THEY MUST BE SEEN.

The Toronto Telegram comes to the sensible conclusion that "the government of the United States cannot exclude the element of which Leon Czolgosz is a type. It cannot inflict a penalty so fearful as to terrorize the fanatics which the anarchist sentiment will occasionally breed. The one safe method of preventing assassinations is to give diligent protection to the life the assassin seeks." Does that mean that all men of authority must become more or less secluded, that they must mingle less among the common people, that they must become less democratic in their manners? The president of a republic, like that across our border, is a man of the people, and to some extent their idol. In the campaigns that precede his election he must be very much in evidence, must travel extensively, make many speeches, and show himself repeatedly. After his election he must be willing to show that he appreciates the favour with which his administration is entertained. One cannot imagine the effect of a president's complete withdrawal from the public, and the manifestation of his life and presence by certain acts of government. No; the man of the people cannot hide himself. As occasion requires he must be seen, but he can be guarded, as Mr. McKinley does not seem to have been, from the attacks of anarchists and insane men.

COUNCIL VS. SCHOOL BOARD.

Mayor Howland, of Toronto, wants the law amended so that the school boards will have to submit their budgets to the city councils to be considered by their finance committees and cut and carved like the estimates of the civic committees. There is only one ground for the suggestion, namely, that the councils have to impose the rate of taxation and that the school boards are not held strictly to account for their administration of the funds. The argument is not very forceful.

The school boards do not invite the service of as many men as the councils. Their work is not seemingly attractive. And yet there is no public occupation more exalted and important than that of an educationist, whether he be employed in teaching or legislating. The school system is complex enough to take up more time than the average man, if at all busy, is ready to give to it, and that, it involves so much consideration is proof enough that no committee of the council could revise or pass upon the budget of the school board.

The school expenses are generally well understood. In Kingston they have not varied so much from year to year. The budget is sent annually to the council, and it can be figured out what it represents in the way of taxation. Each tax bill is supposed to contain an entry of the rate for school purposes, so that the elector knows the whole amount which is wanted for school purposes, and, if he reads the reports of the board meetings, he can see how it is divided or expended.

To consent to the change suggested by Mayor Howland would be to legislate backwards. The Toronto council and its board of control have in hand all they can attend to now. They can very well leave to the school board the special functions which have been assigned to it by the legislature. If the school trustees become extravagant the electors can and will attend to them. Better abolish the school board and commit its work to a civic committee than have the board of control tamper and destroy its usefulness by impracticable recommendations.

SWEARING THE TEACHERS.

The principal of the London Normal school has severely criticized the Sunday school of the present day. The church that spends ten times as much upon its choir and adult comforts as upon the Sunday school and its equipment is pursuing an unwise policy. The question is sometimes asked, How is it that the young people leave the Sunday school so early in life? It should be. How is it that, usually, the church is doing so little to keep the young people under training for usefulness?

The Sunday school needs to be progressive. When conventions are held little good is accomplished. Why? Talks are given by men who are not familiar with the subject, who are not in touch with the Sunday schools, who are not actually engaged in Sunday school work. The result is apparent. The attendance is light. The benefit is invisible.

There was such a convention in Kingston last week. Any city Sunday school which massed its workers could show more life than was there manifested. Excepting in one case the clerical leaders in the discussion did not deal practically with Sunday school issues, and this is a very practical age. Men and women, who have been doing faithful service under difficulties, listened to men saying strange things. Said a teacher, after an address: "What did Mr. Wood mean by swearing in the teacher? I can understand why one should be devoted, and give a pledge of constancy to the cause he espouses, but this swearing in is something new." It seems so. It is a smart remark that does not convey much significance with it.

Sunday school teachers are, it seems, a scarce commodity. They are hard to get at any time, and their services must be accepted in any case without comment. If they are to be put under discipline, and held to duty by an oath, they will disappear, and the church will find itself up against a very real and substantial difficulty. Perhaps it would not be amiss if something occurred to bring the church to a sense of its responsibility and make it give to the Sunday school the attention which is its due.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The distribution of honors by the Duke of York is not questioned, but it is commented upon. When the heads of so many educational institutions were remembered, why not all? Who is responsible for the selection?

Dr. Rose, of Ottawa, is mentioned as editor of the Christian Guardian in succession to Dr. Courtice. Some day the Guardian will give place to a live newspaper man upon its staff, and he will make his influence felt. The layman is sometimes overlooked by the church.

Mr. Brown, the new member of the Dunsmuir government, in British Columbia, has been defeated. He was a member of the opposition. His call incensed both liberals and conservatives and they cast him out of their counsels. Joe Martin must be in a furious condition of mind.

