FRIDAY MORNING, JAN'Y. 17, 1851.

THE INTERNATIONAL MAGAZINE for January, 1851. Stringer & Townsend, New York; John Duff, Kingston. $3 per annum. Large 8vo. pp. 144.

THE more the reader sees of the International Magazine, the more he likes it. It is really a better periodical than "Harper's," and that is speaking whole libraries. It is of the same size as its rival—quite as well got up—is fully as fresh and invigorating,—with this great advantage, its articles are longer;—not so much minced meat in the "International" as in "Harper's." The number now on our table contains extracts from the best English Magazines, together with two or three original novelettes, including one from the inexhaustless pen of Mr. James. A long and excellent article on Authors and Books, apparently written for the "International," gives peculiar zest to this Number. A pretty tale from the French, a kind of paraphrase of the "Ephesian Matron, called the Sliding Scale of Inconsolables," is clever and piquant for so worn-out a subject. "My Novel," by Sir E. Bulwer Lytton; "The Mystic Vial," from the Dublin University Magazine; and "The Count of Monte Leone," a translation from the French, are all advanced a stage; and the whole Number is full of interest. The publishers of the older American Periodicals, such as pretend to give original matters, are becoming jealous of the success of "Harper's" and the "International," but they have an easy remedy in their own hands. Let them take as much pains to make the intellectual qualities of their "Books" vie with their outward embellishments, and their cause for envy will be at once removed.

KINGSTON CITY MISSIONS.

The first anniversary of this Institution was held at the City Hall, according to advertisement, on Tuesday evening. As in the case of the Bible Society, on Monday night, the Hall was filled with a large and most attentive audience.

Lieut. Col. Laurence having been called to the Chair, the Rev. Mr. Burns opened the proceedings with prayer; after which the Chairman, in a few appropriate remarks, pointed out the importance of this Society, and the great and good effects which had always resulted in favor of religious improvement, wherever City Missions had been established. He then called upon the Rev. Mr. Lorimer to read the Report of the past year. Our Reporter had not arrived in time to hear the Report, but we understand that it was highly interesting, showing forth in strong and lively colors, the good results of preaching the Gospel from house to house; of carrying the immortal truths into the hovels of the poor, the ignorant and the destitute; lighting up the darkness, dispelling the gloom, and shedding a halo of hope around where was nought found before but squalidness, vice, misery and degradation.

The Rev. Mr. Fenwick moved, seconded by Capt. Stace, that the Report be printed, which was carried unanimously. The Rev. gentleman prefaced his motion with a few remarks characterized by deep feeling; and Capt. Stace, in seconding the motion, also pronounced an impressive and eloquent eulogium on the labors of the Society during the past year, and the unseen benefits which this preaching of the Gospel in the streets and lanes of our city must produce to the interests of Religion.

The Rev. Mr. Gordon then moved the second resolution:

Resolved—2. That it appears to this meeting that visitation from house to house to make known the Gospel of the grace of God, is urgently needed, and in a manner eminently calculated, by the Divine blessing, to benefit the neglected portion of cities and towns.

The Rev. Mr. Gordon in proposing this resolution, made some very happy and feeling allusions to the pleasure it gave him and all the servants of Christ, to see so many of her Majesty's Officers, night after night during this week, standing on that platform, fighting the battles of the Cross, side by side with its ministers. (Great sensation and much applause.) "Yes, my Christian friends," pursued the Rev. gentleman, "it is a noble example; it is a holy example; it is an honor to the British Army to see it, and to know that the example has been fruitful in good results in the regiments which are officered by these gentlemen. Experience of all ages bears witness to the fact, that the Christian soldier is always the coolest and the bravest man in the day of battle, and the best conducted in the hour of peace."

Mr. N. M'Leod in seconding the last motion confirmed and coincided in what had already been said, and trusted that increased efforts would be made during the ensuing year to extend the benefits and usefulness of the Institution. The motion was then carried unanimously.

The third resolution was then put by the Rev. Mr. Harper, seconded by Capt. Haultain, as follows:

Resolved—3. That this meeting desires to express its devout thankfulness to Almighty God, for the benewal of his blessing on the Kingston City Mission during the first year of its existence—and desires also, in dependence on Divine aid, to seek for still greater increase and success during the ensuing year.

