THE CUBAN EXPEDITION.

Arrest and Execution of Lopez!

The Cincinnati Republican Extra of yesterday says, that the Cuban Expedition has failed. Lopez has been arrested and Executed. At a meeting of the passengers on board the Cherokee, Resolutions were passed condemnatory of the course pursued by Mr. Owen the American Consul, "declaring that he has forfeited every right to be regarded as an American Citizen." Great excitement prevails in almost every part of the Union.

CONCERT AT THE COURT HOUSE!

SIR WILLIAM H. DON!!

THE HERON FAMILY!!!

Our citizens are indebted to Mr. Bernard for the first appearance (in this city) of SIR WILLIAM DON, the celebrated Scotch Comedian, and the re-appearance of the HERON FAMILY, at the Court House THIS EVENING. The talented Heron Sisters have already won the "golden opinions" of the public, not only here, but in every other place where they have appeared; and the simple announcement of their intention to perform, should be sufficient, of itself, to ensure them a bumper house. Sir William Don, is represented by the Press as an accomplished Comedian; and the characters in which he is advertised to appear, are those best suited to his peculiar Dramatic talent. We are rather taken by surprise, in regard to this announcement, and have only time to refer the reader to the following critique from the Rochester Daily Democrat, promising that few of our citizens will debar themselves of the pleasure of being present at the Concert and Dramatic Entertainment of to-night.

CORINTHIAN HALL.

The performance last night was very good, and attended by a large and fashionable audience, who will doubtless be glad to hear that the Heron Family has been again engaged for two nights. We congratulate Mr. Bernard, in having effected an engagement with Sir William H. Don, Bart., whose fame has come before him from the United States and Montreal papers. The young Scotch Baronet appears this evening in his celebrated character of Aminadab Sleek, in the "Serious Family." We copy the following from the New York Herald; and as Sir William remains with us only two nights, we have little doubt that the Hall will be crowded.

"Sir William Don, who has been so successful upon the stage in England, is a young gentleman of more than common height, being some inches over six feet from the ground! He is the son of Sir Alexander Don of Newtyle, who died when the present Sir William was an infant. The father left a fine property and splendid mansion on the banks of the Eden, in Scotland, near Kings, and not far from the romantic spot where Thompson, the author of the "Seasons," was born.

It was in this romantic region that the early youth of Sir William was passed, and here it was—particularly after his education at Eaton College, under the example of his uncle, who was a great lover of the turf and chase—that Sir William exhibited a taste for the sports of the field, and became the theme of that region for his prowess in difficult feats of horsemanship. Selecting the large fortune of his father, he was able to gratify those tastes which are always more or less cultivated by the sons of the nobility in Great Britain, and his proficiency was for him great distinction for skill, daring and accomplishments. His mother was considered in Scotland a great beauty, in her youthful days, and is now named among modern belles, though she has passed the fascinating period of life, and is married to Colonel Sir Maxwell Wallace, now residing in Yorkshire. Sir William is the grand-son of Lady Gloucaine, and is heir to the title and estates of the Earl.

In this Republican country the enquiry may be made, why a Baronet should adopt for a profession the difficult path of the Stage. This question is easier asked than answered. The love of the art—a taste for literature—a belief that it is not the field for more unchristianness, heart burnings, spleen, ignorant envy, and malice, than any other profession—a desire to set an example of high practical value to the professors of the art—to correct abuses—a wish to gratify a sympathy for a profession not too much respected, by its own members—these, and many other considerations, may inspire any gifted man with an ambition to try his fortunes on the stage. It is enough for us to know without philosophizing on this, to know that the phenomenon is amongst us—that this evening he will give us a "taste of his quality," with all that urbanity of manner, cleanliness, and comicality so fully commended upon by the English journals."

☞ TELEGRAPH.—Owing to an interruption on the line last night, we received no Report from any quarter.

