BUFFALO, 25th.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT AND LOSS OF LIFE—EXPLOSION OF THE STEAMER TROY.

On Saturday afternoon our city was thrown into the greatest consternation by the report of the explosion of the steamer Troy in the Niagara River about two miles from Buffalo, and the probable loss of 10 or 12 lives. She was on her first trip this spring from Toledo, she was sailed by Capt. Thos. Wilkins a veteran master for the Lakes. The Engineer in charge was Levy L. Post an experienced Engineer. The Troy had been in sight of our City several hours trying to work a passage through the ice to the north of the Creek; but being unable to do so was on her way to Black-rock. Immediately before the accident she had been backed and Capt. Wilkins had just rung the bell for her to go ahead when in making one revolution the boiler burst with a tremendous explosion—the report of which was distinctly heard at the distance of several miles. Her main and upper decks were completely demolished, from the wheel house as far forward as the mast. Some four feet abaft the pilot house where were many of the passengers and crew, in that part of the boat they were terribly scalded by the escape of steam—or frightfully bruised by the falling fragments, while several were thrown over board by the explosion into the cool and swift current of the river, and among pieces of the boat and floating ice, it is impossible as yet to ascertain tha number of those thrown overboard. Several were picked up by small boats which were soon at the scene of the disaster; but it is morally certain that some must have found a watery grave. From the most reliable information we can get, we think that two men were certainly drowned. The maimed and scalded uttered the most heartrending groans and shrieks of pain and anguish, while scarcely less affecting was the grief of the relatives and friends of the dead and dying. The boiler was nearly full of water when it exploded, and the head of steam was not high. The fracture happened in the buttom plate, which is rather thin. It is a boiler said to have been taken from the steamer Fulton several years since, rather old, but thought to be perfectly safe.

Yesterday, Sunday, a Coroners Jury was called to investigate the cause of the accident We suspend any opinion until it shall be known what facts are made to appear by the enquiry. The following is a list of those ascertained to be killed:—Levi L. Post, Engineer, Nicholas S. Eland, Peter Zeland, Wm. Worthington, Daniel Buckley, Thomas Grant, Andrew Martin.

We do not include in the killed the name of Dr. Ryal Wright of Syracuse who has not been found. He was probably thrown into the river and drowned. A person answering to his description was seen clinging to a cake of ice and afterwards went down.

The Coroners inquest meets again this morning at 10 o'clock.

The steamer Canada, Capt. Willughy, succeeded in breaking her way thro' the ice this morning and is now in Buffalo, harbor being the first arrival this season.
