LOOKING A PHANTOM.

I am a romantic man, and, if I had time in that direction, a few Mon-day visits and reprimands from my old directors would soon have cured me of the failing; but somehow or other I have found out that railway men are of the same stuff as other men, and hearts under their uniform beat.

On business of mine, if, while I was at London terminus of the Great Eastern Longshare Railway, I ex-changed tickets and unlocked the car-riage door, departure platform—it was all of mine if a tall fair girl, in mourning, came twice a week regular-ly, and asked me her ticket for Westgate, first class. But somehow it was not my business, when I had un-locked my carriage and handed her in, to feel, that I should lock that door without banging it, but from the first day—cold winterly like—she was dressed, she came shivering on the platform. I seemed to have a interest in her, and, as the weeks went on, I found myself looking out for her. It was easy to see, from the tickets she carried and the return ticket, I put down the line to give lessons. I call myself a fool, and thought of my mother's grave, and my position in life, and with the graceful, lady-like way she had to come floating along to my carriage every Monday and Wednesday morning, looking so pale and sad and care-ful, I first began by pitying her, and then, I never mind now.

One December day I was shifted for a time on the arrival platform, and so missing her leave, but I carefully watched every train that came in till I saw her. Without seeing me, she hur-ried on. Well, there was nothing to worry about, you'll say; but I did sigh for her, and was turning away, when I felt the searching porter with a music box in his hand, which some one had lost in the train.

"I know who that belongs to," I said, snatching it from him, and then, feeling I was going to make a bother, I slipped it into his hand, and ran down the station.

In time I could see her at the bot-tom of the street, and, catching hold of one of the boys hanging about for a job, I told the lad figure out, and told him to follow where she lived, and come and tell me.

Lad, not with the music roll? No; I ran to the lad. I did not know why, but I felt sound something pleasant in the face of my servant to her, and wait-ing for her; and I kept telling myself so I should back to attend to my duty.

In the morning I was in a quiet, shabby, retiring place leading out of Gower Street, with the music roll in my hand, waiting out for No. 21. It was long to find, but something seemed to make me walk past two or three times before I could summon courage to go up the steps. But at last I did, thinking how I was, when I only had to deliver the music, and come away.

I rang gently, and waited; rang again and then a red-faced woman came to the door.

"Is this a young lady who teaches music?"

"Good-evening," she said, snappishly. "Knock twice! Bell's for the front door. There go up!"

She took off my cap, wiped my shoes, and then, ashamed of my uniform for the first time in my life, went slowly up the second flight of stairs, then stopped; for I could hear behind the sweetest voice I ever heard in my life sing it in a low tone. I stopped, my head swimming in the sweet sounds and my heart beating heavily, for it was a hymn to my mother, and I should have stopped if I had not heard some one coming down the stairs. Then I knocked, and a voice said, "Come in!"

I opened the handle two or three times, as I was cold and worn, and then, entering, I saw, looking like a great girl, and trem-bling before the tall pale lady and some little girls, a lady in front of a very large piano.

"Cold, chilly mom, and so pale and sad," the lady in front looked, as I stood with the music in the first glance.

"Oh, mamma, the music!" cried the pale girl, rising from her seat by the piano, and coming towards me, and then, as I clum-sily held it out, saying that I was recog-nised, on the instant, by her, for bringing it, and, on her thanking me for my kindness at the station.

"Ask the young lady to take a glass of wine, Lou-isa," said the lady on the stool, when I saw the colour flush in her daughter's cheek, as she said hastily—

"I think, mamma, we have one in the house."

I earnestly protested that I would rather take any wine, and was tacking to the door, when a sudden pain shot through my side, for I had detected a motion of the pale girl, and caught a glimpse of her hand. I suppose what I felt, for she paused, and asked, as I stood outside, if I had touched me, passed the shil-ling into her left hand, and held it to me.

I have a recollection of having taken it, put it to my quivering lips, and muttering along the streets in a dream, seeing nothing, hear-ing nothing, but apparently lost.

I went on till Christmas Eve. I went for her next coming to the house as usual, seen the carriage in the mews. I know that I had no-thing for, being only a railway ser-vant, to be a lady; but, for all that, it was my duty to watch over her, though I felt when I returned the folio her music was a little more distant, and I felt it sank into the carriage.

It was Christmas Eve, and all day long I had not seen her. I had felt sympathetic, and then tried to be cheerful, to keep myself from the pain it would be perhaps a little more distant, I saw her again. I was in fear of my not being busy, for I felt I must keep on the move, or waste keep—all hurry, worry, and rush. Dull, heavy, yellow fog and drizzling rain came in covered with

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.

℞ For the rapid cure of Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced stages of the disease.

So wide is the field of its usefulness and so numerous are its cures, that in almost every section of country are persons publicly known, who have been restored by it from alarming and even desperate diseases of the lungs. When once tried, its superiority over every other expectorant is too apparent to escape observation, and where its virtues are known, the public no longer hesitate what antidote to employ for the distressing and dangerous affections of the pulmonary organs incident to our climate.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & Co., Lowell, Mass., and sold by all Druggists and dealers in medicine everywhere.

NORTHROP & LYMAN, Newcastle, Wholesale Agents for Canada West.

The Florence Nightingale of the Nursery.

The following is an extract from a letter written by the Rev. C. Z. Weizer, to the German Reformed Messenger, at Chambersburg, Penn.:

A Benefactress.

Just open the door for her, and Mrs Winslow will prove the American Florence Nightingale of the Nursery. Of this we are sure, that we will teach our "Susy" to say "A Blessing on Mrs Winslow," for helping her to survive and escape the griping, colicking, and teething siege We confirm every word set forth in the Prospectus. It performs precisely what it professes to perform, every part of it—nothing less. Away with your "Cordial" "Paregoric" "Drops" "Laudanum," and every other "Narcotic," by which the babe is drugged into stupidity and rendered dull and idiotic for life.

We have never seen Mrs Winslow—know her only through the preparation of her "Soothing Syrup for children teething." If we had the power, we would make her, as she is, a physical saviour to the Infant Race. 25 cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists.

Be sure and call for

"Mrs Winslow's Soothing Syrup,"

Having the fac-simile of "Curtis & Perkins" on the outside wrapper. All others are base imitations.

A "Cough," "cold," or Irritated Throat.

If allowed to progress, results in serious Pulmonary and Bronchial affections, oftentimes incurable.

Brown's Bronchial Troches

Reach directly the affected parts, and give almost instant relief. In Bronchitis, Asthma, and Catarrh they are beneficial. Obtain only the genuine Brown's Bronchial Troches, which have proved their efficacy by a test of many years. Among testimonials attesting their efficacy are letters from—