NEWS FROM THE CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

The news just arrived by the Pregentin, with dates from the Cape up to the 6th of July, is not of a satisfactory nature. I will endeavor to describe succinctly the actual state of affairs, which is undoubtedly very alarming. The various accounts up to the 31st May left Col. Mackinnon with 2,000 men, just returned to King William's Town, after an extensive patrol in the Amatola mountains. About this period the Kaffir Chiefs, probably regarding Colonel Mackinnon's return to King William's Town as an inglorious retreat, gave their people orders to enter the Colony on all sides, and submit on any plunder that they could lay hold of during the winter, which had set in with great severity. This offensive warfare has been carried on with great success by the Kaffir Chiefs. Magoman took possession of the Kat River settlement, and parties of 50 or 100 crept clandestinely into the British territory from all sides, and committed frightful havock among the flocks and herds of the Colonists. Many lives were lost in attempting to repel the inroads of the plunderers. All that Sir Harry Smith could do was to send out patrols along the Keiskamma, and endeavor to intercept the booty before it reached the frontier. The patrols have just sufficed to prevent the Kaffirs from overrunning the country en masse; but any idea of the British troops acting upon the offensive, is a delusion. To Sir Harry Smith, the incursions of the Kaffirs have appeared so serious, that it was believed that he intended to head a patrol himself for two or three weeks, giving out that he hoped to bring the war to a close by some brilliant exploit. No military man can entertain such a belief. But this position of affairs about the Keiskamma River is not the worst feature of the case. An insurrection has broken out in a wholly different quarter, at Theopolis, near the sea, in Lower Albany. There, on the 31st of May, the treacherous Hottentots fell suddenly upon the Fingoes, who resided near the station, and slaughtered them. They then marched off with all the property they could collect towards Buchanan's River. This alarming news was sent flew to Major-General Somerset, at Graham's Town, and although he had plenty to do to watch the Kat settlement, on the north, he immediately detached 300 men to crush this movement, which had no doubt been concerted between the Kat River people and the Hottentots at Theopolis. This troops fell in with some of the rebels, and after a desperate conflict drove them into a swamp—seven of the natives being killed.—General Somerset now came up with 600 men and surrounded the rebels in a dense bush in a bend of the Kariega River. Through our mismanagement, or the dexterity of the natives, the rebels contrived to elude the vigilance of our troops, and the whole made their escape by some unguarded outlet, the wagons and cattle falling into our hands. Now, looking at the spot where this untoward affair took place, it seems clear that the whole country is in the hands of the enemy, otherwise these rebels could not have escaped into Kaffirland. After such repeated treachery, it of course became necessary, on the part of the authorities, to disarm the other Hottentots about Albany. It seems certain that a wide spread conspiracy has been formed to expel the British from the frontier districts, and to establish an independent commonwealth. In the Province of Uitenhage there is equal disaffection, and the plague-spot of rebellion has infected every district. A European force had been embodied in Graham's Town, and the frontier districts were being guarded by various bodies of troops, which necessary services cripple the power of Sir Harry Smith, and render it quite impossible to strike a concentrated blow at the savages, which might have a moral effect in bringing about a peace. To crown all these troubles, the Hottentot levies from the Western districts, whose term of enlistment is about to expire, have refused to re-enlist, and insist upon returning to their homes. At the North-eastern frontier the Tambookies are committing frightful ravages. In fact, if the natives could but concert a combined movement, I see nothing to prevent the utter annihilation of every European in Kaffraria. The latest intelligence from Natal is to the 12th June, from Pietermaritzburg.—One hundred Europeans were being enrolled with the alleged purpose of crossing to Kaffraria by land to aid Sir H. Smith. But to suppose that such an insignificant force could traverse the country in safety, is a wild absurdity. Panda had offered to march an army to assist the British, but Governor Pine had promptly and very wisely declined. Natal is represented to be quiet, but the fact is, we have no details of a recent date to inform us of what is going on in that distant quarter.

THE TIMBER DUTIES.