Both Mr. Harper and Capt. Haultain occupied the attention of the audience with short statements of the great utility of the Institution, and the latter concluded with a most eloquent and earnest exortation to all Christians present to promote its objects by all the means in their power; but especially by contributing liberally, or in his own emphatic words, "Shew their Christian love heavy by making their purses light."

On the motion of the Rev. Mr. Reid, seconded by Mr. J. J. Haines, it was Resolved—4. That the following gentlemen be the Officers and Committee for the ensuing year, with power to add to their number—

President, Lt. Col. Lawrence—Vice-Presidents, Rev. John Machar, D.D., Rev. Samuel D. Rice—Secretaries, Rev. Alex. Lorimer, Neil M'Leod, Esq.—Treasurer, Wm. Ferguson, Esq.—Committee, All evangelical Ministers resident in Kingston who co-operate with the Society—Captain Stace, R.A., Captain Haultain, R.A., Captain Desborough, R.A., Dr. Foster, R.E., Messrs. Thos. Mason, Geo. Davidson, Jas. Stewart, Geo. Brown, Geo. Hardy, Wm Massie, Geo. Marriott, J. J. Haines, Wm. Holgate, John Counter, Thos. M'Cutchin, Daniel M'Leod, Robert McCammon, Robert M'Faul.

Moved by Captain Desborough, seconded by Mr. Ferguson, and Resolved—5. That the cordial thanks of this meeting be given to Colonel Lawrence for so kindly presiding on this occasion.

The Doxology was then sung and the benediction being pronounced, the meeting terminated.

THE RELIGIOUS TRACT SOCIETY.

THE anniversary meeting of this Society took place at the City Hall, on Wednesday evening; and altho' the evening was very wet, and the walking very bad, the Hall was filled and the interest on the part of the public in those Christian meetings does not at all appear to flag. The proceedings were as interesting as the preceding meetings, and were listened to with great attention by all. We have got a list of the Officers appointed for the ensuing year, but we suppose they will be nearly the same as the above.

SHIPWRECK OF AN EAST INDIAMAN.—On Saturday, information was received at Lloyd's of the total loss of a French Indiaman, La Meuse, on the night of the 5th inst., between Whitstand Bay and Cape Cornwall. By the exertions of the coast-guard and policemen of Whitstand Bay, who launched a number of boats through heavy surf, the crew and passengers were safely taken on shore, with the exception of one cabin passenger, who was drowned in attempting to jump into the long-boat, and leaped short of his mark.

Soon after the boats had left, the ship went to pieces, and the cargo, consisting of silks, raw cotton, indigo, assam, tea, drugs, and saltpetre, is being washed ashore. The ship struck upon the rocks close to the bay, unshipping her rudder, when she became unmanageable, and was driven ashore. The cargo is valued at £80,000.—Daily News.

CHILD BURNT.—A melancholy accident occurred on Monday last, by which a little girl, about four years and a half old, daughter to William Perpoint, blacksmith, at Mr. P. Smith's paper mill, at Port Neuf, lost her life. The mother went out to get water, and, on returning, found the child's clothes all in a blaze. It lived 30 hours in a state of awful suffering.—Gazette.

SALE OF A WIFE.—The Stockport Mercury tells a strange tale of a sale which is alleged to have recently taken place at the New Inn, Horwich End, in the county of Derby, between George C., a [illegible] to a gentleman in the neighborhood, and Elisha G., cattle dealer, by the said G. offering to sell the other his wife, for the sum of £5 1s., which was the more readily agreed to in consequence of the purchaser being a widower, and very desirous to obtain so fair a partner for so trifling a sum. After some consultation, it was arranged between them that the purchaser should go to claim his purchase on the following Monday, which he did accordingly, and on entering the house he made known to Mrs. G. the purport of his visit. The unfortunate wife gave vent to a flood of tears at being thus shamefully disposed of.

PAPAL AGGRESSION.

The city of London, the University of Oxford, and the University of Cambridge sent their several deputations to Windsor Castle, on Tuesday, Dec. 10, to lay before the Queen the expression of their indignation at the endeavor by the Bishop of Rome to exercise a power which the realm of England has almost abjured.

