slightest disturbance not even an approach to a quarrel. One man wanted to fight very badly down street, but he actually could not get any one to meet him in that disgraceful way.

THE DINNER

The dinner in honour of Mr. Johnston was given in the Victoria Hall, Orange Buildings, in the evening. Owing to the hall having been occupied during the greater part of the day, some detention took place, and it was after nine o'clock before the party sat down to partake of the good things provided. About eighty gentlemen were present, including several from a distance. Mr. Charles Livingston, County Master, was requested to preside, but that gentleman urged the Grand Master of British America, Bro. M. Bowell, M.P., to occupy that position, which, after much solicitation, he consented to do, Bro. Livingston occupying the vice chair. On taking the chair, Bro. Bowell read several telegraphic despatches conveying the fraternal greetings of the Orangemen of Montreal and other parts to their brethren in Kingston. A blessing having been asked by the Rev. H. Mulkins, Chaplain to the Penitentiary, justice was done to dinner, after which the chairman proposed the following toasts:—

The Queen, which was drunk with enthusiasm.

Band—God Save the Queen.

The Prince and Princess of Wales and the Rest of the Royal Family.

Band—Rule Britannia.

The Governor General, Lord Dufferin. Responded to by Bro. James Johnson, who spoke of the eminent qualifications which Lord Dufferin possessed to hold the important position of Governor General of the Dominion of Canada.

Song—The Fine Old Irish Gentleman—Bro. Robbs.

The Army, Navy and Volunteers. Responded to by Lieutenant-Colonel Callaghan.

Song—Bro. Snook.

The Glorious, Pious and Immortal memory of King William the Third, Prince of Orange.

The chairman then proposed the toast of the evening, The Health of Bro. William Johnston of Ballykilbeg. He felt it unnecessary to say one word by way of preface to the toast. They knew Mr. Johnston; they knew his antecedents, and he would therefore ask them to drink his health with enthusiasm. The toast having been duly honoured,

Bro. Johnston on rising to respond was received with loud and continued applause. He said: "You have kindly and cordially received me to-day. I would hesitate to address you again, were it not for the greeting I have received, and especially, as I have been called on by one whom I so highly esteem, your Grand Master, Brother Mackenzie Bowell. As they got through the list of toasts which preceded that of his own, he couldn't but wonder if it could be possible that the Orangemen of Canada could ever so change their political relationship as to give up the toast of the Queen for anything else. He believed they could not. God Save the Queen came near to all our hearts. When crossing the wide Atlantic, in a stormy day, at the conclusion of a concert given in aid of the distressed Mariners Society, when the national anthem was sung, it was with difficulty that the passengers could stand; he, as a loyal subject of the British Crown, and as an Orangeman could feel proud to see the grand display of loyal enthusiasm for our beloved Queen on that occasion. He hoped that no circumstance would ever occur to separate the Orangemen of Ireland and Canada. Altho' parties might sometimes try to divide them, he hoped they'll stand together as one man, in connection with the Orange cause, sewing it first and placing personal considerations afterwards. It was doubtless in Lodges as it was in families, there were points upon which all could not agree, but there were grand principles, regarding which all were united. No petty consideration of office should create jealousy; they should be all workers together in the common cause. He would never forget the enthusiastic welcome which he received in Kingston, and the great demonstration he witnessed to-day. Not as a member of the British House of Commons, nor as a Deputy Grand Master of the Orange Institution of Ireland, did he rejoice, but rather as a fellow labourer with them in the cause to which they were all attached. He would carry home with him the fraternal greetings of the Orangemen of Canada to their brethren of England, Scotland and Ireland, and this message, that they were one with them in maintaining the union of the British Empire. Before sitting down he again thanked them for the reception he had received and proposed eloquently the toast, The Protestant Churches. In the Orange order, they knew no churches. They met together as Protestant brethren, united in connection with the great principles of our common Protestantism.

The Rev. H. Mulkins responded. He was most happy to do so, because it placed them on the platform of our common christianity. Having spoken in eloquent terms to the sentiment of the toast, the Rev. gentleman referred to the promise given by Bro. Johnston in all his speeches to the maintenance of the connection between Great Britain and Canada. He spoke of his late visit to England, where he found a most deplorable state of ignorance existing regarding Canada. In wishing that the people of England were more enlightened on this point, he dwelt in eloquent language upon the extent, the richness in mineral wealth, and the glorious prospect reserved for the Dominion of Canada. The sentiment of loyalty prevailed in all the churches.

