TUESDAY EVENING, FEB. 13.

Kingston General Hospital.

We recently published some comparative statistics of the different hospitals of Ontario, and showed a record favourable in every respect to the Kingston Hospital. To-day we proceed to furnish the medical statistics, which have been carefully prepared by Mr Clark, the painstaking house surgeon. These statistics are both interesting and instructive. While they show a formidable amount of human suffering, they represent what this locality has been during the past year peculiarly exempt from epidemic diseases. There is only one case of Varioloid reported; this we learn was a young English immigrant who was brought to our shores by the S. S. St. David, and was conveyed hither by the G. T. R.; being labelled in Kingston with the eruption fully formed, but the disease was not communicated to a single soul, showing an absence of that morbid state of the air which aids in the spread of infectious diseases. The Watkins wing of the Kingston Hospital is so arranged that it may upon occasion be perfectly isolated from the main building, so that there need not be the remotest danger of small pox in this wing being communicated to the other patients.

Very lately, the hospital funds having become entirely exhausted, an appeal was made for help to several municipalities, whose constituents had furnished patients to the hospital. Already the County of Frontenac has responded with a gift of $100, and Lennox & Addington with $200, and letters have been received by the governors from other sources, promising aid in very handsome terms. The Kingston City Council has not yet had time to respond. Although Kingston has received the greatest measure of substantial benefit from the hospital, the city council has only once been asked in eighteen years to contribute to its funds, and only that once has it contributed £100. The need for help which then existed now exists, and it is pretty certain to meet with a ready response, especially as there are no less than four of the members of the council who are governors of the hospital at the present moment.

The Prince of Wales attended church at Sandringham on Sunday. The number of seats in St. Paul's on the occasion of the thanksgiving ceremonies is limited to 8,000.

Mr John Goss, of St. Paul's Cathedral has resigned, after a service of thirty-three years, having succeeded his master, Thomas Atwood, who was a pupil of Mozart in 1838. The Post announces that Dr. John Stainer, M.A., organist of Magdalen College, and to the University of Oxford, has accepted the post.

The Grand Duke, according to the Louisville papers, found the prettiest girl in Louisville. This is a very fickle grand duke evidently, for he was equally happy in New York, Boston, Chicago, and every other city which he has visited. He saw the noble Indian girl and matron on the western plains, and he paid the western plains the same compliment.

A Grit contemporary speaks of what it calls the "ruffianly conduct of the Tories in Opposition." That is rather neatly put. It is important to keep a clear line of distinction between the "Tories in Opposition" and those supporting the Government. To abuse the former may be quite safe; but the latter have the fate of the Government in their hands, so their Toryism must be gently dealt with.

A joking Harvard student recently called for a doctor in great haste, directing the servant where he should go. The doctor came, but found his services unnecessary, and his call a hoax. So far it was all very well; but the servant recognized the caller, and the next day the doctor called on him and asked him whether he would rather pay twenty dollars or be arrested. He said he thought so too, and paid twenty dollars.

JAMES SWIFT, AGENT, St. Lawrence Wharf.

Kingston, July 20, 1871.

THE CANADIAN BEAVER AND THE MARQUIS OF LORNE.

The Peterborough Times of the 3rd Feb. says:—Mr James Miller, Reeve of Otonabee, while on a visit in Scotland, called on the Marquis of Lorne, and since his return has forwarded him two Beaver Cuts, which he found in the County of Victoria, while lumbering there some winters ago. He has just received the following acknowledgement from the Marquis, enclosing two beautful photographs of Himself and Her Royal Highness, the Princess Louise.

Inverary, Oct. 28, 1871.

"The Marquis of Lorne has received the Beaver Cuts pieces of wood that Mr Miller kindly sent him, and asks Mr Miller to accept his thanks for this interesting remembrance from the County of Victoria. It was a pleasure to Lord Lorne to see Mr Miller at Inverary, and these Photographs are sent in the hope that he will keep them to remind him of the visit."

Mr Miller may well be proud of such a letter, and we are sure he will always prize and value it highly.—Belleville Intelligencer.

NOT PROVEN.

A contemporary says:

"The vexed question as to whether Lt.-Gov. Archibald shook hands with Riel or not, has been settled in the affirmative by the testimony of the Hon. Mr Gerard, who, while defending His Excellency's conduct during the debate on the 2nd instant, declared that he himself had introduced the worthies to one another, and that they had shaken hands. It is just as well to have this unquestionable testimony on record."

Yes; and it is just as well to have on record the equally unquestioned statement of the gentleman named, that he did not introduce Riel as Riel, but as the chief of a band of French people ready to go to the front. He says, "I introduced His Excellency to the man who had been chosen by the French people as their chief. I briefly introduced him as the chief." So, after all, it remains to be proven that His Excellency knew at the time that he was shaking hands with Riel, or that Mr Gerard knew he was introducing to the Lieutenant-Governor the notorious criminal on whose head a price was set. The effort thus far to make out a case against Lieutenant-Governor Archibald is a failure, and we must, unless some better evidence than has yet been produced is offered, hold it as not proven. It would be just as well if the enemies of Lieutenant-Governor Archibald, in their efforts to convict him of the offence they charge against him, would be honest about the matter and not suppress one half of the truth in order that the other half might appear to his discredit.—Hamilton Spectator.

