REWARD FOR THE ARREST OF JEFF. DAVIS.

It will be remembered that just after Jeff. Davis fled from Richmond, at the close of the rebellion, the American Government offered $100,000 reward for his arrest. He was arrested a few days after, but the reward has never yet been paid, Congress failing to make the necessary appropriation. The Committee on Claims have, however, at length reported a bill providing for the distribution of the prize-money as follows: To James H. Wilson, of Illinois, late Major General of volunteers, $3,000; to Benjamin D. Pritchard, of Michigan, late Lieutenant Colonel of the Fourth Michigan Cavalry, $3,000; to Joseph A. O. Yeoman, of Iowa, late Captain of the First Ohio Cavalry, $2,000; and to the following officers, non-commissioned officers and privates, in proportion to the monthly pay proper to which they were respectively entitled in the grades which they held at the time of said capture. Here follow the names of one hundred and forty-four officers and men of the Fourth Michigan Cavalry that were present on the morning of May 10; of seventy-five officers and enlisted men of the First Wisconsin Cavalry, and of twenty-seven others, being the detachment accompanying Capt. Yeoman, principally of Ohio. The bill provides that to the heir-at-law and legal representatives of such soldiers named therein as were killed in action at the capture, or have since deceased, the share, proportion or claim of such killed or deceased soldier shall be paid. The sum of $100,000 is appropriated to carry the act into effect.

THE WAR FEELING IN EUROPE.

The following are the principal passages in the article of the Golos of St. Petersburg on the journey of Prince Napoleon, which has attracted some attention:—"No reasonable Frenchman doubts that a war is approaching. But before entering into action, the Emperor Napoleon wishes to know the real state of affairs in Europe; and he has selected the Prince, his cousin, to obtain this information. We need hardly remark that Prince Napoleon's journey is intimately connected with the Polish and Eastern questions, which have lately become more and more identical. The journey of the Prince to Austria must be regarded as the first step towards a rapprochement between him whom a certain party designates as King of Poland and his future subjects. In a word, it is clear that the Prince has been sent to Vienna, Pesth, and Constantinople for the purpose of connecting as closely as possible Polish and Eastern questions, so as to open them both simultaneously. If Baron Beust sincerely supports the well-known tendencies of Prince Napoleon, he is preparing inevitable ruin for the empire of the Hapsburgs. To us it matters little into how many pieces—whether two or three—Austria is to be divided; even the existence of that patchwork empire is not indispensable to us. Yet Russia cannot see with indifference her adversaries closing in their ranks, even if their object is only to divert the attention of Prussia. Future events will enlighten us further on this subject; but we cannot doubt that our Government has already made its preparations for all contingencies."

Robert Chambers, the celebrated Tyne side sculler and oarsman, died on Thursday last, June 4, at St. Anthony's near Newcastle, after a lingering illness. He was born on the 14th of June, 1831, and consequently had not completed his thirty-seventh year. The aquatic career of Chambers, which extends as far back as 1852, was singularly brilliant and successful, and in his best day he was unquestionably one of the finest, if not the finest, sculler that England ever produced.

John Bunyan, while in Bedford jail, was called upon by a Quaker, desirous of making a convert of him. "Friend John, I have come to thee with a message from the Lord, and after having searched for thee in all the prisons in England, I am glad that I have found thee at last." "If the Lord had sent you," returned Bunyan, "you need not have taken so much pains to find me out; for the Lord knows I have been here for twelve years."

The London Athenæum is responsible for an announcement of a marvellous undertaking which is just about to be commenced for connecting the north and south banks of the Thames below London Bridge. There is great need of such communication, for a million people live on the banks of the river below London Bridge, and the distance from the bridge to the Thames Tunnel is a mile and a half. "The plan is to sink a vertical shaft on each side of the river to the depth of fifty feet, furnished with a hydraulic lift to raise and lower a carriage and ten passengers, to drive a tunnel in the clay under the river, not exceeding eight feet in diameter, between these shafts, and to line it as driven, partly with Staffordshire blue bricks and partly with cast-iron, by which means it can be rendered air-tight, and all danger from the river avoided. The time necessary to complete the works is not expected to exceed six months, so that the metropolis may really hope to have the new subway opened by New Year's Day."