The Corporation having advanced to the royal presence, drew up, and the Right Hon. I. S. Wortley, the Recorder, read the address, which expressed the utmost surprise and indignation at the Bishop of Rome's attempt "to partition this country into pretended dioceses of the Church of Rome," hoped that such measures would be taken as might be proper in the circumstances, and condemned the Puseyite tendencies and practices of the Church of England in very plain terms. The Queen is described by the reporters as having listened with great attention to the address. At several portions of it she slightly inclined her head, as if in token of assent; and when it had been handed by her to Sir G. Grey, read, "in a clear, sweet voice, the following most gracious answer, every word of which was caught up with the greatest eagerness":

"I receive with much satisfaction your loyal and affectionate address.

"I heartily concur with you in your grateful acknowledgments of the many blessings conferred upon this highly favored nation, and in your attachment to the Protestant faith, and to the great principles of civil and religious liberty, in the defence of which the city of London has ever been conspicuous.

"That faith and those principles are so justly dear to the people of this country, that I could justly rely on their cordial support in upholding and maintaining them against any danger with which they may be threatened, from whatever quarter it may proceed."

When the reply had been handed to the corporation, Sir P. Laurie, the mover, and Mr. Alderman Farebrother, the seconder of the address, had the honor of being presented to her Majesty by the Lord Mayor, after which the deputation retired.

The deputation from the Court of Common Council were next introduced, and their address was also read by the Recorder. It was considerably longer than that of the Corporation, but did not differ materially in substance.

Here was the same strong condemnation of the Papal bull, and an equally strong expression of alarm and regret at the Romanizing tendencies of the Puseyite portion of the Church. Her Majesty gave the following reply:

"I sincerely thank you for your renewed assurance of unalterred attachment to my person and throne, and to the welfare of this country.

"Your tried and consistent adherence to the equal enjoyment of civil rights by all classes of your fellow subjects entitles the expression of your sentiment on the present occasion to peculiar consideration.

"You may be assured of my earnest desire and firm determination, under God's blessing, to maintain unimpaired the religious liberty which is justly prized by the people of this country, and to uphold as its surest safeguard, the pure and scriptural worship of the Protestant faith, which has been happily established in this land."

The deputation having retired after the usual ceremonials, the City Lieutenancy were introduced, in all the honors of their full uniform, and presented their address, which contained no allusion to Puseyism, but called for "such further enactments as may be found adequate to the present emergency," in the event of the law being insufficient to deal with "the attempt at usurpation by the See of Rome." Her Majesty's reply was in the following words:

"Your renewed assurances, on the present occasion, of devoted loyalty and affection to my person and Government are highly gratifying to me.

"It will continue to be, as it hitherto has been, my earnest endeavor, in the exercise of the power and authority entrusted to me, as the supreme governor of this realm, to maintain the independence and uphold the constitutional liberties of my people against all aggression and encroachment.

"The City Lieutenants then retired, and joined their corporate brethren in the Waterloo Hall, where a substantial luncheon was prepared for them. The deputation from Oxford was headed by the Duke of Wellington. The Address, which was read by the Duke, expressed the "steadfast adherence to the principles which called the house of Brunswick to the British throne," recognized the Queen as "the head of the Church, "under God," protested against the Papal intrusion, professed their "faithful adherence to the principles, doctrines and discipline of our Reformed Church," and, finally, assured her Majesty that it would be their earnest endeavor to train up the youth entrusted to their care "in faithful attachment to the truths of Holy Scripture as set forth in the articles and formularies of our Reformed Church." Her Majesty's reply was in the following terms:

"I accept, with much satisfaction, the renewed proof afforded by your address of your attachment and loyalty to my person and Government, and of your steadfast adherence to the principles of the constitution.

"It has been, and will continue to be, my endeavor to maintain civil and religious liberty, the property of our Reformed Church, the supreme government of which, under God, is by law confided to me, and it is highly gratifying to me to be assured of your faithful adherence to its principles, doctrine and discipline.

