Gold in New York at 102½.

☞ Friday next will be the first of February. Is your Taxes paid?

We have to thank Mr Charles Illsey for late Exeter and Plymouth, England.

THE ENGLISH MAIL.—The English mail by the Sarmatian arrived and was distributed at the Post-office last evening.

ENTRANCE EXAMINATION.—A list of the successful candidates at the recent entrance examination for the High School is crowded out to-day.

MASONIC CONVERSAZIONE.—The General Committee on this entertainment will meet to-morrow evening at Walkem & Walkem's office at 7:30.

PROBABILITES for the next twenty-four hours:—For the lower lake region, fresh to brisk easterly to northeasterly winds, cloudy to fair cold weather with snow.

MR SHANNON, of the NEWS, left for Toronto this afternoon to attend a business meeting of the Press Association, of which he is Vice President. He will not return till the beginning of next week.

NEARLY DROWNED.—We are informed that on Saturday last a young man named Powers had a narrow escape from drowning near Cataraqui Bridge. He got in between two logs, and was with difficulty rescued.

RIFLE SHOOTING.—No. 6 Company of the 47th Battalion, Captain Radford, had a company match on Wolfe Island yesterday, when the average score made was 23 points per man. The highest scores were made by J. Todd, who made 53 points out of a possible 60; Private Edwin Charles and Sergt. John Tarrant. The shooting was very good considering the weather.

HAND WRITING.—It was omitted to be stated that in the paragraph in the NEWS of Monday regarding the action of the Peterborough School requiring candidates for the position of writing masters to possess a certificate from a Commercial College, that the Ontario Commercial College, Belleville, was referred to, an institution which is becoming celebrated in the country.

BELLEVILLE SEPARATE SCHOOLS.—Judgment has been given by the County Judge of Hastings in the appeal against the return of certain members of the Separate School Board, on the ground of irregularity. Two sets of Trustees were elected in some instances. Judgment favours the appeal. In this Board as in Toronto Board trouble exists between some of the laity and the clergy.

LARCENY.—A young fellow named William Johnston was charged at the Police Court this morning with stealing a jacket from Mr P. Harty's door last night. He pleaded guilty and was sent to gaol for three months. This should be a warning to merchants not to expose their goods at their doors, especially in winter, when the doors are shut. Ex Policeman Stacey arrested Johnston while he was trying to dispose of the jacket, and took him to the Station House.

CIVIL RIGHTS ALLIANCE. From Kingston too we have good news, the friends of civil and religious liberty there could not well hold aloof from us, and their names are coming for enrolment, accompanied by a request that a Branch of Alliance may be established in Kingston. This will be speedily accomplished; and the true heartedness, the zeal and love of freedom, which characterize so many of the inhabitants of that town will contribute largely to the real strength and working power of the Alliance—Vindicator, Montreal.—[A meeting was to be held in the Y.M.C.A. rooms this afternoon to consider the advisability of forming a branch of the Alliance here.]

THE LATE LIEUT-COL. COFFIN, says the Witness, whose death is announced from Ottawa, was Commissioner of Ordnance and Admiralty lands. He has for a long time been in the public service, entering as assistant Civil Secretary for Lower Canada in 1838. For a number of years he was a joint Sheriff of Montreal, and was appointed to his last office in 1856. He was a Special Government Commissioner on many occasions. He was long in the volunteer force, and was promoted to be Lieut. Col. for raising the Montreal Field Battery in 1855. In 1872 he declined the Lieut. Governship of Manitoba and the North-West territories. He was the author of several works which were published in Montreal, and was a Governor of McGill College. Born in 1808, he was about seventy years of age at the time of his death.

PORTSMOUTH RINK CLUB.—The regular meeting of the Portsmouth Rink Club was held last evening at the Town Hall, the President, Mr C. E. Dobbs, presiding. The proceedings were opened by prayer by Rev. Mr Dobbs. The Rev. W. B. Carey and Messrs. J. W. Henstridge, A. Cameron and W. Drury delivered short addresses, and readings were given by Messrs. Henstridge and Ranton. Mr Ranton resigned his position as Secretary of the Club, and Mr J. W. Henstridge was appointed in his place. A vote of thanks was tendered to Mr Ranton for his services since the formation of the Club. The meeting was a very interesting one, and a number of signatures were obtained to the pledge. The total number of members is 138. Hymns were sung at intervals during the evening, and the meeting was dismissed with the benediction.

METHODIST MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Anniversary Services.

The second public meeting in connection with the Methodist Missionary anniversaries was held last (Tuesday) evening in Queen Street Methodist Church, which was densely packed by the audience. There were present on and around the platform the Revs. W. Galbraith, John Potts, J. G. Crozier, A. C. Chambers, A. A. Smith, Dr. Jackson, and others. The proceedings were opened by singing the hymn, "The heavens declare Thy glory, Lord," the Rev. Mr Crozier offering prayer.

