THE GALT BANK ROBBERY.

STARTLING DEVELOPMENTS IF TRUE.

[From the Leader of Tuesday.]

Yesterday the Chief of Police of Hamilton visited this city, and after having consultation with Capt. Prince, had a warrant issued for the arrest of patrol Sergeant Mack and ex-Sergt.-Major McDowell, both of the city police force, on a charge of complicity in the recent attempted bank robbery at Galt. Mack was then into custody, and will be conveyed to Galt this morning for examination. It is alleged that he visited the residence of that notorious character, 'Bristol Bill,' on Bishop street, in this city, but in explanation of this Mack states that he was never at the house but once, and that was under instructions of the late Police Magistrate, Mr. Boomer, but that he could not see 'Boston Bill,' as he kept out of the way, fearing that Mack would arrest him. It is also hinted that Dr. Davis, who is at present in jail in this city, has 'peached,' the result of which is the arrest of Mack. McDowell, it seems, was not at home when the officer called upon him to arrest him. It is said, however, that he will be furthcoming when the trial comes on, but that he not wish to run the risk of being confined in jail for several weeks or months as the case might be. We clip the following from the Hamilton Times of yesterday on the subject:—

The latest development in this prolific case is secured through another accomplice of 'Bristol Bill,' who has peached and let out out on the whole party. This individual makes a statement under oath to the following effect. In September last he was in Hamilton, at the Black Horse Inn, York street kept by George Seddons, and there with Bristol Bill, Bill Clues, Dr. Gustaff, and one Smith, alias Wright, and Ben Lamb, of Galt, planned the robbery of the Gore Bank in Galt. Bristol Bill and Clues, in the character of drovers, visited Galt and reconnoitered the locality. The job was put up by Ben Lamb, and its execution left to Gustaff, Bristol Bill and Clues. The former remained in Galt, and kept Bristol Bill posted as to the proper time for completing the robbery, and in general details. Bristol Bill then paid a second visit to Galt with blank keys, wax &c., and took impressions of the locks; returned to Hamilton, and had the keys manufactured and ready for use. Another visit to Galt was paid by Bill, and one night, at a late hour, Gustaff and Bill entered the Bank and discovered that a young man named Harris was sleeping in a room over the bank building, so that any noise which might be made would be detected. To get rid of this difficulty, Gustaff insisted on killing the clerk; but Bristol Bill restrained him, at the same time saying that he never as yet had taken the blood of a human being, and never would. Gustaff, seeing that Bill, would not assist in the murderous deed, agreed to leave They then locked the doors, and next day Bristol Bill returned to Hamilton. Gustaff, however, remained in Galt and made the acquaintance of Harris, and arranged to have him invited to a ball at Preston. On a certain night, Bristol Bill, Clues and Wright visited Galt again—Seddons having procured them horses and conveyances from the livery stables of Mr. Mathews, in Hamilton—and all proceeded to carry out the project. Bristol Bill was to do the inside work, while Bill Clues was to watch outside, and Gustaff and Smith were to have the horses in readiness. Gustaff, however, could not be present, but went to Toronto, and the following day administered the poisonous drug to Mr. McKinnon, in connection with Davis, being short of money to carry out the Gore Bank burglary. Seddons was dubious of success in the bank robbery, and was unwilling to furnish them with more money, he having at first agreed however, to give them all required, and was to get $2,000 more than the rest of the villians in the 'ring' for his share. The detection of Gustaff's poisoning enterprise at Toronto necessitated his immediate departure from the country, which accounts for his absence at the time the bank robbery scheme was carried into effect. It is unnecessary to repeat the circumstances of the attempted robbery, and the arrests that followed.

The most important point in the developments now brought to light, is the implication of prominent members of the Toronto police, and even an Alderman of the city, in the villianous enterprise of Bristol Bill, with the design of sharing in the plunder. During the time that the robbery of the Bank at Galt was contemplated, Bristol Bill was intimately associated with a number of the Toronto police force, including Seargeant McDowell and Detective Mack, and also with a prominent member of the City Council, whose name we withhold at present for prudential reasons. The robber chief was in constant communication with these parties, who kept him posted by letters which were addressed to him as 'T. Hubbard, care of G. Seddons, Black Horse Inn, Hamilton.' It was understood that each was to receive a fair percentage on the process of the Galt and other robberies contemplated. One of the parties referred to gave warning to Bristol Bill when the Toronto police were endeavoring to arrest him for his participation in the burglary at Williams & Co.'s Bank at Pittsburg, Penn., and Bristol Bill, being one of those who could take a hint, moved his quarters from Bishop Street, Toronto. After the failure of the Gore Bank robbery, he was secreted in that city, in the faithless policeman's house, for three or four days. The day after McKinnon was poisoned, Bristol Bill walked down the south side of Adelaide street, in open day, wearing a black moustache, and took up his quarters with the aforesaid party; and there is a person now in the Toronto gaol, who saw Bristol Bill frequently taking an evening stroll, in company with an Alderman of the city.