The year before its introduction the Post Office carried seventy-five millions of letters, last year one thousand millions; so that (putting samples aside) on an average we each write ten letters now for one we used to do. We have more time, but must do more within it; we find greater facilities for communication, but must communicate more; and so we have had to shorten our epistles, but to multiply their number. And this brings us, as gossipping does not always do, to our special proper subject—slipshod English; for penny postage has destroyed the elegant art of letter-writing as fast stipple-punching has destroyed the beautiful, laborious art of line engraving. The trick of speed has spoiled the habit of accuracy, and social history now-a-days is but chronicled in notes where it used to be detailed in letters. In the old days a letter was a work of art, a studied composition, a chronicle of news, an elaborate petition, or an urgent counsel; the note, its substitute, is now a hasty scratch, a written ejaculation, a cry, or a command. Our fathers used to draught their letters first, read them over to themselves aloud, checking off each smoothly-balanced period with a waving pen, and, where need appeared, making erasures here and there with the blade of the penknife, whose smooth reverted handle rubbed away the roughness of the scratched surface to pave the way for the more choice expression of their critical idea. Now, if he reads his letters before posting, no man corrects his wording, save by a hasty blotch and impatient interlineation, if even this be not left undone with the murmured "Do well enough, he'll understand what I mean." And this careless habit has spread also into literature, as who can wonder when we think of the greedy urgency of the steam-press in journalism, and of the astounding fruitfulness of our greatest writers in general literature.

Stockholm, June 10.—A nitro-glycerine manufactory exploded here this afternoon. Fifteen persons were killed, and great destruction was caused.

The Town Hall, Kingsville, was struck by lightning on Tuesday last, and destroyed, together with its contents. The loss was about $2,500, on which there was no insurance.

The Journal du Havre mentions a proposed visit of the Emperor Napoleon to Corsica. His Majesty is to be present at the fetes celebrating the annexation of the island to France, and to lay the foundation stone of a new cathedral in the chief town of Corsica, on the 15th August.

On Wednesday last a young man, only about a fortnight out from Scotland, received a sunstroke while working on Mr Scott's farm, at St. Laurent, falling down, and in about an hour afterward expiring. He was wearing, at the time of the fatal visitation, a small Scotch woollen cap or bonnet.

Wm A Brown, a farmer of the township of Dunwich, lost a valuable span of horses last week, which were run off by his hired man, and offered a reward of $50 for their recovery. The Chief Constable of Windsor captured both the team and the thief, but Mr Brown says he only offered the reward as a joke, as he did not expect to recover the horses.

The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamer Ottawa reached Suez on the 5th, having on board the released Abyssinian captives, namely, twenty gentlemen, eight ladies, twenty-two children, and twenty-one other persons whom the telegram designates as followers. Lady Napier, the wife of the Abyssinian Commander-in-Chief, arrived at Southampton in the Pera on the 5th. Consul Cameron remained at Annesley Bay through indisposition.

The New York World says: "There are reports of more earthquake shocks at St. Thomas—trifles that tend to depreciate that property in the eyes of so shrewd a real-estate speculator as Mr Seward, though it is doubtful if St. Thomas, with all the recent shakings, has been so much shocked as is Alaska and all Russia at the delay in the payment of Mr Seward's purchase of the new Northwest Territory."

On Friday last as Mrs Henry Barnett of Middlesex, Vt., was engaged in boiling tar for purpose of repairing a boat, the tar, by some means, caught fire. Fearing that the house might burn, she took the kettle of blazing tar in her hand, and, opening the door, threw it out in the yard. Just at that time her little daughter, one of a beautiful pair of twins about two years old, happened to be running past the door, and upon her the tar was poured, burning her in a most shocking manner. The child died on Saturday.

Last week a large pic-nic party came across the Suspension Bridge, and spent a part of the day on this side of the river. There were about 2,000 altogether, of whom about 700 were men. Some of the men wore badges, and when registering their names on the book of the hotel, three of them had the temerity to add the word "Fenians" to their signature. These three were immediately arrested, and held sufficiently long enough to teach them discretion for the future.

DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL.

DR. DE JONGH'S Oil is convincingly proved by an overwhelming weight of medical testimony, and by the practical test of successful experience for twenty years in all parts of the world, to be, beyond all question, the purest, the most efficacious, the most palatable, and, from its rapid curative effects, the most economical of all kinds.

Hence the universal celebrity of Dr. de Jongh's Oil, and the unparalleled demand for this unrivalled preparation.

SELECT MEDICAL OPINIONS.

SIR HENRY MARSH, BART., M.D.,
Physician in Ordinary to the Queen in Ireland.

"I have frequently prescribed Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil. I consider it to be a very pure oil, not likely to create disgust, and a therapeutic agent of great value."

DR. EDWARD SMITH, F.R.S.,
Medical Officer to the Poor-Law Board of Great Britain.

"We think it a great advantage that there is one kind of Cod Liver Oil which is universally admitted to be genuine—the 'Light-Brown' Oil supplied by Dr. de Jongh. It has long been our practice, when prescribing the oil, to recommend this kind, since, amidst a much variety and uncertainty, we have confidence in its genuineness."—(Extract from "Consumption: its Early and Remediable Stages.")

DR. LANKESTER, F.R.S.,
Coroner for Central Middlesex.

"I consider that the purity of this oil is secured in its preparation, by the personal attention of so good a chemist and intelligent a physician as Dr. de Jongh, who has also written the best medical treatise on the oil with which I am acquainted. Hence, I deem the Cod Liver Oil sold under his guarantee to be preferable to any other kind as regards genuineness and medical efficacy."