HOW A SCOTCHMAN LAID OUT THREE CONFIDENCE OPERATORS.

George Hamilton, a big burly Scotchman from Dumfriesshire, arrived here last week in the Glasgow steamer. Before coming, he had made himself in part acquainted by a diligent perusal of New York newspapers with the ways of the city. The knowledge thus acquired, added to his natural shrewdness and great courage, made him rather a dangerous pigeon for the confidence operators to attempt to pluck. In West street, at the foot of Dey, he paused for a moment to look around him. Three well-dressed men approached him from behind. One of them touched him on the arm. The man held in his hand an open pocket book stuffed with greenbacks. He elevated the pocketbook until it was under the Scotchman's nose, and said:

"Friend, you have just dropped your pocketbook."

"Ye dinna say so," Hamilton exclaimed, gazing on the greenbacks and preparing to grasp the book.

"Stay, friend," said the man, closing the book and holding it behind him, "you see it's our duty to give this book to the police, and then it would cost you some trouble and money to get it. Me and my friends here, however, seen you drop it, and if you'll give us a $20 bill we'll hand it to you without any more bother."

By this time the three men had gathered in front of Hamilton. Hamilton raised his hand as though to put it into his side pocket.

"Ye thievin' divils!" he exclaimed, and drawing off before the astounded men could comprehend his intention, he planted his fists right and left in the faces of two of them, and sent the third reeling into the gutter with such a kick as only a brawny Scot who had made the leather ball fly on the links of Dumfries could have administered. The confidence men picked themselves up and went off in a hurry.

"Fient a pocketbook I iver had i' my hale exeestence," said the Scot to the bystanders, "I h'ard o' the game afore, though, an' nane o' the rievin' scoondrels are gangin' to mak' a fule o' me, de'il tak em!"

Young Japan is starting daily newspapers, to supersede the old official journals, which alone have been published in that country. One of the new dailies has already begun to ridicule the baggy breeches and feminine costumes of the men, contrasting them with the neat and serviceable costume of Europeans. The strange confusion of Japanese and Chinese characters used for printing is the source of great annoyance, and it is said that English characters will be adopted and the use of the English tongue be extended.

A Cleveland man knows how to enjoy all the comforts of a home. When he sees a book pedler or a sewing machine man in front of his house, he touches up his face with a box of water-colours, in imitation of small-pox pustules, goes to the front door, and then laughs to see the callers try to break their necks in getting over the gate and fence.

The New York Evening Mail says:—All our rich people have become wild lately on the subject of descent; armorial bearings are the fashionable study, and New York is blessed with that sweet boon, a herald's college. DeBrett and Burke are faithfully conned by every ambitious nobody, and if among the role of Britain's nobility can be found a name which in any way resembles his own, joy fills his breast, and straightway Gimbrede hath an order. For two weeks does the armorial fever rack our nobody's soul; the coat-of-arms he has stolen rises ever before him; but at last the disease comes to the surface, and breaks out over paper, carriage-panels, silver and all his household goods in griffins, dragons and "chimeras dire," the outward and visible sign of an inward and spiritual" snobbishness.

It is said that Lady Geraldine H. A. Somerset, sister of the Duke of Beaufort, is about to be married to Signor Mario. It may not be generally known that Signor Marie is a Neapolitan noble of high family, and was known for some time as an accomplished amateur singer before he was induced to take a professional engagement.

A sad occurrence happened on the 11th ult., at the residence of the Earl of Romney, Mote Park, Kent. His lordship is in the habit of giving an annual ball to the servants and their friends, and the event came off on the evening named. A few minutes before midnight a young woman named Annie Laura Holland, the still-room maid, having just danced, sat down on a sofa, saying that she was unwell, and almost directly afterwards fell on her face to the floor and expired. An inquest was held on Friday evening, and a verdict of death from natural causes was rendered.

If you desire a mild, pleasant, safe and agreeable Cathartic, which will cause neither nausea or griping pains, use nature's remedy, Helmbold's Grape Pills. They are purely vegetable; their component parts being Catawba "Grape Juice and Fluid Extract Rhubarb." Should you desire a brilliant complexion, youthful appearance, new life, new fresh blood and renewed vigour, use Helmbold's Extract Sarsaparilla.—Adv.

It is now generally admitted by honest physicians, that when once the consumption is fairly fastened upon the lungs, no human power can save the patient from death. They also say that about fifty per cent of those who die from this disease can trace the cause to a neglected cough or cold, which might have been cured by a small bottle of Liquid Opodeldoc, or what is the same thing, Johnson's Anodyne Liniment.—Adv.

It has been very generally recognized, that where diseases of the bladder, kidneys, and urinary organs have to be dealt with, there is no preparation so effective as Helmbold's Buchu. It is equally famous for organic weakness, grave, dropsy, diabetes, strangury, and female irregularities.—Adv.
