S. WOODS.

Under the heading "The Canada Central to reach Renfrew in twenty days," the Pembroke Observer says, that the Hon. A. B. Foster, in behalf of the Canada Central Railway Company, on the 12th inst., completed satisfactory arrangement's with the Renfrew Village Committee, by which land owners agree to wait twelve months for the payment of their claims for right-of-way, that the village will negotiate a loan of $25,000 for the three municipalities which have passed by-laws to take stock; and that the people of the village, as individuals, take $5,000 extra, to be settled in stock or freight; as may hereafter be agreed upon.

At the Belleville Assizes there will be not less than three actions against newspaper men, we learn from the Intelligencer. The publishers of the Ontario are sued by Captain Vanderveort for charging him with improperly using Government ammunition. The Trenton Courier proprietor is arraigned for libelling one Charles Francis, a Trenton lawyer, and the Globe Publishing Company are called upon to answer the charge of having unjustly associated the name of one William Jarvis with "frauds by Grand Trunk officials." While justice must be done in the premises, we trust that it will not bear with disproportionate severity on our confreres of the quill.

THE PROVENCHER ELECTION.

Says the Tory organ:—

"It takes the sting out of a good many of the remarks made by Grit journalists upon Sir George Cartier's election for Provencher, that Sir George knew nothing whatever of the intention to elect him there. The Montreal Gazette makes this announcement by authority."

Who secured, then, the retirement of the murderer Riel and Mr. Attorney-General Clarke? Did a little bird whisper to them that they should retire in favor of the rejected of Montreal East? Or did Sir John telegraph the order? What difference does it make, whether Sir John or Sir George ordered the retirement of the pretty brace of Manitobans? We do not see that Sir John giving the order takes "the sting out of the remarks of the Grit journalists." It only adds a fresh point to them. Why did not Sir John consult his colleague in the matter but issued his mandate in secret? Simply because he thought that the plucky little Frenchman would not consent to such a humiliation for Party ends. Sir Francis Hincks was also probably unaware of the intention of the people of Vancouver to elect him, and his present coolness to his chief may not unlikely be due to the patronizing way the latter secured him a seat in Parliament. Had Sir George Cartier been consulted before-hand he would naturally have resented the invitation to take a seat in the House secured him by the favor of a murderer, but Sir John with his usual reckless defiance of public opinion and morals unwisely thought that it would prevent the loss of strength to his Cabinet if the elections closed with all the Ministry returned. That result he has attained, but with a sad loss of prestige, the plumes which waved so jauntily when they entered the lists are now be-draggled and begrimed. One Minister rejected by a rural constituency in Ontario finds rest for the sole of his foot near the home of the setting sun—saying strangely enough, another, rejected by an astute constituency in Quebec, finds a political haven in far away Manitoba—in a Half-breed Old Sarum! by the grace of a man who not long since murdered a British subject for loyalty to his Queen. The Ministry, we say, is intact, but what dirt of humiliation has had to be swallowed to keep it so.

There may be still another and more potent reason for the French Baronet's election in Manitoba. The election of Riel, the murderer, was well nigh certain and Sir John, with that craftiness, which characterizes him, saw that the return of such a noted desperado on whose head was set a price, under Government auspices, would cap the climax of his iniquities, and precipitate the alienation of all good men from his Party. The cry was raised that Riel was the Grit candidate, in order to shift the coming responsibility on Opposition shoulders, but the device was too shallow to be effective, and the only resource left to escape out of the difficulty was to head Riel off. He could not well withstand the importunities of Sir John, the colleague of his friend and protector, backed, as they no doubt were, by substantial inducements. He retired in favor of him who saved his neck, and of course deserves well of his country. Thus Sir George became member for Provencher, it may be without knowledge on his part, but certainly by the wire-pulling of his colleague, for whose conduct in the matter he is as fully responsible as if he had been cognizant of it from first to last.

THE HORTICULTURAL SHOW.

