SUFFERED SEVEN LONG YEARS

Finally Relieved by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Ravenswood, W. Va.—"For seven long years I suffered from a female trouble and inflammation so that I was not able to do my housework. I consulted several doctors but none seemed to give me relief. I read in a paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound so I decided to try it, and before the first bottle was gone I found great relief so I continued using it until I had taken eight bottles. Now I am very well and can do my own housework. I can gladly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine to suffering women."—Mrs. BERTHA LIERING, R. F. D., Ravenswood, W. Va.

The ordinary day of most housewives is a ceaseless treadmill of washing, cooking, cleaning, mending, sweeping, dusting and caring for little ones. How much harder the tasks when some derangement of the system causes headaches, backaches, bearing-down pains and nervousness. Every such woman should profit by Mrs. Liering's experience. Remember this, for over forty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been restoring health.

Reindeer's Skin Valuable.

Not only is the reindeer prized highly for its flesh, but the skins are valuable for glove-making. Tanned with the hair on, they are very light, and robes made from the soft tanned skins with the hair on are for weight probably by far the warmest covering known. These might become extremely useful as automobile robes for winter in colder parts of the country.

A Contradiction.

Witness—He looked me straight in the eyes and—

Lawyer—There, sir, you've flatly contradicted your former statement.

Witness—How's that?

Lawyer—You said before that he bent his gaze on you. Will you please explain how he could look you straight in the eye with a bent gaze?—Edinburgh Scotsman.

Traveling Hint.

If there are bottles to go in your bag or trunk and you fear the corks will come out, heat your sealing wax in a flame and run the melted part around the cork where it meets the glass. Thus it will be held in tightly and only a smart twist is necessary to remove it when you arrive at your destination.

Great Britain has somewhat more than 800,000 motor vehicles.

New Expanding Bullet.

A new form of expanding bullet for big-game hunters has been designed. It is for rifles of .30-calibre. It supersedes the old soft-nosed bullets to which there were many objections. In a new bullet, the tip is made of tinplated gliding metal, and upon impact is forced back into the cover, expanding the point of the bullet, which is slotted in such a manner that it retains its pointed shape until this impact occurs. This is unlike the old soft-nosed bullets which, from their nature, were liable to be deformed by handling before they were loaded into a rifle. The weight of the new bullet is 180 gr., which is generally considered about the best shooting.

DON'T FEAR ASPIRIN IF IT IS GENUINE

Look for Name "Bayer" on Tablets, Then You Need Never Worry.

To get genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" you must look for the safety "Bayer Cross" on each package and on each tablet.

The "Bayer Cross" means true, world-famous Aspirin, prescribed by physicians for over twenty-one years, and proved safe by millions for Colds, Headache, Earache, Toothache, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Neuritis, and for Pain in general. Proper and safe directions are in each unbroken "Bayer" package. —Advertisement.

Individualism.

You can give other people your advice, but you can not give them your experience. You can give them your remedy, but you can by no means give them its effect upon yourself. Perhaps this is just as well, since each is to live his individual life and make his own best achievement out of it. The man with the ten talents could probably have taken care of those of his fellow-servants as well—then there would have been no loss, but also there would have been no use for the other servants.

BOSCHEE'S SYRUP

Allays Irritation, Soothes and Heals Throat and Lung Inflammation.

The almost constant irritation of a cough keeps the delicate mucous membrane of the throat and lungs in a congested condition, which Boschee's Syrup gently and quickly soothes and heals. For this reason it has been a favorite household remedy for colds, coughs, bronchitis and especially for lung troubles in millions of homes all over the world for the last fifty-five years, enabling the patient to obtain a good night's rest, free from coughing, with easy expectoration in the morning. You can buy Boschee's Syrup wherever medicines are sold.—Advertisement.

Resurrection Flower.

In Egypt is a plant called the resurrection flower. It is seen as a little ball hanging on a fragile stem, resembling in color and shape a shrunken poppyhead. Sleeping, but not dead, the flowers are aroused by being immersed in water, and then supported in an upright position. Soon the fibers began to stir. Slowly they unfold, until, with petals thrown back, it becomes a beautiful starry flower, not unlike an aster.

Yolk Pigment.

