ROUGE OF LORDS AND THE MARRIAGE LAWS.

Decision of the House of Lords affords another illustration of the discreditable state in the Marriage Laws of the United Kingdom. In 1828 a marriage was contracted at Manchester between a man named Burton and a girl under 17 years of age, Elizabeth Hickson. The marriage was brought about by a fraudulent conspiracy, for which Buxton was after-wards prosecuted and sentenced to three years' imprisonment. The parents of the girl succeeded in immediately regaining possession of her, and she and her nominal husband never lived together even for a single day. Attempts were made to dissolve the marriage by Act of Parliament, but without success; and in 1838 the husband executed a deed of separation. Elizabeth Hickson, by this deed, was to be at liberty to live apart from her husband as if she was sole and unmarried, and accordingly she was always designated by her maiden name. In the year 1845, while living in Derby, she was offered marriage by a gentleman named Shaw, then studying for the English Bar. Such a marriage was of course impossible in England, but the same year Mr Shaw and Elizabeth Burton went to Edinburgh, where they afterwards lived, Mr Shaw being called to the Scotch instead of to the English Bar. In the same year Buxton also went to Scotland, and after he had resided there for the requisite time raised an action of divorce against him in the Scotch Courts, on the ground of the undisputed fact that he was living in adultery with another woman. In accordance with Scotch law a divorce was granted, Elizabeth Hickson was then duly married in Edinburgh to Mr Shaw, and children were born of the marriage. A sum of £2,000 had been left to Elizabeth Hickson and her issue, and the question had arisen whether her three children by this marriage with Mr Shaw were entitled to the legacy. In other words, it fell to the House of Lords had to decide whether these children were legitimate or illegitimate, in fact, the marriage with Mr Shaw was lawful. This, again, is reduced to the simple question whether the divorce obtained in Scotland was valid. Now, it is to be observed, in the first place, that neither the law of England or the law of Scotland were alone to be considered, there could be no room for doubt about the case. In the one case it would be clear according to English law, but the two conclusions would be in direct contradiction. According to Scotch law, the divorce could not have been obtained, the marriage would have been valid and the children illegitimate. According to the Scotch law there were sufficient grounds for a divorce, the marriage was illegal and the children legitimate. It is sufficiently scandalous that the same circumstances should lead to such different results in two parts of the same island. But the case is not so simple. The first marriage was illegal, but the divorce was Scotch, and the question was whether the Scotch divorce would dissolve the English marriage. It will, of course, be asked by what right the Scotch Courts claimed any jurisdiction in the matter. By Scotch law, however, residence of 40 days gives a domicile in Scotland for the purposes of such litigation. Accordingly, Buxton and Elizabeth Hickson, by merely living in Scotland for seven weeks, rendered their marriage amenable to the laws of Scotch law. But it does not follow that English law should recognise such a claim, and the House of Lords decided that it could not. Lord Cranworth delivered two unmistakable decisions, and expressed his anxiety in dealing with so unsatisfactory a subject to follow strictly the rules of law laid down. "The authorities," he said, "appeared to him to show clearly that, whatever might be the decision of the Scotch Courts upon this subject of divorce as regarding to Scotch law, the English Courts could not admit any right in them to interfere with the inviolability of an English marriage, nor with any of its incidents." The result is that sixteen years after the death of the father, and four years after the death of the mother, their marriage is pronounced invalid and their children illegitimate. There is doubtless good reason for the principles thus enforced. Lord Cranworth represented that to admit the Scotch claim would be to attach a prejudice to English law, "by the decision of what, for this purpose, must be called a foreign law." It would, indeed, be to allow that any English husband who found his marriage irksome might escape from it by simply taking his wife to Scotland for two months, and there committing adultery. A husband's consent might, in good, reasonable, a proceeding in England; but it is not clear that it would be similarly fatal in Scotland. As another anomaly, Lord Cranworth added that he would not say whether such a proceeding might be valid north of the Tweed, while it would be invalid south of that river." The decision, therefore, in the existing condition of our laws is in accordance with public policy, but it affords a striking instance of the anomaly of such a condition. It is not merely that the laws of marriage and divorce are different in different parts of the same island, but the highest court of appeal in the realm absolutely refuses to ignore the law which prevails in one part of the Kingdom as binding in respect of property inherited in another. According to Scotch law, Elizabeth Hickson was married and was afterwards lawfully married. The House of Lords confesses as much as regards Scotland, but declares that in England the Scotch law must be set aside as if it never had been. The individual case is a hard one. A woman who had been fraudulently entrapped into an early marriage finds herself, in the first place, unable to escape from it in England, notwithstanding the infidelity of her husband. It may be that the law would now be more ready to afford her relief in such a case. But a lawyer tells her that she can be set free in Scotland. The Scotch Courts solemnly assure her that she is free, and she contracts, as she and her husband believe, a lawful marriage. After her death, the marriage is set aside as regards England, and their children are bastardised and deprived of their English inheritance. Such a state of things is a scandal to law and justice. We ought to be ashamed of allowing it to remain unalterable, and to provide a remedy ought to be one of the first steps of law reform.—Times.

It is said that Lord Brougham's autobiography is intended for publication on account of the great sum it is supposed it would create.

A short time ago an English merchant, named Gower, died at Marseilles, bequeathing his collection of pictures and works of art to Liverpool, on condition that a suitable building was prepared for their reception. The Town Council took the precaution to send a deputation to see the collection before accepting it, and at the meeting of the Town Council on the 13th the deputation reported that the entire collection was not worth removal to Liverpool. The 400 pictures were not worth on an average £5 each, and the bronzes, said to be of ancient manufacture, were found to be of the coarsest common make, without even an attempt to give them the appearance of age.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.

℞ For the rapid cure of Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced stages of the disease.

So wide is the field of its usefulness and so numerous are its cures, that in almost every section of country are persons publicly known, who have been restored by it from alarming and even desperate diseases of the lungs. When once tried, its superiority over every other expectorant is too apparent to escape observation, and where its virtues are known, the public no longer hesitate what antidote to employ for the distressing and dangerous affections of the pulmonary organs incident to our climate.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass., and sold by all Druggists and dealers in medicine everywhere.

The Florence Nightingale of the Nursery.

The following is an extract from a letter written by the Rev. C. Z. Weizer, to the German Reformed Messenger, at Chambersburg, Penn

A Benefactress.

Just open the door for her, and Mrs Winslow will prove the American Florence Nightingale of the Nursery. Of this we are sure, that we will teach our "Susy" to say "A Blessing on Mrs Winslow," for helping her to survive and escape the griping, colicking, and teething siege We confirm every word set forth in the Prospectus. It performs precisely what it professes to perform, every part of it—nothing less. Away with your "Cordial" "Paregoric" "Drops" "Laudanum," and every other "Narcotic," by which the babe is drugged into stupidity and rendered dull and idiotic for life.

We have never seen Mrs Winslow—know her only through the preparation of her "Soothing Syrup for children teething." If we had the power, we would make her, as she is, a physical saviour to the Infant Race. 25 cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists

Be sure and call for

"Mrs Winslow's Soothing Syrup,"

Having the fac-simile of "Curtis & Perkins" on the outside wrapper. All others are base imitations.

A "Cough," "cold," or Irritated Throat.

If allowed to progress, results in serious Pulmonary and Bronchial affections, oftentimes incurable.

Brown's Bronchial Troches

Reach directly the affected parts, and give almost instant relief. In Bronchitis, Asthma, and Catarrh they are beneficial. Obtain only the genuine Brown's Bronchial Troches, which have proved their efficacy by a test of many years. Among testimonials attesting their efficacy are letters from—