"While I cordially concur in the wish that all classes may more widely enjoy the free exercise of their religion, you may rely on my determination to uphold alike the rights of my Crown and the independence of my people against all aggression and encroachments of any foreign power.

"Your earnest endeavor, in the discharge of your important duties, to train up the youth entrusted to your care in faithful attachment to the truths of Holy Scripture, cannot fail, under God's blessing, to have a powerful effect in strengthening the defences of our Protestant faith, and in preserving inviolate the privileges which are justly dear to the people of this country."

The deputation from Cambridge was next introduced.

The address was read by Prince Albert. It contained no allusion to Puseyism, nor, indeed, anything of a remarkable character. The Queen, having received the address from Prince Albert, and having given it into the custody of the Secretary of State, proceeded to read the following reply, which was most anxiously listened to. Her Majesty read it with great deliberation, and with decided accents:

"I thank you for your loyal and dutiful address.

"I fully participate in your expression of gratitude to Almighty God for the blessings which He has been pleased to bestow upon this country, and I rejoice in the proofs which have been given of the loyalty and unshaken attachment of the English people to the principles enacted at the Reformation.

"While it is my earnest wish that complete freedom of conscience should be enjoyed by all classes of my subjects, it is my constant aim to uphold the just privileges and extend the usefulness of the Church established by law in this country, and to secure to my people the full possession of their ancient rights and liberties."

PASSING BURGLARY.—On Saturday night or Sunday morning, the shop occupied by Mr. Wm. Smith, watchmaker, was broken open, and two clocks taken therefrom. The robber or robbers had tried various expedients for effecting an entrance into the premises before they succeeded, which they at last effected by wrenching off a part of the shutter and making a passage through one of the large panes. The thieves no doubt extracted a rich booty by the number of watches duly exposed to view at the shop window, but in this expectation, they were inherently disappointed. Mr. Smith being in the habit of carrying home with him every night, such articles as are tempting to easy removal. It is expected that the robbers must have been disturbed while engaged in the robbery, probably by the alarm caused by the fire in Mr. McCrea's premises, otherwise they might have made a more profitable speculation. The whole amount of their booty did not not exceed ten dollars. Although the police have been on the alert, no trace of the robbers has been discovered.—News.

We are requested to inform the numerous inquirers for the new edition of the Provincial Justice, that the work is now in a very forward state, and we hope shortly to announce its issue from the press.

MASONIC ENTERTAINMENT.—We have been requested to intimate that on Friday evening, the 17th inst., the brethren of the Shawed Lodge 232 E. R., entertained brother E. Moss, Treasurer of the Lodge, to a sumptuous dinner at Mrs. Meek's hotel, previous to his departure for England.—About 7 o'clock the brethren of the Lodge and a number of brethren of other lodges met down to dinner, which was served in brother Meek's usual good style. The very worshipful brother W. M. Rowe presided as Chairman, and the very worshipful brother R. Nugent as Vice-Chairman. After the cloth was removed the Chairman gave the usual Masonic Toasts, which was drunk with all the honors. The brethren do not separate until 12 o'clock, highly delighted with the evening's entertainment. Brother E. Moss carries with him the hearty good wishes of the Masonic fraternity for his safe return to Montreal.

Russell vs. The Gore District Mutual Assurance Company.—The cross examination of Fraser, the principal witness for the defence, who swore positively that he had been instigated by Mr. Russell to set fire to his factory at Ancaster, was entered upon by counsel for the plaintiff, for the purpose of showing that he had been guilty of perjury on his first examination in that he knew nothing of the cause of the fire, which he subsequently evinced by affirming under oath that he had set fire to the building himself. Evidence was then brought to show that there was no appearance of any premeditated plan for causing the destruction of the building—that it originated in one of the chimneys at the top of which the fire was first seen—that although the fire was very strong, the cast remained under it in the chief chimney, whereas it was burnt completely out of the chimney which was seen on fire. Proof was also given that the fire was accidental, and the defence set up by the Company was upheld. The learned Judge in summing up informed the Jury that the evidence of Fraser was not entitled to consideration, and that they must find a verdict on the testimony of the other witnesses. After an absence of 25 minutes the Jury returned into Court with a verdict for the plaintiff for £200.

