Several journals, Ministerial and Opposition, state that the Returning officer for South Renfrew has not yet made his return and that there is a doubt as to whether Mr. O'Reilly or Mr. Macdougall represents the Riding. Mr. Quesly has made his return and declared Mr. O'Reilly duly elected. This we have the very best means of knowing.

It may be fairly said that Mr. James Beaty has won his election by a clever manipulation of the workingman dodge. The Opposition Press during the contest showed up the hollowness of the new born affection of the Tories for the workingman, that it was made only to sell, and that, the elections over the Tories would contemptuously wave their friends in smocks back to their paint pots and workbenches. Many workmen trusted to the good faith of the Tories and allowed themselves to be used as tools in casket—presentation and other humbugs. They thought that Mr. Beaty had dealt generously with their printer brethern during the a trike last winter, that he and his Party were friendly, and Mr. Brown and Party hostile to them. The elections over, they are now experiencing the disappointment which we predicted. A Toronto telegram to a Ministerial journal says that Mr. Beaty has discharged several of the journeymen from his printing office and supplied their places with apprentices, whereat there is great dissatisfaction among the former class. Little sympathy is their due when they allowed a man like Mr. Beaty to befool them with fine words about the rights of the workingman in order to secure their votes. Their votes were all he wanted. His election safe for five years, he does not care a rush about them or their rights, and will no longer act a part in the workingman farce, as it costs money, and who ever knew a Tory to sacrifice his comfort or his pocket for the working or any other class!

SOUTH RENFREW ELECTION.

The statements made by the Ministerial and Opposition Press concerning the election for South Renfrew, have been so widely divergent that suspicion naturally attached to both. We have taken the trouble to get the facts of the case from a source as well informed as above suspicion, and while they are not full enough to be judicially satisfactory, there is only one inference that can be fairly drawn from them. The question in dispute simply is, were there 384 or more persons in the townships of Sherwood, Hagarty, Jones, Burns and Richards who, at the last election, polled their votes for Mr. O'Reilly? Let the following facts answer: Mr. Macdougall's agents were present in Richards and Burns, and report 6 votes polled there, five of which were for Mr. Macdougall. In the township of Jones there were 16 votes polled, all of which were for Mr. O'Reilly. The latter's majority was, therefore, in these townships, only 12, leaving 372 to be accounted for. To explain the vote in the two remaining townships—Hagarty and Sherwood, we will rely on the testimony of Mr. Patrick Kelly, one of Mr. O'Reilly's warmest supporters. Mr. Kelly was questioned and said that in Hagarty there were 60 votes which could be polled, and that it was by far the largest of the new townships. Giving Mr. O'Reilly the whole of these 60 votes, we have 312 votes left for the last township, Sherwood; that is to say, this township newly surveyed and sparsely populated, polled within a dozen as large a vote as the township of McNab, the largest, most populous and longest settled township in the country. That there may be no doubt attaching to these figures, we refer to the census of 1871 and find that in the whole of the townships in question there were only some 300 souls, men, women and children. We have yet to learn that immigration largely recruited the population there of late, but as a six month's residence is part of the voter's qualification, those who settled there this summer could not have legally exercised the right of franchise.

The journals of the House not having been distributed we are unable to verify by reference to them the statement that it was at the close of the session, when most of the members had returned home, when the clause adding the new township to the South Riding was tacked to the Redistribution Bill. To ensure further secrecy the clause was added by amendment in the Senate, and sent down for concurrence to the Commons when its benches were deserted, and its attention distracted by the hurried business usually attendant on its closing day. To still further mystify those whom the change affected, from the statutes which were printed as a Supplement to the Canada Gazette the clause defining the qualifications of voters in the new townships to be the same as those required in Algoma was left out, leaving those not within the secret to gather that the same qualification was required in the annexed townships as in other municipalities. The correction was made in a subsequent issue of the Gazette, but in an obscure corner where it was unlikely to catch the reader's eye.