As we stated in our last impression the Autumn Exhibition of the Kingston Electoral Division Society was one of the most successful held for many years. Last year the exhibits in all the departments, with one or two exceptions, were few and without merit, but at the Show yesterday, thanks to the praiseworthy exertions of a few ladies and gentlemen, all the Departments, except that of Arts and Manufactures, were well represented. The Flower Department was as usual well filled, as we have many enthusiastic devotees of floriculture among us. A fine display of vegetables and fruit was also made, as well as of poultry, of which many varieties were shown. The exhibits in the Fine Arts and Ladies Work sections were a most notable improvement upon those of recent Shows. Some very pretty sketches, paintings and colored photographs were shown and attracted much attention from visitors. Beautiful specimens of ladies' taste, ingenuity, and industry in needle craft were displayed, the show in this division being the fullest and most attractive (to the ladies) in the Exhibition. Crowds visited the Drill Shed during the day, and a grand rally of everybody in town was made in the evening to see the sights and hear the promised Concert. The Directors in devising a Concert as part of the Exhibition made a decided hit, as it attracted many visitors who might not otherwise have attended, and made the evening pass most pleasantly for all. The programme was faithfully gone through, the playing and singing being most excellent. M. DesRochers and Mr. Edgar Doward were indefatigable in their exertions, both gentlemen playing with their usual skill and taste. Mr. James Greenfield sang in fine style "The Anchors Weighed." Miss Hardy sang a ballad with great correctness and in good taste. Her voice, which appears to be carefully cultivated and under perfect control, is not of great compass, but is one of remarkable softness and sweetness, and one capable of the tender interpretation demanded in the rendition of ballads. Miss Ada Strachan played a Piano Solo in a style which elicited the warmest praise from all present. Her fingering and touch displayed not a little skill and taste, for so youthful a performer. We hope to hear Miss Strachan again in public, as she is certain of a hearty reception. Mr. Doward sang, in his usual cultivated style, "My own, my Guiding Star," the reddition of which was well received. Miss Ada Strachan and M. Desrochers followed with a Piano Duet which we need not say was brilliantly rendered. Mrs. Grylls and Mr. Doward sang "The days that are no more" in excellent taste. Mrs. Grylls is a great favorite with Kingston audiences, her artistic singing always commanding hearty approval. Part III. was opened by a trio sang by Mrs. Grylls, Miss A. Yates and Mr. Doward, and which was well received, Miss Bates accompanying on the piano. The Tandy Brothers' appearance was greeted as it always is with demonstrations of the high favor in which they are held by the lovers of good music. They were in excellent voice and therefore we need nor say that their singing was delightful, as they are too old favorites to need fresh praise. The inevitable (in their case) encore was asked at the close, to which they kindly acceded. A song by Mr. Doward, "The Minstrel Boy," and a Piano Solo by Mr. DesRochers concluded a concert which gave unqualified satisfaction to all who were in attendance, and to which much of the success of the Exhibition is due. We trust that the plan of having a concert combined with our Horticultural Exhibitions will not be lost sight of in the future, but that it will be adopted as the rule and not as the exception. The success which attended last night's venture was so signal that the omission of the Concert from the programme of future Shows would be a matter of regret. We are pleased to see the efforts of the Directors rewarded by such a capital exhibition as yesterday's and trust that next year may be even still better. Such shows not only encourage the improvement of articles exhibited but furnish a very pleasant and refined entertainment for a large number of our citizens.

Will the almanacs of the future be marked at a certain season with "about this time look out for murders," or "burglaries will become epidemic during this month?" It appears, if we believe Dr. Despine, extremely probable. According to a pamphlet of 24 pages, which the Doctor has just issued, and which is reviewed in the Journal of Medical Science, crimes, particularly those of a grave description, generally occur with the greatest violence at stated seasons, and then die out for a time. They are epidemic, in fact. The argument of Dr. Despine is based upon those obscure laws of the mind which often control the actions of men, and is closely reasoned.

London Publications.

We call attention to the advertised list in another column of the publications of Messrs. Cassell, Petter & Galpin, of London and New York. All publishers in the Dominion are now supplied with them, and Canadian lovers of literature can find their love of knowledge and their tastes well supplied. Their new issues comprise a great many more new books quite as useful and as attractive as those mentioned in the list we publish. The wealthy and enterprising publishers have the means and opportunity of securing the best works of the day, and the public therefore have a sure reliance on the merit of their books. The works on popular education and the technical manuals for trades men especially, supply a want felt in the Dominion and we are sure will receive a large sale.

An Odd Election.

The election of Sir Francis Hincks by acclamation for Vancouver District must have been a rather odd proceeding. So we judge from the report given of it in the British Colonist. Sir Francis was proposed by Mr. Bunster, who was himself a candidate, and the proposition was received with cheers and exclamations of surprise. The suprise arose from the fact that the electors had probably never heard the name of Hincks before. The nomination was seconded by Mr. Yorke, with the remark that "he knew but little of Sir Francis, but would take Mr. Bunster's word that he was the right man." Upon this very indefinite recommendation the electors, who, of course, knew less of Sir F. Hincks than Mr. Yorke did, accepted Hincks as their member. One reason why they accepted him was probably because no one else appeared in the field. They had come together to decide between Bunster and Wallace both retired in favor of Hincks, the puzzled electors had nothing to do but submit, for they had no time to protest, get out a new candidate or do anything but accept the position. Sir Francis was sprung on them so suddenly that the surprise was complete and successful. From the Colonist's report, we fear they were not even told that Sir Francis had suffered a double defeat in Ontario, and was flying to them as the last refuge of a despairing politician—in fact, they were led to believe that the gallant knight had done them a great favor by condescending to represent them. At the conclusion, we notice that cheers were given for the retiring candidates but none were given for the successful one. Probably they did not wish to make so free with his name on such short acquaintance. We think the least Sir Francis can do for his new constituents is to present each of them with his photograph, autograph and a short sketch of his life, so that they may be sure that their representative is not a myth.—Hamilton Times.

