Dr. Livingstone.

RETURN OF THE SEARCH EXPEDITION.

The Livingstone search expedition returned to Plymouth, England, on the 19th of Jan. The members of the expedition are satisfied that Dr. Livingstone was not murdered. He did not take the route expected from the Rovuma river, at about 11 degrees south along the north coast of Lake Nyasa, in from 36 degrees to 34 degrees east, but from the Rovuma went south round the south end of Lake Nyasa, going as far as 14 degrees 20 south. Thence he proceeded to the northwest, and was left pursuing that route, either with the view of exploring the west coast of Lake Nyasa, and thus ascertaining how far it extends north, and then to proceed on to Lake Tanganyika, or had gone direct to Tanganyika and thence down the Nile home.

Matoka, Makuta, Marenga, and Makuna mentioned by the Johanna men, were found on the southern route instead of the northern. The expedition followed Dr. Livingstone up to within a few miles to where it was reported he was murdered; and there found that the doctor and his "boys" were ferried over a marshy lake by Marenga, but the Johanna men under Moosa, made a detour round the lake, and returned next day to Marenga, saying they had deserted Livingstone, and should return to the coast, because he was leading them into a country where they would be murdered by the Mavite. The expedition also had interviews with the native porters who had carried Livingstone's luggage five days journey further to Pacumbe.

A Friendly Tete-A Tete.

O'Brien and some other prominent Fenians paid a visit to President Johnson on Monday last. What transpired at this social meeting between the chief men of the Cut throat Brotherhood and the Chief Magistrate of the Great Republic is not known. Probably, however, His Excellency condoled with them on the execution of their mutual friends, the murderers of Sergeant Brett; congratulated them on the result of the Clerkenwell "campaign," and upon the number of women and babies killed and mutilated. Then he would doubtless say a word of approval with regard to the Fenian "raid" in the streets of Sheffield, when two heroic "patriots" filled the trousers of a little boy with gunpowder and blew the infantine myrmidon of British tyranny almost to pieces. The attack upon the martello tower and the robbery of the Cork gunsmith, would also be events of which the chief executive officer of the "best Government in the world" would be likely to approve, nor would he in all probability fail to express his admiration for the "strategy" displayed by the Fenian "braves" in sending letters containing explosive substances to various "Britishers." We question if a more disgraceful sight was ever witnessed than this; the head of a nation which in some respects is entitled to be called "great," thus holding interviews with a set of scoundrels who have been concerned in some of the most cowardly and utterly unjustifiable outrages that the world ever saw. How humiliated every respectable American must feel, and how kneely the President, if he has any susceptibility of shame (which is perhaps doubtful) must feel the humiliation which he is compelled to undergo for the sake of party.—Spectator.

CANTERBURY ON RITUALISM.—The Archbishop of Canterbury, in acknowledging an address upon the subject of ritualism, lately forwarded to him by Viscount Sydney, M. P., the Lord-Lieutenant of Kent, and several magistrates and other gentlemen, remarked:

"That the doctrine of the real presence, in one way or another, is the doctrine of the Church of England it would be impossible to deny, for her language clearly attests this. But it is a spiritual presence—a presence to be realized by faith; not a corporal presence of Christ's natural body and blood, Christ's body being eaten at the Holy Supper only after a heavenly and spiritual manner. It is nevertheless, a real presence in the sense of its being effectual for those contents and purposes for which Christ's body was broken and his blood shed, just as the sun, though its bodily presence be in the heavens, is present on earth effectually for all the purposes of light and heat for which it was created. But, in order to guard against any superstitious abuse of this truth, our Church warns us that no adoration should be offered either unto the sacramental bread and wine, or to any corporal presence of Christ's natural body blood. And as to any local presence, except in the heart of the believer, she pronounces nothing. It behooves, therefore, every clergymen to avoid in his teaching all expressions which go beyond the teaching and usage of the Church of England, to the neglect of that cautious wisdom which guided our Reformers in the construction of our formularies."

This looks very much like a judicious noncommittalizer on the Archbishop's part.