Despatch in answer to the Joint Address of the Provincial Legislature to Her Majesty, on the subject of the Repeal of the Duty on Foreign Timber imported into the United Kingdom.

DOWNING STREET, 5th August, 1851.

MY LORD,—I have to acknowledge the receipt of Your Lordship's Despatch, No. 74, of the 6th June, enclosing an Address to the Queen from the Legislative Council and House of Assembly of Canada, on the subject of the proposed repeal of the Duty on Foreign Timber imported into this country.

I have laid this Address before the Queen: but after having fully considered the reasons assigned in it against reducing the Duties levied in this country on Foreign Timber, Her Majesty's servants did not feel themselves justified in abandoning the Bill for the purpose which was then before Parliament, and has since passed into a law. This reduction of Duty on Foreign Timber was proposed with a view to the advantage of the British Dominions at large, but while it is obviously calculated to promote this object by reducing the cost in the United Kingdom of the most important materials for the employment of industry, there appears to Her Majesty's Government no grounds for apprehending that the measure will inflict the injury upon Canada which is anticipated by the Provincial Legislature. The successive reductions of the Duty on Foreign Timber which have already been made since the year 1842, and the consequent great increase of its consumption, have not been found to occasion any diminution in the consumption of Colonial Timber, which on the contrary has continued rather larger than before, the fact being it appears that whatever may be the rate of duty, and consequently the market price of Foreign Timber, the particular kinds and qualities of Timber grown in the British Colonies will continue to be used for the purposes to which they are peculiarly adapted, and are now applied. It is also a consideration which ought not to be lost sight of by the Provincial Parliament, that in a country possessing such great natural resources as Canada, and of which the population and capital are still so inadequate to the full development of these resources, there can be no occasion for endeavoring, by artificial regulations to extend the field of employment, and that the permanent prosperity of the Province will be best promoted by allowing enterprize and labor to flow in their natural channels, instead of seeking to divert them to branches of trade dependent for their success upon the uncertain and factious encouragement afforded by protective duties.

You will assure the Provincial Parliament that, while Her Majesty's Government take the most lively interest in the welfare and commercial prosperity of Canada, they are for these reasons convinced that a steady adherence to the commercial policy on which the measure now complained of is founded, will be found to be the course best calculated to promote the interests of the Colonies in common with those of the British Empire at large.

I have, &c.,
(Signed,) GREY.
The Right Honorable
The Earl Elgin and Kincardine.

The funeral of Marshal Sebastiani, which took place yesterday at the Invalides, nearly terminated in a very disastrous manner. As early as 9 o'clock detachments of troops had assembled from all the barracks of Paris, having their drums and colours decorated with black, and the officers having crape on the arm and the sword-hilt. Nearly all the general officers in the capital were present, among them being Generals Oudinot, Magnan, Baraguay d'Hilliers, Rathieres, and Perrot. The President of the Republic was represented by his aide-de-camp. A great number of representatives attended, and nearly the whole of the diplomatic corps. The crowd of spectators attracted by curiosity was also considerable. The coffin was placed on a lofty catafalque, near the grand alter of the chapel of the Invalides, the funeral service being under the direction of the Archbishop of Paris and his vicars-general. Just as the service had commenced an incident occurred which produced the greatest consternation. A great number of wax tapers were burning around the catafalque, when, the door of the chapel having been suddenly opened to admit the persons who desired to enter, a strong current of air carried the flame of the tapers to the black drapery over the coffin, and in an instant the whole was a mass of fire. The flames ascended with great rapidity, and soon reached the flags taken in battle from various nations, and hanging from the roof. These in their turn catchit fire, and fears were at one time entertained for the safety of the chapel itself. Fortunately, among the persons present were Captain Cousin-Jamion, and Lieutenant Matouy, of the Sapeurs-pompiers who instantly gave orders respecting the measures to be taken to check the fire. Four fire-engines were soon on the spot, three from the invalides itself, and one from the nearest post. These were so effectively employed, that in a short time the flames were got under, though not until a great number of the trophies obtained by the valour of France had been destroyed. The line of flags on the right side of the chapel has in particular suffered, scarcely more having remained of them than the blackened poles. The famous umbrella taken at the battle of Jaffa from the Emperor of Morocco is among the objects destroyed. The funeral ceremony, which was thus interrupted could not be resumed in the chapel, but was celebrated outside, after which the body was carried down into the vaults under the chapel. The President of the Republic, on hearing of the disaster, immediately proceeded to the Invalides, giving directions that no military honours should be paid him. He remained on the spot until it was ascertained that the fire was completely extinguished.—London Paper August 1.