It is reported that a chemist abroad has succeeded in isolating the yellow pigment of the yolk of egg in a crystalline state, and finds that it is closely related to the xanthophyl of leaves. This is regarded as an important scientific discovery. To extract four grains of crude pigment the investigator employed the yolks of no less than 6,000 eggs. The crystallized pigment is known as lutein.

Pleased With Begging Letters.

When the old shah of Persia visited England in 1873, some 8,000 begging letters were posted to him during his sojourn. He was much pleased with them and felt highly honored to receive so many letters, each of which he treated as a compliment. He had all of them securely packed into a trunk and dispatched to Persia, where they were deposited in his museum.

Transporting Power of Water.

The transporting power of flowing water varies as the sixth power of the velocity. Thus if the velocity of the water is doubled, its transporting power is increased 64 fold. This explains the effect of a river in flood in carrying all things before it.

Ways of Dress Must Be Simple

Later news from Paris brings all sorts of data about established styles for the fall and winter season. First, observes a fashion critic, we are always confronted with a bewildering display of varied fashions, and the trick is to keep our heads until we see exactly what is going to stand the stress of time and selection and judgment.

There are a few canny ones who can sense this thing, but they are very few and far between. The others stand around and fear that, before long, we may all be dressing in Spanish regalia or trailing our skirts along the streets. Usually there happens a happy medium which is quite thoroughly satisfactory to all concerned, and which does not revolutionize the ways of dress so completely as may have been predicted.

So with two modes which are after-the-season creations fresh from Paris. They are about as unstartling as any two fashions could be, and, on the other hand, they are just about as smart as could be hoped for. After all, it is simplicity that counts in the long run. The French always come back to that standard, no matter what may be their little excursions into the space of a more cluttered era.

The lines are longer, to be sure, but they are simply and quietly lengthened, with every attention given to proportion and the blending of one line with another, until there results that harmony which is always satisfying and which, authoritatively handled, is becoming to whatever figure happens to wear it.

Bodies That Are Simple.

A cable from Paris, about the opening of the collection of Madeleine Vionet, says that all of her models are as simple as can be, and that they follow rather closely the lines laid down by her last season. Not much of any startling change there. Vionet is the couturiere who has been most distinctly exclusive in showing her designs. She makes her models for the wearer only. She will not consent, under any circumstances, to admit to her establishment any buyer from the trade. And the consequence is that her gowns are sought above all others, for there is some assurance then that they will not be copied and altered and distributed to every portion of the earth.

Suit of Beige Wool Ratine Trimmed With Seal.

Mme. Roland has one of the most popular models of the season, and it has nothing but straight and classic lines to make it famous. It is made of a heavy black crepe, with applied, narrow panel trimmings of black velvet, which are attached by fagoting in heavy black silk thread. The neckline is one of those that reach in an uncompromising line from shoulder to shoulder, and the belt is one of those hunky affairs that are made of a succession of black velvet cabbage roses.

This season the one salient note that has been added to the straight dress, with the exception always of wide and varied sleeves, is the belt that accentuates the waistline in the frankest manner.

Colors Are Prominent.

Colors, and brilliant colors at that, are prominent in all of the initial and in the later showings. But the messages from Paris hint that women there are just as loyal to black as they were during last summer. They cling to it as though it were the only color in the world, and it is, too, when one considers all the side lines of economy and becomingness which must necessarily be taken into account when the last word of smartness in woman's attire is being thought about.

Callot, who always produces the very most notable gowns of any season, is showing along with her gowns of flashing color, some that are all black and of the simplest draped lines. Callot always does the draped gown beautifully, but she is apt to drape it on straight lines and to forego the temptation of gathering the folds into any upward or sidelong movement. One of her evening gowns is made with a heavy black satin foundation swinging from the shoulders to a very long hemline, and following the lines of the figure quite closely as it wends its way down.

Then there is a flat cape collar across the front, falling from a straight neckline that is high. This collar and a draped apron are made of heavy embroiderings of jet and steel beads placed in a gorgeous Persian pattern. The back of the gown is practically plain, of the black satin, but the neckline is low and square, and just between the shoulder-blades is posed a thick, black velvet rose.

Cerise and Gold Brocade.

Another of Callot's gowns, just to prove that she can go to the other extreme with the greatest of ease, is made of cerise and gold brocade. A tight foundation skirt ends many inches from the ground, and is then furnished with a band of gold lace left quite transparent and almost reaching the floor. An overskirt is full and boned about the bottom, so that it gracefully keeps its bouffant shape.