These are the facts which we have gathered from an impartial and well-informed source. We make no insinuations and draw no inferences. The facts are so plain that our readers will have no difficulty in reaching a logically satisfactory conclusion. The question, with the West Peterboro' one, will be among the first to engage the attention of the House when the facts will be shown to be, we think, as above recited. The people of the Riding have insisted upon bearing the expenses of the Protest, and at the indignation meeting held on Tuesday last, at which 1,000 electors were present, $2,500 were subscribed for that object.

Extreme Bigotry.—The Canadian Freeman, with the extreme bigotry which has ever distinguished that sheet, says that the lady whom Pere Hyacinthe has married is not his wife, only his concubine. Why? Pere Hyacinthe has been unfrocked, degraded from the Catholic Priesthood, excommunicated and sent adrift into the world. In every respect he has become a layman. Why cannot he marry? Is he bound legally or morally to respect vows, when he has been deprived of the sacred office occasioning the vows? Fortunately the laws of the land recognize the legality of his marriage, and the lady defamed by the Freeman's bigotry is a pure woman!

FUNERAL OF MR. STREET'S MOTHER—MR. STREET'S BEQUESTS—MR. BEATTY AND THE UNION.

Toronto, 13.—The funeral of Mrs. Street, mother of the late T. C. Street, takes place at Niagara to-morrow at 2 o'clock. She was 80 years of age. Among other bequests, Mr. Street left 75 cents per day to each of his old servants and workingmen during their life. The family residence and 120 acres of land, $100,000 in money, and $5,000 to complete his education, was left for his nephew, Mr. Mackleme, Niagara.

The man who was scalded with benzine the day before yesterday has since died.

The Elections are over.

He leaves to assume the proprietorship of the Galt Reformer.

Novel Method of Attracting Trade.—A Paris shopkeeper has hit upon a novel plan to attract customers. He added to his establishment a refreshment room, billiard tables and daily journals. In a lady fatigued with shopping, and the labor of turning over fifty packages to gain some knowledge of the fashions, quieting her conscience at last by the purchase of two yards of ribbon? There is the buffet free, with cake, wine, teas, and the more substantial sandwich. Are the fair shoppers accompanied by their lovers, their husband, or their brothers? There are the daily papers, and in cases of protracted agony, the billiard tables, to amuse them, and the shop boy calls them when their escort is again needed.

The Tyranny of Thiers.

Paris letters affirm that M. Thiers wishes it distinctly understood that he is master in France. He has resolutely refused all petitions to mitigate his sentence of expulsion from France against the two brothers Errazu, who insulted him at Trouville, by cries of Vive l' Empereur. Their families also must depart from France. The two brothers are aged 18 and 21, and their families, therefore, mean their mother and sisters, and cousins. The Errazus are Mexicans of enormous wealth, and chief owners of a silver mine. For thirty years the family has resided in Paris. During the Empire the revenues of the family were expended with princely magnificence, and few ladies have given so much in charity as Mme. Errazu. She had 1,000 poor people upon her charity list. She founded a hospital, and her name was seen at the head of every charity subscription against a very large figure. M. Thiers has the right to order the Errazus from France, they being foreigners, and he is inexorable that—all must go at the end of the few days allowed to put their affairs in order.

NAPANEE ASSIZES.

The Queen vs. John McCreary.—The prisoner, who is serving a term in the Provincial Penitentiary for maliciously killing a neighbor's cow, was brought here to stand his trial on a charge of arson, in burning down the barn of John A. Shibley. The evidence against the prisoner was very strong. It was proved that he had threatened to injure Shibley, and one Solomon Snider swore that McCreary admitted to him that he set fire to the barn. The defence called witnesses to swear that Snider could not be believed on his oath, and two witnesses by the name of Curl endeavored to make out that Mr. Shibley burnt the barn down himself. A number of witnesses were called on both sides and the case occupied several hours. The jury were out nearly all night, and being unable to agree on a verdict were discharged. Mr. Britton, Q.C., conducted the Crown business. Beaver.

Wedding Gift Humbuggery.