DR. LETHEBY,
Medical Officer of Health, and Chief Analyst to the City of London.

"In all cases I have found Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil possessing the same set of properties, among which the presence of cholaic compounds, and of iodine in a state of organic combination, are the most remarkable. It is, I believe, universally acknowledged that this oil has great therapeutic power; and from my investigations, I have no doubt of its being a pure and unadulterated article."

DR. BARLOW, F.R.S.,
Senior Physician to Guy's Hospital.

"I have frequently recommended persons consulting me to make use of Dr. de Jongh's Cod Liver Oil. I have been well satisfied with its effects, and believe it to be a very pure oil, well fitted for those cases in which the use of that substance is indicated."

DR. GRANVILLE, F.R.S.,
Author of the "Spas of Germany."

"Dr. Granville has found that Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil produces the desired effect in a shorter time than other kinds, and that it does not cause the nausea and indigestion too often consequent on the administration of the pale oil."

EDWIN CANTON, ESQ., F.R.C.S.,
Surgeon to Charing-cross Hospital.

"For several years past I have been in the habit of prescribing Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil, and find it to be much more efficacious than other varieties of the same medicine which I have also employed with a view to test their relative superiority."

BRIGADE OF AMAZONS IN THE PARAGUAYAN ARMY.

The Buenos Ayres correspondent of the New York Herald says in his last letter, discussing the war on the La Plata; Lopez is arming women, and letters state that he already four thousand in arms, upon the Tebicuart, under the command of his mistress, Brigadier Generaless Eliza Lynch, the spunky Irishwoman who is said to be the real ruling spirit of the war, the development of which is virtually in the hands of her two brothers, who manage it. Lopez is represented to be a pompous, feeble who has a holy dread of bullets and steel. General Mrs Lynch's headquarters are in the rear of the principal fort across the Tebicuart, the immediate approach of that pass being entrusted to the gallant Coloneless Marguerita Ferreira, and Captainess Anita Gill, with their companies of women, while a division under Colonel Herreiro is posted so as to attack in flank the invaders, who might perhaps drive back Mmes. Ferreira and Gill. Women are also charged with the duty of guarding the country and forwarding supplies to the male camps, the principal one of which covers Villa Rica, at which are Lopez's great internal arsenals. In the disputed story of the Amazonian colony living on the South side of the great River Amazonias is about to be realized. The great river of La Plats, and the world is going to see men and women pitted against each other by so called civilized people of South America.

New York is in a horribly filthy condition; cholera and yellow fever are expected in consequence.

The Paris correspondent of the Morning Post gives some details of Napoleon's illness, the accuracy of which the writer says he can vouch. The Emperor caught cold in Corsica, and was suffering all last week from rheumatic gout in the knee. The attack was somewhat brought on by the Emperor's own imprudence. He returned to Paris in a state of acute suffering, and without consulting Dr. Corvisart, had packs of cold water applied to the knee; as it was late, dressed for dinner without having circulation restored by friction; fainting during the evening became intolerable, and increased next day to such a degree that the Cabinet Council was postponed, and the report spread in Paris that Majesty had a prolonged faint, but no syncope took place.

Vessels arriving at this port during the past few days all report an unusual number of icebergs in the Atlantic ocean. The steamer Atlantic, which came in on Saturday, encountered twenty-five in a single day, and had her voyage considerably lengthened by the slow rate of speed she was compelled to adopt to avoid dangerous collisions. It has been suggested that the coldness of the temperature produced in the atmosphere of the ocean by these gigantic visitors is the cause of the excessive cold we have been having during the past few weeks; and there is something very simple in the idea. The cold blast from the sea, meeting the warm damp air which floats over the land, must of course condense it, and cause it to deposit its moisture. But why there should be so much ice this season is a subject for still further inquiry.—N. Y. Sun.

A Young LADY'S THROAT CUT FROM EAR TO EAR.—William Kidd, a young man living four miles from Glenhaven, Wisconsin, left Coalville and obtained a pair of horses and a buggy, and returned to the house of Mr McIvers, where a young lady named Catherine Jordan resided, to whom he had been paying his addresses, but which was not reciprocate. He invited her to take a ride with him, but she declined his invitation, and at last accepted, only upon the request of others. But it was a mistake. Kidd made his way for a piece of by-road, some five miles northeast of Glenhaven. Here, far beyond all help, he proposed, he pressed his suit with all the energy of a man, with deep passion, and refused to become his wife. At once his spirit changed. The devil himself came to have taken possession of him, and drop into a dense timber, he drew forth a knife or razor—for he was evidently prepared for the emergency, and proceeded to murder the girl he had just vowed to love. When found she had her throat cut from ear to ear, although some gashes on the left wrist showed that she had struggled bitterly against her hard fate. After committing this murder, Kidd drove back to near this farmer's house; hitched the horse