Bro. Rev. Mr. Gallagher also responded. He was happy to do so, because the toast laid down the platform of brotherly love. He rejoiced to be able to assist in honoring his esteemed brother Johnston, who the last time he had seen him was at a celebration in the City of Londonderry.

Bro. John McIntyre proposed the health of the Chairman, Bro. MacKenzie Bowell, Grand Master of British America, and in doing so referred to Bro. Bowell's firm adherence to the principles of the Orange order, to his independence of character and to the universal esteem in which he is held by his brethren.

Bro. Bowell thanked them for the kind manner in which the toast of his health had been received. He was not deserving of the high encomiums passed upon by Bro. McIntyre. Whatever position he held, whether in the Orange Institution or anywhere else, he always made it his business to express his opinions fully. He referred to an attempt that was made to get him into trouble because in his place in Parliament he had honestly expressed his opinions in reference to militia affairs, in connection with which force he happened to be an officer. The latter fact, however, he could not allow to influence his course in Parliament. Those who join the Orange Order should be prepared not to make it subservient to any other position they occupy. He believed there was nothing in Orangeism to disqualify him from holding any other position he occupied.

The next toast was

The Earl of Enniskillen and the Orangemen of Great Britain and Ireland.

The Rev. A. Dawson responded in his usual forcible style.

The Health of Bro. T. McMahon, District Master, was well received and was responded to by that gentleman.

The Grand Master and the Orangemen of the United States was proposed by Bro. J. Flanigan. Mr. J. Flanigan, jr., of Detroit, replied.

The House of Commons of Canada and the Legislature of Ontario were proposed by Bro. McIntyre and Messrs. Bowell and Robinson replied.

The Press and the Ladies were duly honoured, Mr. Jas. Shannon representing the former.

Other toasts followed, including the health of Bros. Wm. Shannon and John Flanigan. The party dispersed at twelve o'clock, after the Band had played God Save the Queen, and three rousing cheers were given for Her Majesty and three for Bro. Johnston.

DEPARTURE OF MR. JOHNSTON.

This morning Mr. Johnston paid a visit to the notable institutions about Kingston, and this afternoon at two o'clock met the gentlemen of Kingston at lunch at the residence of M. W. Strange, Esq., whose guest he has been while in Kingstod. The opportunity of meeting Mr. Johnston gave these gentlemen great pleasure.

At 3.30, Mr. Johnston leaves for Belleville on the str. Rochester, accompanied by Grand Master Bowell and Mr. James Johnston of Kingston. A large number of brethren are to be prepared with a hearty parting cheer.

POLICE COURT, Friday.—Only two cases of drunkenness, which were dismissed. A good record after a holiday.

WELLAND CANAL.—Passed down yesterday, for Montreal, Props. East, City of London, Scotia, and Dominion. Four barges for Ogdensburg; no vessels for Kingston.

ITALIAN OPERA.—The Troupe played again last night, and gave greater pleasure even than on Thursday evening; every body was delighted. The Company have left for Ottawa.

THE CLAIM.—The taking of evidence in Mr. Noble's claim case will be concluded to-day, it is expected. Mr. Noble and Judge Burrowes have been examined. Col. Hante, U.S. Consul, is Counsel for his Government.

Coroner's Inquests.

This morning Coroner Shaw held two Inquests; the first on the body of Harry Bronston, an old army pensioner, long resident in Kingston, who was found drowned at the Cataraqui Bridge yesterday morning. He had lately received his pension money, and it is believed he fell into the water in a state of intoxitation. The jury returned a verdict of "Found Drowned." Deceased leaves no family.

The second Inquest was held at the Hospital on the body of the unfortunate woman Murray, killed by the falling of the arch yesterday. A fact is related which shows how narrow an escape there was from great loss of life. The first blast of wind carried away a flag on the arch, which created in the crowd that surrounded it on both sides some alarm, so that they ran away in fear of an accident. In another minute a second sweep of wind bore down the arch, and killed the poor woman Murray, the only person left behind. Hundreds were saved by an act of Providence. The jury in the case, after hearing the evidence of several witnesses, adjourned until Monday morning at nine o'clock.