The Chief of Police seized, from different bakers of this city, 326 loaves of bread, equal to 783 lbs., being of light weight, and distributed the same amongst the charitable institutions.

CONSOLATION AMID CONTROVERSY.

Amid these controversial storms,
One slight consolation pleases—
Their ink, there's not an grave Bull,
For Roman Bears, or British Bread.

Suppose this queen of Addresses
Had in a Vatican been bred, but then's,
It would have added one more story
To Pentecostism's annals gory.

We've now some sharpish mutual slanging,
But, thereof be thanked, there is no hanging:
No axe, no chopping-block, no drawing,
But only just a little jawing.

On Temple Bar no heads are stuckin',
Against Queen's supremacy for looking;
On London Bridge we see no quarters
Of traitors cut up into martyrs.

There's no Jack Ketch his business plying,
People beheading, disembowelling, frying,
Punch, and he says it without taunting,
Does all the cutting up and roasting.

EXTRACTS FROM THE IRISH HUE AND CRY.

Tony Gowan is advertised as having lost "A Pup with a very long tail, and a black spot on the top of its nose, that curls up inward."

A Cow is described as "very difficult to walk, and is no use to any one but the owner, with one horn much longer than the other."

John Hawkins is alluded to as having "a pair of quick grey eyes, with blue or no whatever, and a Roman nose, that has a great difficulty in looking anyone in the face."

Betsy Waterson is accused of having "absconded with a chest of drawers and a cock and hen, and has red hair and a broken tooth, none of which are her own."

The Manager of the Savings' Bank at Dungannery, and Gentleman, is spoken of in these terms:—"He had on, when last seen, corduroy breeches, with a tremendous squint behind the wrong bit wrong, besides an affected lisp, which he endeavors to conceal with a pair of gold spectacles."

A burglar has his portrait taken in the following manner:—"He has little or no hair, but black on a turned-up nose, which is dyed black to conceal its greenness."

THE PREMIER'S LETTER-WRITER TO THE POPE.

Mr. Punch, as private and confidential Secretary to the Premier, begs to transmit the subjoined letter, together with a more formal official communication, by the ordinary medium of conveyance, to his Holiness:—

"Downing Street, Dec. 14, 1850.

"My Dear Sir,

"I wish to address you—plain Mistah Pennett—as speedily plain John Russell. My object in writing this note is, to resolve the diplomatic message accompanying it perfectly clear to you; so that there shall be no mistake about it. Of course you are aware, by this time, of the violent excitement which has been occasioned among us by your division of England into dioceses. Do not suppose that this was in the least degree caused by my letter, directed to the country through the Bishop of Durham. On the contrary, to that letter alone it is owing, that the excitement was not much more violent. It had not written it, I don't know what would have happened, and I know not what will happen if I do not fulfil the pledge it contains. I have as good as promised the people legislation, by abolishing your bishops' temporal titles. That has, comparatively, quieted them. I must keep my promise, or be necessarily overthrown, or you must take the affair out of my hands, by revoking your bull, and withdrawing your bishops to Melipotamus, and Utopia, and Jerusalem.

"As Vicars Apostolic, or whatever else you may please to call them except bishops of places in England, there is no objection at all to their remaining here. Our people don't wish to persecute them in the slightest manner, or to prevent them from preaching and teaching their peculiar doctrines with perfect freedom—but the British public, mind you, will not have those doctrines preached and taught under what appears to be an unconstitutional approval.

"Now, my dear Sir, you must see that to call a Mr. Sibondy, Archbishop of Westminster, is nothing more nor less of a trick than making use of Westminster Hall to name to indorse a bill. So with the rest of your bishoprics throughout England.—I rather from specifying these transactions with the means which I should be justified in applying to them—but really, my dear Sir, I must say that this kind of thing won't do—and you cannot be allowed to take the liberties with our credit. Understand, once for all, that John Bull is resolved to be a bull to himself—and let me recommend you—I speak verbatim, not as an expositor—to draw in those horns of yours, or else you will place me between those of a very unpleasant dilemma. Believe me to be, my dear Sir,

"Yours, as you behave yourself,

"John Russell.

Bishop of Rome."