Mrs. Carrie Nation makes her mark wherever she goes. She does it with her little hatchet. While in Ottawa she should have visited the senate saloon and given some expression of what she thought of it. It is the one spot in the country that can stand a wrecking.

Mr. Whitney's troubles are by no means settled. He had the offices in the provincial association changed so that he would be the supreme power in the executive, and he finds Dr. Beattie is the big push as chief of the organizing departments Mr. Whitney would like to move Dr. Beattie, but he is a fixture. What is to be done?

A telegram from Quebec lauds Major Maude as a wonder-worker in social receptions. The duke's visit to Canada is in his hands, and his arrangements are said to be perfect. Major Maude is said to have had command of the Queen's Jubilee in London. Was not Lord Methuen credited with the same thing? Wasn't he praised for his splendid work? Something is mixed.

Albany is in the hands of the Philistines so far as the lighting of the city is concerned. It has been paying $124 per lamp per year, and for a new term of five years will be required to pay $110 per lamp. And in Montreal as good a service is being performed at $60 per lamp per year, and a company offered it at $54 per lamp per year. Albany is being heavily taxed—because there is no competition.

A Memory Of Moore.

The coming of age of lord Powerscourt's son and heir recalls the visit of king George IV. to Ireland eighty odd years ago. The then lord Powerscourt entertained the king, and the following entry appears in Tom Moore's Diary: "Find that lord Powerscourt, with whom the king dined the day he embarked from Dunleary (now Kingstown), was courageous enough to have a song of mine, 'The Prince's Day' (to the air of St. Patrick's Day), sung before him immediately after 'God Save the King,' and that his majesty was much delighted with it." The Irish bard, in extenuation of his own laudatory song, says that he can find "nothing in it to be ashamed of," but he takes care to add: "The only excuse I can find for the worse than eastern prostration with which my countrymen have revelled during the king's visit the last few weeks, is that they have so long been slaves, they know no better, and that it is not their own fault if they know no medium between brawling, rebellion, and fool-licking idolatry."

Cotton For China

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 20.—Since the cessation of hostilities in China the Southern cotton mills have been receiving many orders from China, and their business has materially increased. The Dallas mills of Huntsville, Ala., have just closed a contract with a big firm in Southern China to furnish 1,2000 bales of cotton sheeting at $60 a bale.

DUCHESS A LOVABLE WOMAN

CANADIANS PAY HER HIGH TRIBUTE.

Perhaps She's Not a Beauty, But Sympathy, Kindness, and Motherliness Are Her Characteristics.

Toronto Star.

Montreal, Sept. 19.—Ever since the Royal party landed at Quebec there has been a spirited discussion among those Canadians who have been in contact with the group regarding the duchess' personal appearance.

"A beautiful woman!" cries one, who sees in a woman the underlying beauty of love and character. "A lovable, motherly woman, whom Britons will be proud of when she ascends the throne."

Those in opposition on the question declare that by the Canadian or any other standard she is not beautiful, and what they desire to see in a woman of the duchess' position is a magnificent person, an outward mask of regular features, languorous eyes, red lips, broad forehead, a picture of rare beauty to feast one's eyes upon. Granted the duchess is not beautiful, as measured by the eyes of the man who would gaze upon and admire a woman whose face would appeal to him from a crowd, she is all that her royal grandmother-in-law, queen Victoria, desired in a wife of the heir presumptive, a woman for home and maternal cares. The duchess is best described as the populace describe her as she passes along the streets.

"What a nice woman!" flies from mouth to mouth. Business man and mechanic will repeat it and smile contentedly, for they recognize in her, not an imperious patrician beauty, but a woman brimming over with sympathy and kindness, a woman who will be to her subjects, if she ever shares the throne, what the good mother queen Victoria was, a woman who will not hesitate to enter humble dwellings and smooth a sufferer's wrinkled brow.

The duchess is of slender, willowy figure. Her eyes gaze upon one in such an interested, intelligent way, and her animation, when not under restraint by a formal function, is noticed by all who come in contact. The only piece of coquetry in her highness is a little curl brought down low on her forehead midway between her eyes, a fashion much affected by the beauties of Toronto several years ago, and then described colloquially as a "beau catcher."

By the way, lady Lygon, the duchess' lady-in-waiting, her closest friend, bears a striking resemblance to her highness, and is frequently mistaken for her.

WENT DOWN WITH VESSEL.

The Commander Folded His Arms and Went Down.

London, Sept. 20.—Nothing has been learned of the missing members of the crew of the torpedo boat destroyer, the Cobra, which foundered in the North sea as the result of an explosion, and no hope is held out for their safety. The torpedo boats and cruisers have all gone at full speed to the scene of the disaster, which is the most serious the navy has suffered since the sinking of the Victoria.