FURTHER ABOUT M'DOWELL.

A rumor was current in the city last evening, which, if it prove correct, will be very provoking, though not altogether unexpected. McDowell, who is now a fugitive from justice, has, it is surmised, made good his escape from the officers of the law. Yesterday morning, a person answering to his description wearing a slouched hat, which concealed his face a good deal, took passage on the Grand Trunk Railway cars at Duffin's Creek. A gentleman who saw him, subsequently expressed it as his belief that this man was the ex-policeman. And, having made good his retreat so far, it is to be feared he will pass the lines before he can be detected. It is to be hoped he will yet be nabbed—for with his apprehension, we might expect some developments which would startle our citizens not a little. There is a possibility, of course, that this rumor may have been floated to deceive the officers, who are in the alert, and facilitate his escape in another direction. Until it is fully confirmed, we have no doubt, the efforts now making for his capture will not be relaxed.—Globe of yesterday.

ITEMS OF NEWS.

THE QUARREL WITH THE POPE.—The quarrel between the Pope and the Baron Meyendorff, Russian Charge d'Affaires, bids fair, after all, to end in a diplomatic rupture between the two Courts. The Pope continues to be extremely irritated against the Baron and his Government, and persists in declaring that a consulate would be quite sufficient, and that he would rather not have a Russian legation in Rome. There is something significant in Cardinal Antonelli—usually a staunch ally of St. Petersburg—allowing some Polish emigrants to perform a funeral service, commemorative of the insurrection of 1863, in the church of St. Agatha belonging to the Irish College. The service was conducted with great pomp, and the priests, as well as all the students of the college, fraternized warmly with the Poles.

BURGLARS AT WORK IN SHANNONVILLE—CHURCH AND STORE ROBBED.—On Wednesday evening last, 21st inst., the Episcopal Church, Shannonville, was entered by burglars, and a robbery of everythiag portable effected. Fortunately there were no valuables for the robbers to carry off, but such articles as they could find they appear to have appropriated. The clergyman's surplice they rolled up, also the covering and cloth trimmings from the pulpit, and the carpets from the pews, &c, five chairs, some lamp chimneys, oil, wick, and other articles of little value. The robbery was not discovered till Sunday morning, when the sexton went to prepare the church for service. On Saturday night the same parties, it is supposed, entered the store of Mr. W. Young, and made a selection of his dry goods and groceries. After minutely inspecting his stock, they settled upon certain cloths and other articles, and then proceeded to regale themselves with the choicest potables he had on hand. Thence they visited his dressing-room, and helped themselves to such articles of his wearing apparel as his wardrobe afforded. Mr. Young's loss amounted to about $300. The constables are after certain suspected parties, and from the latest intelligence is a fair way of catching them.—Hastings Chronicle.

FARMING IN CANADA.

The 'Genesee Farmer' gives to the agriculturists of the Upper Province credit for superiority over the wheat growers of the Genessee Valley. It says:—

'You may think it strange, but I question if the best farmers in America are not to be found in Upper Canada. They beat us in raising wheat; their barley is certainly superior to ours in quality, and I think the same of oats. In the cultivation of root crops we are nowhere. Don't get angry. We beat them in raising corn, and in all crops which partake rather of a commercial than a strictly agricultural character. We are willing to raise small crops if we can get large profits; which a Canadian farmer, partaking largely of the Scotch and English pure conservative character continues on in the even tenor of his way. He is not so constantly looking for some easier method of earning a living. He is a farmer, and his father was a farmer before him, and he intends to live and die a farmer. If the midge destroys his wheat, he does not, as we did in this section, propose to turn the whole country into one grand pear and apple orchard. He looks out for some variety that will ripen sufficiently early to escape the ravages of the insect.

The entries of wheat at the Provincial Show are three times more numerous than at our own state fair, even when held in the centre of the wheat growing districts, and the number of people who crowd around the samples shows the interest which is felt in the matter. The Diehl wheat attracted at once the notice of Canadian farmers, and one of their agricultural societies sent a delegation to Indiana to inquire into its merits. They were so well pleased with it that they purchased 900 bushels for seed. Such enterprise is commendable. No wonder they beat us at raising wheat.'

We hope our farmers will continue to deserve such commendation, coming as it does from at least an impartial, if not an unfriendly source.

PETROLEUM IN EUROPE.—It is stated that petroleum has been discovered in Hanover, and capital is being privately subscribed in England to raise the oil from the wells, which are reported to be numerous. The constantly increasing importance of the trade in mineral oils at Marseilles, too, attracts attention to the oil deposits of Europe. It is now considered certain that, in a period more or less short, the old continent will not be tributary to America for mineral oils for lighting.

This year more vessels will leave Dundee for the Greenland whale fishing than for some years back and in their crews and equipments are of course equal, if not superior, to the fleets of former years. There are 11 vessels in all, but of these one vessel belongs to London and another is an American.