A CHANCE FOR SPECULATION.—The egotism and self-conceit of George Francis Train, as marked in his account of his reception on the Emerald Isle, reminds us of Moore's "Speculation," which is very appropos to Train, and reads thus:

"Of all speculations the market holds forth,
The best that I know of for a lover of pelf
Is to buy Francis up at the price he is worth,
And sell him at that which he sets on himself."

THE DEVONSHIRE WITCHES.—At the Plymouth Guildhall on Friday, Mary Catherine Murray was brought up, on remand, charged, under a warrant, with having used certain subtle means and devices to impose on one Thomas Rendle. From further evidence and cross-examination it appeared that when the prosecutor first consulted the prisoner he was told by her that if she did not cure his wife, who is paralyzed, she would return all moneys that might be paid for herbs and services. He paid in all £4 10s., and submitted that his wife had not been benefited in the least, but had, on the contrary, as she believed, been "ill-wished" by the prisoner. With a view to a cure of this "ill-wish" he had consulted a "white witch" in the person of a man named Gribble, of Plymouth, who had undertaken, like the prisoner, to cure the patient or refund all payments; to this "witch" he had already paid some money. Inspector Mutch stated that when he apprehended Murray he read the warrant to her, and she replied that she had a right to charge for her medicine. He produced the "charm" which the prisoner sent to Rendle, and which consisted of a piece of parchment, on which were signs, and against them were such remarks as "Whosoever beareth this sign all spirits will do him homage," "This sign against witchcraft, putrid infection, and sudden death," "Whosoever beareth this sign need fear no foe," and "This is a sign against witchcraft and suicide, and against evil demons." He also produced another "charm" of a similar nature, which was worn by the prisoner when she was taken into custody. Mr. Brian, on behalf of Murray, while deploring the nonsense, ignorance, and superstition which had been revealed, contended that no offence had been committed against the law; the prosecutor was as big a fool as the prisoner. The Bench sentenced the prisoner to three months' imprisonment with hard labor. Murray was then charged with having imposed on one Grace Brimblecombe, from whom she had received 10s.; but the hearing of the case was postponed.—London Times.

MRS. YELVERTON AGAIN.—Mrs. Yelverton appears to be determined that either the English Irish, or Scotch Courts shall pronounce her marriage with the scapegrace Major Yelverton to have been valid. The bitter disappointments she has already experienced would have deterred and discouraged a less resolute woman from the prosecution of what seems to be a hopeless case. Not so with her. She emerges from each defeat unconquered, and apparently unconquerable. Having lost her case in Ireland, in Scotland, and in the House of Lords, to which she appealed, she has brought a new action in the Edinburgh Court of Sessions, for the purpose of quashing or setting aside the judgments rendered in the last two cases. The action is based on the fact that the Major never had a Scotch domicile. He was an Irishman by birth, and never lost his Irish domicile. The law on this point is at best dubious and precedents are almost entirely lost in the mists of antiquity.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

SATURDAY MORNING, FEB. 8, 1868.

☞ At the sale yesterday of the Piano Forte material at Mr. Fox's establishment, the entire lot was knocked down to Mr. Chas. Rappy, one of Mr. Fox's aids. The iron-clad patent was secured by Mr. Cline for $360.

THE SABREVOIS MISSION.—The Annual Meeting of the Kingston Auxiliary Society will come off on Monday evening next, in St. George's Hall. Members of the Church of England should bear in mind that the Bishop of Ontario does not countenance this aforesaid Sabrevois Mission, and that only a very few Church of England Ministers will be seen at it. They probably think that the Church of England has higher objects in view than to offend the greater portion of the population of a Sister Province by attending a Meeting, the object of which is to collect money to convert the Lower Canadians to Christianity! It is high time that this sort of thing was done away with, and we had hoped that the recent noted trial for Murder at Aylmer would have had that effect.

FATHER CHINIQUY.—This noted Apostate from the Roman Catholic Church held his Annual Meeting in behalf of the Kankakee Mission, in the City Hall on Thursday night. He had but a poor gathering. How singular it is that this Kankakee Mission in Illinois should require the whole energies of this redoubtable Father to keep it afloat! Has it no merits of its own?

POLICE COURT, Friday.—It was a blank day at the Court this morning—no prisoners.
