCES' HOTEL, Crystal Palace, every Tuesday and Wednesday; and at FERRIN'S HOTEL, Bath, every Thursday until August. For particulars see large bills.