There is scarcely any one who would refuse an invitation to a wedding, yet an invitation to a wedding carries on its face, impressed upon it as plain as the monogram which it bears, the words, 'social blackmail.' A wedding nowadays means plenty of money and plenty of presents. It requires the recipient not only to be present, but to bring presents. And if the parties decline to accede to the first condition, they are expected to fulfill the second. There is no expression of love or respect in these gifts; they are purchased and given because they must be, and this both the receiver and giver well understand. There are instances where presents are given out of pure love, but they are mere drops in the sea of hypocrisy. Persons of moderate means often deprive themselves of some luxury, and even go without the necessaries of life, in order to make a present which will equal that of a wealthier guest. The Chinese mode of making wedding presents is a great improvement on ours, and the custom might be introduced here with profit. The 'heathen Chinee' sends costly presents of silk, china and other precious things to his friends on these festive occasions, and they are displayed with great pomp and circumstance, but are never used. They are carefully put away, and when the next wedding or feast comes off, these presents are sent, and so keep circulating from house to house, very often coming back to the original giver.

Stanley and Livingston.

It is proposed to erect a statue of Dr. Livingston at New York, near those of Humboldt and Marco. The designer of it is Mr. D. O. Hill, of Edinburgh. The public of Glasgow have invited Mr. Stanley to deliver a lecture in that town, and he has promised to comply with the request when the book which he is preparing is finished. It is to consist of about 700 pages.

Nilsson's Love and Marriage.—It is not generally known, says the London Court Journal, that M. Rouzaud first met Miss Nilsson in Paris when she used to be taking music lessons from M. Collinet, whose daughter was at that time teaching the singing. M. Rouzaud, as a lover of music, used to take pleasure in being one of M. Collinet's social circle. Both M. Rouzaud and Miss Nilsson were then comparative nobodies. It was when they were thus obscure that they made up their minds to marry each other. Mlle. Nilsson and her husband have taken a splendid mansion in the Champs Elysees, the same where Patti passed her honeymoon.

WHIGGINGS

"I feel rather dull to-day," as the razor said after it had been used to open oysters.

A governess, advertising for a situation, says she "is perfect mistress of her own tongue."

"Constitutionally tired" is the polite way of expressing that a man is naturally lazy.

"I can't find bread for my family," said a lazy fellow. "Nor I," replied an industrious miller, "I'm obliged to work for it."

A young man at Cannelton, Ind., has obtained a divorce from his wife on the ground that she forced him to marry her.

The man who never told an editor how he could better his paper, has gone out west to marry the woman who never looked into a looking glass.

A New Jerseyman, having heard that Columbus was in Ohio, immediately started West in interview the old man about the voyage which resulted in the discovery of America.

There is a woman in Louisville with two tongues. Charitable people pretend to believe that this has no connection with her being the widow of five husbands.

When a life insurance agent tackles a Terre Haute man, the latter strikes a position and says: "My life is as a withered tree, not worth insuring." An amateur dramatic association, with "Pizarro" as the opening play, accounts for it.

"Does the razor go easy?" asked a barber of a victim who was writhing under a clumsy instrument. "Well" replied the poor fellow, "that depends upon what you call the operation. If you're skinning me, it goes tolerably easy; but if you're shaving me, it goes rather hard."

A traveler relates that while he was in Utah Tom Thumb was there on a visit. While the renowned dwarf was at a dinner party, he jumped from his chair and said, with a pompous air: "I cannot understand this polygamy at all." His host a man six feet high, thereupon exclaimed, "Neither could I, Tom, when I was your size."

Beau Brummel had a friend, a clergyman, who sometimes dined with him. Brummel used to say that he could always tells whether there was going to be champagne by the way the clergyman asked the blessing. If the glasses indicated only claret or sherry he would say, "For what we are about to receive" etc., but if they betokened champagne he would shut his eyes and commence with "Bountiful Jehovah."

Prince Bismarck.

The Prince Von Bismarck continues to drink a great deal of wine, chiefly champagne. He is still troubled with sleeplessness, and instead of courting the drowsy god by retiring to bed, at an early hour, his custom during his present retirement at Narzin, is to pass the night in company with a few of his confidants and companions in singing, music, telling stories, and drinking champagne. One of his right-hand men—he has a number of right-hand men—is an excellent singer and player on the piano, and when he is present Bismarck keeps him very busy. These symposia seldom end until after daylight. They never end until the Prince is drowsy. When he arrives at a condition in which he fancies that it may be possible to obtain a few moments sleep, he dismisses every one, and hastens to lie down. But, too often, scarcely has his head touched the pillow ere he finds himself wide awake again, and if this occurs, all hope of obtaining sleep until the next day is abandoned."

