Great Running Match in England.

A running match took place last month at Lillieshridge, London, between George Hazael, an English long-distance runner, and Achille Bargossi, who is styled the Italian champion, the distance being thirty miles, and the stakes $200. There is only one instance on record of so long a distance as that of 30 miles being run, and that is as long back as 1853, when J. Rhodes, a Wolverhampton man, ran 30 miles at Birmingham in 3:20:00. The betting was two to one on Hazael, who is a thin, hatchet-faced man, with long, well-shaped legs. Achille Bargossi, on the other hand, is a short, dark-haired little man, of whose nationality there can be no doubt, and who, immediately after starting, was greeted with ironical cheers and cries of "Go it, ice creams." It soon became apparent that the Italian, who is reported have run 50 miles without once stopping, was not in it with his opponent. Hazael ran his first five miles in 29.36, while the Italian took 30.36. Hazael having lapped him (there being three laps to a mile), after going four and a half miles. Bargossi was again lapped after going eight miles, and a third time after Hazael had gone 11 miles. Hazael ran his 10 miles in 57.37, and his 11 miles in 1.3.53. Hazael continued to gain and gain till, after running within a few yards of 15 miles in 1.41.50, the Italian gave up, Hazael at the time having gone close upon 17½ miles. Hazael, however, continued on, and as there had been some betting that he would run his 30 miles in 3½ hours, it was thought that he would have finished the distance, but after running 25 miles in the wonderfully good time of 3.37.27, Hazael stopped, of course receiving the stakes.

Hunted for Thirteen Years.

Thirteen years ago, in the month of August, 1864, John Reilly, a notorious burglar and pickpocket, to escape arrest for burglary committed sometime before, shot and killed officer John O'Brien. The deed was done in a bar room at 507 Ninth avenue, New York. The murderer hastily fled, and for thirteen years eluded the police. For thirteen years he has been a hunted man, roaming from place to place, ever fearing pursuit, even when no one was on his track. His conscience was his constant accuser, and never permitted him for an instant to forget the enormity of his crime. For thirteen years this desperate man suffered the tortures of the doomed, imagining himself pursued by the relentless agents of the law. The whispered cry of "Murder! murder!" no matter where he sought refuge, was ever in his ear, and he found it impossible to stifle the cry of avenging conscience. Always on the move, never at rest, this hunted man continued to flee from imaginary pursuers, until fate at last brought him to New York, the scene of his crime. The past thirteen years have made fearful changes in his appearance. At the time of his crime he was in form a model of manly beauty; now, at the age of forty, he is a shriveled man, permaturely aged, and so changed that few would recognise him. Yeton the evening of the 17th of December last, officer John Cottrell recognised and arrested the hunted man. That night, in the station-house, he said "I am not sorry for my arrest, except for one thing. I have a good old mother; this will kill her. As for myself, I am, oh! so tired of this thing. I don't care what becomes of me. I am tired, tired, tired. I wish it were all over." Let the fate of this hunted desperado be a warning to young men. When the evil spirit prompts you to do wrong, think of the consequence of the act, and exclaim; "I have an aged mother; this will kill her."

Wood Ashes.

A series of experiments detailed in the American Agriculturist by Professor Atwater, of the Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., speaks volumes as to the value of ashes, both unleached and leached. Ashes brought the best returns for the money expended, and horse manure the next. The Professor is of opinion that even leached ashes, costing from 18c. to 28c. per bushel, are more profitable than superphosphate at $45 per ton, or guano at $60. In many Canadian localities leached ashes can be had for the trouble of hauling, and 20c. per load is the highest price we have known to be demanded when a charge is made for them. A dressing of 60 bushels to the acre, about two waggon loads, will produce very perceptible and profitable results. In view of such facts as these, and with the universal outcry about the scarcity of manure, is it not surprising that farmers will ever sell a bushel of ashes, or neglect to avail themselves of leached ashes when they are within practicable reach? To those who have never tried this fertilizer, we earnestly commend at least some experiments with it, firmly believing that it ranks high among neglected manures.

Poultry in Orchards.

With respect to keeping poultry in orchards the "Poultry World" says: This is a matter that should be practised when possible. We believe that when farmers and fruit raisers know the benefits arising from such management, they will at once adopt it. Last fall we visited an orchard in which fowls were kept, the owner of which told us that before the fowls were confined in it the trees made little or no growth, and only a corresponding amount of fruit was obtained. But what a change was evident now. The grass was kept down, the weeds killed, and the trees presented an appearance of thrift, which the most enthusiastic horticulturist could not but admire and envy. The growth of the trees was most vigorous and their foliage remarkably luxuriant. The fruit was abundant, of large size and free from other imperfections. This excellency was accounted for by the proprietor, who remarked that, "the hens ate all the worms and curculios in their reach, even the canker worm." He found less trouble with their roosting in trees than he expected, and that a picket fence six feet high kept them within bounds. His orchard was divided into three sections, and the fowls were changed from one to another as the condition of the fowls or the orchard section seemed to require.

WILL CURE CONSUMPTION.
To all suffering from the following diseases a ray of hope is offered through the kindness of a missionary friend who has sent me the formula of a purely vegetable medicine which has long been used by the native medicine men of Hindostan:—for the positive and radical cure of consumption, bronchitis, asthma, catarrh, dyspepsia, throat and lung difficulty, general debility, loss of manhood and all nervous affections, its power has been tested in hundreds of cases without a failure. I now feel it my sacred duty as far as possible to relieve human misery, and will send the recipe—free of charge—to any person who may desire it with directions for using. Sent by return mail by addressing with two stamps, naming this paper Dr. O. R. Brigham, Drawer 28, Utica, N.Y.

A CARD.
To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a recipe that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. This great remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self addressed envelope to the REV. JOSEPH T. INMAN, Station D, Bible House, New York City.