Rev. Mr Galbraith then delivered a brief address, adverting to the wisdom displayed in the selection of speakers for the anniversaries. The meeting of the previous evening was said to have been the best ever held in Kingston in the Methodist Church, and the meeting in Queen Street Church was also very large. He called upon Dr. McCammon to take the chair.

Dr. McCammon said there were three things he had to mention—1st, he promised them good music; 2nd, good speeches; and 3rd, he wished the audience to promise a good collection. The Missionary Society was very much in debt; as who, he asked, was not? The Committee was in debt and it asked to be relieved of this debt, and he had no doubt it would be done.

The choir then sang "We praise Thee, O God," in fine style, after which

Dr. Skinner was introduced. He spoke at some length, advancing arguments why missions should be supported. He showed what Christianity had done, and compared the civilization of heathen lands with that where Christianity reigned. He showed how civil and religious liberty had been enhanced by the principles instilled by the Gospel, and urged the sending out of missionaries to spread that which had done so much good at home. He appealed earnestly for good subscriptions to the cause of missions.

Mr Rechab Tandy then sang "In Native Worth," which was followed by an anthem, excellently sung by the choir.

The Rev. A. A. Smith was the next speaker. He expressed the great pleasure he had in being present. He had often heard of the Kingston missionary meetings, and of how successful they were. After having been at them he could say, as did the Queen of Sheba respecting Solomon's riches, "The half had not been told." After some humorous remarks about long speeches and sermons, and reference to old time missionary meetings, when resolutions were moved, Mr Smith proceeded to say that no cause had of late years attracted so much attention in the Christian world as the cause of missions. He spoke of what missionaries had accomplished in all parts of the world. Man was represented in the Bible as a fallen creature—the favoured of heaven and the lord of the earth had been in God's sight a crawling worm. His condition was worse now than it had been in the time of St. Paul. The great object of missions was to raise mankind and to make them purer and better. The field of missions was a very wide one, and embraced China, Japan, India, South America and other countries. Only one-third of the entire population of the world was alive to the Gospel. The Gospel was the only remedy to raise fallen men, and it never had proved a failure. The Gospel was still "the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth." There was a power—he might say a charm—in the Cross of Christ which nothing could withstand. They were encouraged by the triumphant achievements of missionaries in the past, and notwithstanding the efforts of all enemies the Gospel had had free course, and was glorified. The Westminster Review and modern scoffers spoke of the Gospel as a failure, but it could be proved it was no failure. An eminent missionary, after visiting many stations, had declared in Exeter Hall that had he been an infidel, the sights he had seen would have changed him to a believer. In Canada there had been brilliant successes. In 1791 the first missionary, Lossie, had crossed the St. Lawrence into Ontario, and look at the results to-day. Chief Justice Robinson, who could not be said to be partial to Methodism, said of their Society, "Canada owed a debt of gratitude to the agents of the Society which it never could repay." He believed in looking at the future of the cause, which he was sure was a glorious one. Whatever might be the different views respecting the millenium, God's word declared that every one should serve God, and this would be the result of future labours. Mr Smith concluded an excellent speech by pointing out what was the duty of the people in the mission work.

The Tandy Bros. sang a sacred duet, "I feel Thy blissful presence," in splendid style, and were loudly applauded.