That £1,000 a Year.

Ontario Grit papers have been representing that as Privy Councillor of the Empire Sir John Macdonald receives £1,000 sterling a year, and this sum, it is charged, is "the first instalment of Imperial pay for his sacrifice of Canada in the matter of the Washington Treaty." One word is sufficient to tumble down this Grit house of cards. It is not true that as Privy Councillor Sir John receives £1,000 a year, or any other sum. The distinction is honorary.—Mail.

We suppose it would be impossible for the Mail to tell the truth even by accident. The story of the salary was originated by a Ministerial journal, and has been copied by nearly all the Ministerial journals in the Dominion. Our first impression was that there was no money pay attached to the office, but when one of Sir John's organs declared that there was, we thought that it might be telling the truth about its employer. It seems it has not, from which we learn that Tory journals are not to be believed, even when the interests of their leader should make them truthful. The question now is which is telling the falsehood, the Free Press or the Mail—or are they both telling one?—Hamilton Times.

They believe that either the Fredericton or Halifax Eleven could make a better show for the Maritime Provinces than the Twenty-two have done for Canada proper.—St. John Globe.

A PETITION

Take not, O Winter cold and gray,
Each charm that Summer gave away
Leave us some flower, some middling spray

Hush not each song that hailed the morn,
Each day of softening twilight born,
Flooding fair fields of waving corn.

Lay not thy stern and icy spall
On sparkling founts that lose and fall
In meadow green or slumberous dell.

Breathe soft some gentleness along,
The breeze's flight, now chill and strong
Hardened so late with sweets and song

Be merciful, O crowned King!
The violet wreathed and odorous spring,
Summer, whose hours such richness fling

On land and sea and ambient air,
Have passed and left the reigning where
Nor flower nor bird makes sunlight fair.

A few fleet hours and thou wilt go
To the far realms of ice and snow,
Where the pale northern lightnings glow.

Till then we dream of summer hours,
Of murmuring streams and smiling flowers,
Of moonbeams dropped in silvery showers.

On the tranquil lake, on tippling seas,
On hillsides dark with clustering trees,
And broad fields swept by song and breeze.

THE AUTUMN MANŒUVRES.

IN THE FIELD.

The flower of the British army has fairly taken the field, and home and continental critics are afforded an opportunity of witnessing British troops behave in mimic warfare. The Commander-in-Chief, the Duke of Cambridge, the Prince of Wales and Prince Arthur, with a brilliant array of general officers, are directing the fortnight's manœuvres of which Salisbury Plain will be the scene. The troops have been marched to the scene of operations through country districts where soldiers have not been seen for many years, and in this way the marching capabilities of the men, and the capacities of the commissariat department have been tested. And our latest tyles inform us that in order to thoroughly test the efficiency of the volunteer force detachments of the citizen soldiers have been sent to join the regulars during the autumn manœuvres, the men being drawn from London, Liverpool, Hants, Gloucestershire, Wilts and Dorset. The fact implies that the prejudices of the army against the volunteer force have been overcome, and the task of moulding regulars, militia and volunteers into one grand army of defence has thus become a comparatively easy task. England has undoubtedly made great advances in the management of her army during late years, and the troops will return home at the end of their term of camp life with experience certain to produce excellent effect.

Worth Knowing.

Grape leaves are said to be in many respects superior to hops for making yeast. The bread rises sooner, and has not that peculiar taste to which many object in that made from hops. The directions are to use eight or ten leaves for a quart of yeast, boiling them about ten minutes, and pouring the hot liquor on the flour, the quantity of the latter being determined by whether you want the yeast thick or thin. Use hop yeast for raising it to begin with, and afterward that made of the grape-leaves. Dried leaves are equally as good as fresh. Sometimes the yeast has a dark film over its surface when rising, but this entirely disappears when stirred.