DISTRESSING ACCIDENT.—We regret to learn by the Halifax and Independent, that Mrs. Cornick, was accidently poisoned in Caledonia on the 15th inst. It appears that both she and her husband were sick and their physician left a bottle of Medicine for each, that Mr. Cornick was to be given in small doses, that for Mr. Cornick in cups. Mrs. Cornick's mother by mistake took the wrong bottle and gave her a large dose which caused her death.

MOONLAKE.

Beautiful Lake! with all thy blended shades,
Of waste and wood, bright hills and level glades;
On thee, on thee I gaze, as Memory's look
To the blest Island of their Prophet's book,
And oft I dream that, linked by Magic spell,
Pardon and Peace upon thy vallies dwell,
Like two sweet Hours beckoning o'er the deep,
The souls that tremble, and the eyes that weep!
Beautiful Lake!—farewell! when all the strife
And all the sights, and all the cares of life
Shall come about us, when the light of truth
Shall scatter the bright mists that dazzled youth,
Oh, that this weary head may find a shrine,
And rest untroubled, in a shade like thine!

II.

SUMMER FRAGMENT.

Oh! there was grief for thee, and bitter tears,
And racking doubts thro' long and joyless years;
And tender tongues that babbled of the tombs,
And lonely hearts that dozed on the dream
Pale mourning dowsed she saw thy cherished form
Snatched from the fire or rescued from the storm;
And faithful lows, unfaining and untired,
Clung to each hope, and expired as each expired.
On the black desert or the tumbling sea,
No prayer is said, no requiem sung for thee.
Affection knows not whether o'er thy grave,
The Ocean murmurs or the willow wave;
But still the lovers of thy sacred name,
Lights without noise to emulate thy fame!

It does one good to look at you, as the fox said to the chickens, when he found the wall too high to leap.

You can't possibly succeed, as the flying-pan said to the eel as he tried to leap out.

There is something one can see at once about a true cavalier and a great man, as the cran said to the whale.

It's not respectful as the tailor said to the needle when it pricked his thumbs.

Why, how you've grown, as the dog said to the mushroom.

Here is a match for the Kentuckian who got in a rail fun to keep himself from spoiling from want of fight:—

There is a man in Vermont who has been for the last twenty-five years engaged in a law-suit, at the last sessions; by some unaccountable mistake of the lawyers in the case, his suit was brought to a close, since which, his health has rapidly declined. He is trying his best to pick another quarrel with somebody, as he finds it impossible to exist long out of his element.

A western Editor noticing a Bloomer said "she looked remarkably well, as far as he could see!"

The editor of a Western paper says that he has three times put on a clean shirt for the purpose of calling on the governor of his state, but did not see him, and concludes on account of his disappointments with the following notice:—

"The governor is respectfully informed that we cannot afford to make another such a run upon our linen, and if we are to have the honor of making his acquaintance, he will have no reason to complain if we are not altogether in trim."

A young lady asked old Roger the reason why a man loved his second wife the best.—He was taken rather aback by the question. It was a matter that he knew nothing about, for he had all his life persisted in saying that he had no interest in the estate of wedlock, yet he ventured an answer. Why my dear said he, I suppose it is because a man prefers a living wife.