The Rev. Mr Potts was then introduced, and was greeted with hearty applause. He began by referring to the fine singing with which the audience had been treated during the evening, by the choir and the Tandy Bros. He had often heard of the Messrs Tandy, whose reputation was provincial. He stated his opinion that the choir of Queen Street Church was equal to the Metropolitan choir of Toronto. He proceeded to say that he was glad to hear of the increasing spirit of union manifested in Kingston. If Principal Grant, who had recently come among them, represented the spirit of the different Churches, they were met not far from the millenium. Toronto had also recently sent a pastor to them who would be the very Apostle John of Love to Kingston—he referred to the Rev. Dr. Jackson (who was present.) Mr Potts then proceeded to speak on the subject of collections, and whispered to the people of Queen Street, that he would like to see them give a larger contribution than that of Sydenham Street—that the daughter should excel the mother in good works. Referring to the old time fashion of moving resolutions, Mr Potts related an anecdote of three passed at a Church meeting among the coloured people in the West Indies, which he thought might well be copied: 1st, Resolved, That all give something; 2nd, That all give cheerfully; 3rd, That all give according to their ability. Referring to collections, Mr Potts related a conversation he had with a dignitary of the Roman Catholic Church, who said he always took up the collection himself, because he knew what the people should give. He (Mr Potts) suggested that Messrs Galbraith and Crozier should do this every Sunday, and perhaps the collections would be better. There were three questions which he proposed to consider at that time: 1st, Are missions worth what they cost? 2nd, Has the Church the ability to sustain the missionary cause? And 3rd, Will the Church honour the faith reposed in it? As to the first question, are missions worth what they cost? Mr Potts said, is education worth having? Ask the student, the professor or the literary man, and these will wonder at such a question being asked. Is commerce worth what it costs? Ask the merchant, the clerk, the master mechanic, or the tradesman, and the answer will be that it is worth the cost. He was prepared to answer that missions are worth what they cost. What have they cost? They have cost money, and it was only a fool who would belittle the use of money, which was the great moving element of the world. Missions have cost men, who were of much greater value than money. They have cost the best men and women in the Churches, who have sacrificed their lives in the cause. What has the cause of missions achieved? The speaker compared the bloodless acquisition of the Feejee Islands with the conquering of the natives of New Zealand, the reason for the former being that the missionary had preceded the soldier, while the soldier had preceded the missionary to the Maories. In Canada and the United States there was a great difference. An eminent American gentleman said once that every Indian killed had cost the United States Government about $100,000, and the Indian wars had cost about $500,000,000. In Canada not a single dollar had been spent in this way for the acquisition of the great Northwest Territory, but the immense tract had been ceded by the Indians through the influence of men like Egerton Ryerson Young, George Macdougall and George Young. The promises made to the Indians were fully carried out, and there had been no blood shed. Missions were certainly worth what they cost in a material point of view. But they had also to look at the salvation of the soul. The soul of a man in Japan, British Columbia or among the French Canadians was as valuable in the sight of God as any in Kingston. The second question was, had the Church the ability to sustain the missionary enterprise? He laid it down as an indisputable proposition that an obligation can never transcend ability. He was a tyrant who asked for more work or service than a child or servant can give; and God does not ask more than the Church can do in the missionary cause. The The Church had the ability to sustain the cause, for its resources had scarcely been touched yet. The Church had the money, and there was a time coming when the day labourer would work more earnestly because he was working for Christ; when the merchant, the physician, and the lawyer would each use their talents ably because they were working for Christ. The day was coming when men would give to missions as they never had given before. Christendom controlled the commerce, the education, literature and wealth of the world, and it would be strange if the missions would be neglected. Then the Church had ability in men. There never was a period when the Methodist Church had not a man to fill the place, wherever it might happen to be. George Cochrane left the Metropolitan Church, Toronto, to go to Japan; George Young left a comfortable home in Toronto to go to plant the banner of the cross in Winnipeg. There were men enough in all the Churches and denominations to fill the positions if they were properly asked for. Did they want a man to rouse the masses by the simple story of the Cross? Then D. L. Moody was raised up. Did they want a man of acute mental power, who could combat the scientific heresies of the day? They had him in Joseph Cook, who seemed to have been specially raised up to destroy the scepticism of New England in the very Athens of America. Mr Potts then proceeded to discuss the third point, will the Church honour the faith reposed in her? Whose faith? God's. If they looked at everything in the Church, they would see that God had faith in it. God decreed that man should be saved by man. There was a tremendous responsibility imposed upon them if they refused to shed the light they enjoyed to others. Would the Church honour the faith reposed in her by the Missionary Committee? That Committee met every year, and agreed that so much should be spent. The Chairman then pronounced the benediction, and the members separated, without having a dollar in the Treasury. The same thing occurred in the District Conferences, and then they came and asked the people to honour the faith reposed in them by the Committee. Mr Potts then spoke of the missionary's faith. Not one had ever asked on being appointed to a mission what he was going to be paid. They went in faith, and they had faith in the people. Would Queen street honour that faith? He believed he could answer, yes. They had in Canada a grand field for missionary operations and all they wanted was money; and he closed his address with an earnest appeal to the Methodists to assist in clearing off the debt of the Missionary Society.

The collection and subscriptions were then taken up, the choir singing Heber's Missionary Hymn, "From Greenland's Icy Mountains." One subscription of $100 was announced, one of $40, one of $30, and several of $25. The collection amounted to $29, and the subscriptions to $440.

After the doxology had been sung, the Rev. Dr. Jackson dismissed the meeting with the benediction.

QUEEN STREET CHOIR.—At the missionary meeting in Queen Street Church last evening the Rev. Mr Potts declared in his address that he had never heard the singing of last night excelled in any of the large cities in which he had resided. The compliment was no small one. The Queen Street Choir is under the leadership of Mr William Tandy, and it certainly deserved the high compliment paid to it by Mr Potts. Mr R. Tandy lent his assistance on the above occasion.

COOL BURGESS.—The Cool Burgess Company played to a large house last evening, and the performance gave general satisfaction. Cool himself did not sing, as he had a cold, but he created great merriment by his stump speeches. The rest of the company played well.