JUST HIS LUCK.—There is a fellow in Old Kentucky who, during the hot weather has a knack of getting drunk, which mortified his wife very much, so she hit upon a plan to cure him. Obtaining the assistance of a couple of neighbours they went and dug a hole in the graveyard, and while he lay asleep in one of his drunken bouts, they took and laid him in it; throwing in a few shovelfuls of dirt over him they retired and hid behind some barrels and awaited his waking. About sunrise he gradually aroused and seeing where he was and remembering where he went to sleep, he started up and looking out of the hole exclaimed in a voice of terror, "Good Gracious! just my cussed luck. Resurrection's all over and I'm forgotten."

Irish Wit—Ireland's Heart Not Yet Broken

The London Daily News says a book of "modern" Irish anecdotes has yet to be written. There is not a town or city in the island without its budget of contemporary witticisms, applicable not only to local, but to national occurrences. Cork would be a famous district to beat up for this purpose. It still retains a number of wits in whom the faculty racy of the soil has not become impaired or degenerated. And throughout the rural parishes a wealth of novel and modern stories might be picked up by the skilled challenger who would give his mind to the task. It is a mistake to accept the account of the national journalists that the heart of Ireland is broken. The heart of Ireland beats healthily and heartily enough under an improved commercial prosperity, and although there may be an absence of that unrestrained joviality typified by Mr. Boucicault or Mr. Edmund Falconer, the people of all classes in the country remain as hospitable and as bright humored as ever they were in the days of Buck Whalley or Bully Egan. The Bar of Ireland does not engage in prolonged word combats with the bench, hard drinking is less frequent, and picturesque poverty and raggedness is not common enough out of Connemara or Gweedore to pay the expenses of any enterprising artist on a tour of inspection for an illustrated paper.

EXPLOSIVE CIGARS.—The sale of explosive cigars has recommenced in the streets of Paris in spite of all the precautions taken by the police to prevent these dangerous articles from being offered to the public. The cigars in question appear genuine to the purchaser, but contain a minute squib or cracker, which, when the cigar has been consumed to a certain point, explodes, the cigar itself flying to some distance from the mouth of the smoker. Not only are these cigars capable of severely wounding those who smoke them, but they often lead to inconvenient and deplorable results. Not long ago a gentleman happening to have some in his pocket, and believing them to be ordinary cigars, offered one to his uncle, whose property he expected to inherit and who wore a set of artificial teeth. His horror may be imagined when he saw what appeared to be the entire jaw of his respected relative briskly expelled from his mouth and fasten on to the features of a high official personage, who was heard to shriek out indignantly, "Monsieur, you have bitten me."

GOING A-FISHING.—The following is an "Order for supplies" for a fishing party of two:—"Please to send by bearer the following articles, which, if you prefer it, you can charge to either Mr. A—— or Mr. ——. Either is the safest—Four pounds of salt and a cask of whiskey; one pound of ground black pepper and a dozen bottles of whiskey; four pounds of lard and a large jug of whiskey; four canvassed hams and six quart bottles of whiskey; three good stout fishing lines and a quarter of hundred-weight of biscuits, same weight Cheshire cheese and two large quart pocket flasks of whiskey; one paper of large Limerick hooks, and a gallon of whiskey in any old vessel you don't use; also send one pound of white sugar and a small jug of whiskey. P. S.—As we shall be gone several days, and as we may get wet fishing, my physician, who has just stepped in, suggested that we had better take a little whiskey. Send it and enter it on your books and other items above."

FIELD FOR INDUSTRY.—A singular branch of industry is carried on in Paris by a body of men who devote themselves to picking up dead dogs and old corks which they find floating in the river. The price current for dead dogs is from 14 to 20 cents. The skin is worth five or six cents, the fat sells at about ten cents a pound, and the bones represent an additional five or ten cents, according to weight. Old corks are considerably less productive. They entail washing and sometimes cutting, before they are presentable; and then they only bring a few cents per hundred.

LETTING THE CAT OUT OF THE BAG.—Oftentimes the buyers upon the market when they find good opportunities for practising jokes upon the farmers do so. Last week they made arrangements with one of our citizens to purchase from him all the cats he could find. The man took a team and went down the bay buying cats, in some cases giving as high as 50 cents for them. About half a bag full was brought to the market and before purchasing it was necessary to examine them. The bag was opened by one of the buyers and emptied of its contents upon the open market. About 20 cats skeltered here and there over the market square, and at about this time the "fooled" one began to understand what the cats were wanted for.—Nepanee Standard.

A car will pass over the line on the 5th of October, and the connecting link between Amherst and Truro will be formally opened for traffic two weeks later, on October 21st, or thereabouts.