A Roman Catholic curate to free himself from the great labor of confessions of beds, gave notice to his parishioners that on Monday he should confess the hats, on Tuesday the misers, on Wednesday the slanderers, on Thursday the thieves, on Friday the libertines, and on Saturday the bad women.—His scheme succeeded. None attended.

You can't think, said a lady writer to an editor, how much good the deaths and marriages do me. If you knew how I loved deaths and marriages you would have them in every paper, the elopements and murders are delightful, but the common deaths and marriages are beautiful.

A young man from the country, going to call on some musical young ladies the other evening, he was told that he must ask them to sing, and, should they refuse, he ought to press them. Accordingly he commenced by requesting Miss Mary to favour him with a song She greatly declined, said she had a cold &c. Well then Miss, said our hero "suppose I threaten you, don't you think you might sing? The girl fainted immediately.

Bashfulness is more frequently connected with good sense, than we find assurance—and impudence, on the other hand, is often the effect of downright stupidity.

NOBLE REPLY OF A LITTLE BOY.—It is related that when the children of Kossuth were ordered to be brought into the presence of the tyrant Haynau the youngest son a boy of some five years, could not be prevailed upon to speak while in his presence, but quietly folded his arms and looked calmly into the face of the haughty man; when asked by friends why he was silent, he replied, "Do you suppose that I would speak to that bloody man?"

FATAL ACCIDENT.—John Gubbins, a detective, belonging to the 20th Regt., was accidently drowned on Saturday morning. It appears, he was assisting some of the crew belonging to the steamer, Lord Elgin, lying at the Lachine Canal Wharf, in running a log of wood near the steamer then about to start for Canada West, when the log rolled over and precipitated him and one of the crew into the water. Every assistance was rendered, but, unfortunately, only one of the 2 men was recovered. Upon deceased's body being taken from the water, Dr. Howard used every means in his power to restore life; but without avail. Verdict of the Coroner's Jury:—"Accidental death by drowning."—M. Herald.

Two or three—not more—persons having died from the effects of a disease resembling that which strikes terror into the hearts of the heaviest equality with the meanest of mankind, the greatest consternation for one day prevailed here. We have now only to state that after the most diligent enquiry we have arrived at the conclusion that the city is extraordinarily healthy and that the alarm was a false one. In confirmation of this assertion we copy from our contemporary the Gazette the following paragraph:—

Two or three sudden deaths have occured within the last day or two, which have given occasion for some little excitement. In consequence, the vigilant Health Committee of the Corporation have very properly been in session for the last two days; & on their authority, as well as that of some of our leading medical gentlemen, we state to use the expression of one of them, that the town is "unusually healthy, and we have time to go a-fishing."—Quebec Chronicle.

CONVENIENT FATHER.—An inquiry into the cause of the recent death of a young lady in England established the fact that she had been killed by the lead contained in the coloring matter of burnt almonds. Medical authority was also adduced to show that within the last three years upwards of seventy deaths had been produced in England by the use of poisonous figments used in fancy sweetmeats.

R. Smith, Esq M.P.P, complained of having his dogs poisoned, although he had put on collars, in accordance with the proclamation issued by the High Bailiff. It appears that the By-law requires that they should be muzzled Also—Of this the owners of valuable dogs should be made aware.

Mrs. Develin was charged with an assault upon Martha Ryan, a young girl, who appeared to have annoyed Mrs. Develin by a course of constant provocation—calling names and using bad language. Both parties admonished, and case discharged.

Wm. Brown, a colored gentleman, who had been paying a visit to the French Village, charged Ellen Jane McDonald and Charlotte Peters, two denizens of that noted locality, with having robbed him of $28. It appeared that Brown had been paid off his vessel yesterday morning, and found his way there about noon; he went into Miss McDonald's establishment, and after a series of adventures, sufficient, we think, to warn any man in his senses, they succeeded in taking his money—generously handing back $2 out of it, to pay his way. This morning, however, they offered $20 if he would not prosecute. Remanded till to-morrow.

One or two other unimportant cases were disposed of.
