THE BEST APERIENT AND ANTI-BILIOUS MEDICINE, FOR OCCASIONAL USE.

Barker's Laxative,
OR ANTI-BILIOUS PILLS.

THE experience of many years, and testimonies of every person who have used these Pills, have confirmed them to be the best medicine for the removal of all diseases which take their origin in a disordered state of the Liver and Stomach.

They make a speedy and effectual cure of Sick Head Ache, Flatulent Distention or Fullness of the Stomach and Bowels, Indigestion, Obstructions, Obstinate Costiveness, &c., &c.

They are not, however, offered for the cure of ALL Diseases. It is absurd to suppose that one Medicine can have any such effect; but in all such cases as the preceding, these Pills are confidently recommended as affording the most essential relief.

Operating in a very easy and gentle manner, and leaving no tendency to Costiveness, they cause not the slightest pain, unless when meeting with an unusual quantity of Bile and acrid matter.

Prepared and sold, in Boxes, price 1s. 3d. and 7½d. each, by ROBERT BARKER, Druggist and Apothecary, Princess Street, Kingston; and by his Agents generally.
Kingston, May 10th, 1849.

Miranda; a tale of the French Revolution, the author of the "Trapper's Bride," &c.
The Golden Calf; or Prodigality and Speculation in the Nineteenth Century, by the author of "A new Spirit of the Age," &c. The subject of this fiction is the prodigality and speculative mania of our day; the Duke of Buckingham and Mr. Hudson being the principal persons, together with many other notables. There is much acumen in the writing, and a beautiful story to boot. The best sketch or portrait is that of Mr. D'Israeli."—London Spectator.
The Thousand and One Phantoms. To be read between Eleven o'clock and Midnight, by Alexander Dumas. "The readers of this celebrated author will find that in extent of invention, brilliancy and dramatic interest, the present work excels even the gorgeous romances of "Monte Cristo" and the "Trois Mosquetaires."