The County Debt.

We have received a copy of the private bill introduced into the Ontario Legislature by Mr Calvin to legalize certain by-laws, doubts of their legality having arisen; and also to consolidate the debt of the county. The latter subject was discussed at the recent meeting of the Council, and the feeling of the members seemed to be strongly in favour of it. The total debt of the county is $262,400, of which $150,000 is the bonus granted to the Kingston and Pembroke Railway. The bill in the first clause provides for the legalizing of the by-laws, and then proceeds to authorize the issue of fresh debentures to consolidate the debt above mentioned, the interest being at the rate of six per cent per annum. A portion of the debentures are to be made payable each year for thirty years from the time the by-law takes effect. The result of the passing of the Bill will be that the county will be relieved from the heavy incubus that lies upon it, and there will be a prospect of all liabilities being met within the period agreed upon.

Short Notes.

The cold snap continues.

It was rather Cool at the City Hall last night.

The death of Col. Coffin, in Ottawa, is much regretted.

A herd of cattle crossed on the ice to Cape Vincent this morning.

The collection and subscriptions at the Missionary meeting last night nearly reached $500.

Week of prayer at Chalmers' Church this week, preparatory to Communion next Sabbath.

The new Windsor Hotel, Montreal has been opened. The fittings are said to be a magnificent scale.

Juvenile missionary meeting at the Sydenham Street Church this evening. Addresses by Revs. A. A. Smith and S. W. Jolliffe.

The revival services in the Primitive Methodist Church are being very successfully conducted by Mr S. R. Briggs, of Toronto.

Misses Wilson and Bates, of this city are to sing at a charitable concert in Belleville to-morrow evening. The Belleville people may depend on a rich musical treat.

The Rev. Leonard Gaetz, of St. James' Methodist Church, Montreal, is to lecture in that city under the auspices of the Civil Rights Alliance on "Young Canada."

The Kate Fisher troupe became involved in financial difficulties in Quebec, and the result was the seizure of the fiery, untamed steed, "Black-Bess," and some of the properties.

Great interest was manifested in the result of the Halifax election last night. The telegraph offices had many anxious enquirers of both political parties. The Ministerialists were particularly anxious. It is said that a good deal of betting was indulged in.

"Long exposure has had the effect of congealing the water in the harbour at last," remarked a young swell to his companion last night on Princess street, just as they were passing two young ladies whose attention the speaker wished to attract. "Too thin!" replied one of the latter, as they tripped lightly along.

The Belleville Ontario, speaking of a Methodist Church festival in that city, says, addresses were delivered by the Rev. Messrs Cullen and Hanson. "In the course of the remarks of the former gentleman he administered a very unkind cut to the local papers, in a jocular way, however, and we pardon the allusion, promising the Rev. gentleman that the next time we hear of a worthy sermon we will make a note of it."

"How smoothly the world moves" remarked a young Princess street merchant last evening, while speaking to a friend of his success in business. He had barely time to finish the sentence quoted above when the smoothness of things earthly was verified by his nasal organ coming in contact with the slippery boardwalk. But he gallantly rallied, and the last seen of him was standing on the corner of Princess and Montreal streets holding a big chunk of ice to the wounded member, in the hope of reducing its unusual dimensions. He was afraid to go home.

CORRECTION.—In the report of the proceedings of the City Council on Monday evening, it was incorrectly stated that the means of the "Ladies' Poor Relief Society" was exhausted. This is not the case, however; it was the funds of the special "Workingmen's Aid Fund" which were exhausted. Thanks to the liberality of the citizens, and especially to the very generous donations of a few gentlemen, the Ladies' Society is still able to relieve the needs of the classes for whom its funds are collected and given, i.e., the sick and helpless, the aged, and widows with young children. But the comparatively small means at their command make it simply impossible for them to attempt to meet the needs of the large number of unemployed workingmen and their families, which they never undertook to do. It was the number of applications made to them from this class of sufferers, which led to their petitioning the Council on their behalf.—Com.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.—At a meeting of the Emmett Benevolent Society, of Portsmouth, No. 24, I.C.B.U. the following gentlemen were elected office-bearers for the ensuing year; President, P. J. Fitzgerald; 1st Vice President, A. Bisnett; 2nd Vice President, P. Beaupre; Secretary, P. J. Finn; Financial Secretary, M. P. Finn; Treasurer, J. Connors; Tyler, P. Campbell; Chaplain, Rev. Father Twohey. Committee: R. G. Fitzgerald, J. D. Fitzgerald, H. Hanigan and J. Seymour. This branch was was organized on the 8th of the present month by Mr W. J. Garrigan, Vice President of the Irish Catholic Benevolent Union, of Kingston, and is in a flourishing condition.

☞ Friday next will be the first of February. Is your Taxes paid?