It is just about as long as the underskirt, and it, too, has an edging of the same gold lace that bedecks the sister skirt. You can see what great charm the transparency against the thickness of the brocade must give, and the evenness of the hem affords a decided relief from all of the upward and downward trends that we see in that direction.

Poiret's collection in this country is causing quite a furor, because it is so decidedly different from anything else that has been shown here. He finds the picturesque note in whatever he is doing, and the costumes which he has sent to us are particularly charming in this respect.

Use Bands of Fur for Coats

Brocades for coats are a passion with Poiret. He makes the coats with long and slightly fitted waists flaring into circular, flaring skirts. On the bottoms of the skirts are narrow bands of fur, and the sleeves, which are more or less tightly fitted, have corresponding bands of fur, while the collars are straight and high, by preference covering the chins of their wearers. The brocades are in wonderful colors of old blue, silver, gold bronze and clever touches of red in all its shades. They look like some fabric filched from a museum, and they make one wonder how Poiret ever hunted them out or whether he said a charm over the weavers while they were creating them.

Poiret sends us one very interesting blue serge dress, which is gladly welcomed because we, in America, delight to have a new idea for this type of frock which we love so well. It has a long bodice which seems to have no idea of fitting, and this meets a straight hanging skirt which is fuller than those we are accustomed to see and just simply gathered under a narrow belt of the serge. So far nothing startling. The bateau neckline is then edged with a puffy band of blue fox that gives a quaint, becoming character to the gown, and in the direct center of the front of the long bodice there is an oval embroidered medallion in shades of light blue, with touches of black to make the color tell. Upward from this ornamentation and downward in a longer line there are two arrows of the same embroidery.

The sleeves are tightly fitted and long. Altogether the frock has a decidedly new air about it, and it seems to be the sort of thing that will find favor here in America, even though it is quite decidedly different from the things we have been seeing. Another blue serge has a skirt made of lengthwise folds, each about four inches wide, lapped loosely over each other and ended in points at the bottom. The skirt has quite a tailored look about it, even though the folds and the points bob quite carelessly to and fro.

FOOTWEAR IS VARIED IN STYLE

Style Creators Devise Color of Stitching to Match Milady's Gown of Any Hue.

Some brilliant stylist has discovered that magnetism and personality can be made to reveal themselves in the decoration of hands and feet. The fundamental idea is that hands with gloves, rings and fans give quite a scope to feminine charm and likewise pretty footwear has possibilities.

A creator of fashions in Paris puts a sole on the foot and makes the upper with as little leather as possible, in some instances going to the extreme of combining the sole with a bracelet and calling it a "day's creation."

Straps in themselves have permitted of the study of footwear art the like of which has not prevailed since the day of the ancient Greeks. Although black has been heralded as the fall color in footwear, style creators have taken black and varied the stitching threads in color so that if the spot of color on milady's dress is red, the shoe is stitched to match.

Veils of Feather.

Feather veils are attached to the brims of the new hats. One late example of the vogue shows a wide round hat of black panne with the veil of black ostrich hung from silver quills which encircle the under side of the brim and drop before the face below the chin line. On another hat of tete de negre panne, which is high and pointed at the front, two plumes sweep around the sides from front to back with extra length flues tied on so that a veil of feathers sweeps down to touch the shoulders.

New Dinner Frocks.

Dinner dresses are most frequently seen with the straight shoulder-to-shoulder neckline, no sleeves and a lowered waistline, sometimes bloused at the back.

SLANDERS ON MANY RACES

People of Most Nations, as Matter of Fact, Are the Reverse of Their Reputations.

The origin of national slanders is a mystery. Some one starts them, others continue them, and the rest of us accept them as gospel, and give them further currency.

Englishmen are alleged to be supershy and reserved. Our life on an island is said to be responsible. Rubbish! We have been, and are, the biggest travelers of all nations, observes a writer in London Answers. If Englishmen were shy and reserved they wouldn't have been the pioneers in colonization, empire building, conquest, commerce, and the like.

As a matter of fact, the average Englishman is supersociable, and if any proof of that is needed it is to be found in the fact that this country is, par excellence, the home of sport. Sport demands sociability. Imagine a tennis boom among "super-shy, reserved" people!

Scotsmen are alleged to be mean—unco' careful wi' the bawbees. Thousands of jokes have been built upon that slander. But, as a matter of fact, the Scot, as all who have had to do with him know, is extraordinarily generous and kind-hearted. Ask the treasurer of any hospital. There's the test.

The Irish are doubly slandered. They are alleged to be a gay, witty race, carefree and careless. This is a slander. The Irish are a sad people. All their beautiful melodies are in a minor key. "Irish humor" doesn't really exist. The Irish are really intensively serious. And as to being "careless," it is a fact that they are thrifty, clean, and supermoral.

The French are supposed to be irresponsible and excitable. An obvious slander, which the great war killed—or ought to have killed.

Then there is the "wily, unspeakable" Turk. For a fact, he is about as simple as they make 'em! The Dutch are alleged to be "stolid," and all that the term implies. It's a slander for the Dutch are very much all there! The tale might be continued, but the result would be the same, whether dealing with the "cute" Yankee, the "emotional" Welshman, the "treacherous" Spaniard, or the "gay" Italian. Slanders all!

Melba Gives Way to Youth.

Mme. Melba said at the close of a concert in Australia, a Melbourne dispatch reports, that she must now make room for younger singers.

Melba made her debut in Melbourne (her birthplace) when she was 6 years old. Owing to her father's opposition she sang only once more in public before her marriage. She was considered in those days to have greater talent as a pianist than as a singer.

When she was 20 years old she went to England, where Sir Arthur Sullivan told her: "In a year I'll put you in the 'Mikado' if your performance accords with your promise." Within a short time, however, she was a brilliant success in grand opera.

Her career in London began May 24, 1888, with a performance of "Lucia."

Melba is reputed to be very wealthy. Her jewelry alone is said to be worth $1,000,000.

Carries Aid to Miners.

Because the California mines are inaccessible to the standard mine safety railroad car, a special rescue truck has been provided by congress for that state, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The car seats ten men and carries an oxygen-breathing apparatus for each man; a supply of oxygen totaling 600 cubic feet, distributed in six cylinders, two oxygen inhalators; ten safety lamps, two army stretchers; an ample supply of regenerating material; caustic soda and sodium hydroxide, for use in oxygen breathing apparatus; a high-pressure power pump, to pump oxygen into the bottles for the breathing apparatus; a complete first-aid kit, and a 1,000-foot life line. Gas masks are not included, since they have been found useless in mine fires.

Wonderful Liberality!

Passengers in one of the sleeping cars from Hot Springs were aroused before daylight recently by the announcement of one of the passengers that he had lost his 11-carat ruby stickpin, which he asserted was worth $10,000 or more.

On demand of the passenger a telegram was sent to the St. Louis police. When policemen met the train at Union station they were informed that the pin had been found by the porter in an upper berth, a few seats from the lower which the Little Rock man occupied. The owner said the mistake was his, and gave the porter a quarter for finding the pin.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Symptoms.

"Was Mr. Grabcoin in his office when you called?"

"No, he must have been playing golf."

"Are you sure about that?"

"Reasonably sure. The office force seemed to think he wouldn't be back soon. Most of the clerks had their feet up on their desks and three stenographers were making 'dates' by telephone."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Simple Origin of Names.

To primitive man the cow seemed to "koo"—hence the animal's name. The Greeks imitated the crow's sound with the word "korax" and from this, by way of the "corow" springs our name for the bird. The cuckoo named himself.

Nature's Police Force.

The following excerpt from Fabre's "The Story Book of the Field," gives a little insight into the many beneficent uses of the commoner field animals; "The bats deliver us from a host of enemies, and they are outlawed. The mole purges the ground of vermin; the hedgehog makes war on vipers; the owl and all night birds are clever rat hunters; the adder, the toad and the lizard feed on the plunderers of our crops." Thus nature supplies the husbandman with an efficient police force.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Freedom's Beginning.

The free institutions of ancient Greece and Rome had long been dead when our Anglo-Saxon forefathers, in the little island in the North sea, began holding their witenagemot, or assembly of the wise men of the kingdom. In the early days of the Normans, when feudalism was in flower, national affairs were dealt with by a national council, composed of the high officers of state and feudal barons, and presided over by the king.—Montreal Family Herald.