Lieut. Bosworth Smith, the Cobra's commander, stood upon the bridge with his arms folded as impassable as if on parade and went down with his vessel.

Didn't Regard Convict's Evidence.

Woodstock, Ont., Sept. 20.—James Munro, Ingersoll, was found not guilty of stealing $105 worth of hides from the tannery here. Richard Hicks, the man supposed to have been Munro's accomplice, serving a three-year term at Kingston, having pleaded guilty, was brought from the penitentiary to testify, and he said Munro and himself did the stealing. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty, disregarding the evidence of the convict.

Suit For Damages.

Muncie, Ind., Sept. 20.—James Carver, jockey, has sued John Bronnenburg, a wealthy race horse owner, for $10,000. At a race at Middleton this summer Bronnenburg is alleged to have instructed a jockey who was riding his horse to "win if he had to kill some one." In the race which followed Carver was run down and crippled for life.

California Wine Shipments.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 20.—Shipments of wines and brandies from California in bulk by rail for the year ending June 30th, aggregated 11,508,633 gallons, as compared with 12,976,200 gallons for the preceding year. This loss is fully made up by an increase in shipments of wines in cases, which were 5,000 cases in excess of the previous year.

The Cardinal's Refusal.

Paris, Sept. 20.—Cardinal Ingeniux, archbishop of Rheims, refused to submit to the censorship of the government, the speech he intended to make on the occasion of the czar's visit to the cathedral, with the result that the reception at the cathedral was not held, the czar making merely an informal visit there

Mississippi, Sept. 18.—Charles Johnston and family have moved to Main Centre. Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Allan visited friends in the vicinity of Kingston last week. Mrs. N. Clark and nephew, Bert. Clark, returned on Saturday from the states where they have been spending a couple of weeks. Mrs. Y. T. Hampton, Lillies' Mills, is visiting at N. Clark's. Miss Emma Dustin spent Sunday at her home near Clarendon. A number of the boys from Sharbot Lake made a flying visit here on Sunday. Mrs. John O'Connors and son, Toronto, visiting at R. Allan's. The first wedding ever solemnized in Snow Road Presbyterian church was celebrated on Tuesday, Sept. 17th, when Miss Gertrude M. Allan, daughter of Robert Allan, Mississippi, and Louis Marguerat, Harper's Corners, took unto themselves the vows of matrimony, the service being performed by Rev. James Binnie. The bridesmaids were Misses Lizzie and Pearl Allan, sisters of the bride. The groom was supported by his brother, John Marguerat. The choir sang, "Oh Father, All Creating," as the bridal party entered. The bride was attired in a cream cashmere, with satin stripe, made with a round yoke and puffs on sleeves of heavy lace, and trimmed with silk lace and beads. The skirt had a small train with ruffle, a net veil and bouquet of bridal roses completed her toilette. The bridesmaids were dressed in white and also carried flowers. The happy couple left the altar to the strains of the wedding march, played by Miss Warren. After congratulations and good wishes had been received they drove to the bride's home, where an elaborate spread awaited the guests. Many beautiful presents were received. Dancing was indulged in until morning. Mr. and Mrs. Marguerat leave to-day for their home at Harper's Corners.

England's Difficulty Over Officers.

From the Spectator.

We trust that in the course of the discussion on the defects shown in the new yeomanry in South Africa the public will not misunderstand the issue. The real trouble has not been with the men, but with the officers. It is true that a large number of the men could not, when they arrived in South Africa, either ride or shoot, but that could be and has been put right, for the human material was for the most part good enough. What could not be put right by a little training was the deficiency in the officers of the qualities which are absolutely necessary in an officer. Of four hundred officers who went out over one hundred are said to have been sent back as unsuitable. That is, a quarter of the officers selected were not capable of doing officers' work. The proportion of men reported as absolutely useless was infinitely smaller. These facts illustrate a principle which has, we believe, been borne in upon all competent observers during the present war. It is, put shortly, "You can improvise men, but you cannot improvise officers."

CZOLGOSZ'S HANDKERCHIEF.

A Small One Such as Carried by Women.

Chicago, Sept. 20.—Locked up in Charles Porter's private office in the quarters used by the United States secret bureau, according to detective Gallagher, is the handkerchief in which anarchist Czolgosz concealed his revolver when firing the shots that killed president McKinley. It will be taken back to Buffalo for the trial of the assassin. A study of the piece of cloth by Capt. Porter has led to the discovery that it is a woman's handkerchief. It is about ten inches square. One of the corners is missing, having been burned by the exploding powder. It is thought the handkerchief has been brought here as some sort of a clue.

Canadian Sympathy.

Syracuse, N.Y., Post-Standard.

The attitude of the people of Canada towards the people of the United States at this time is the attitude of warm brotherliness. All evidences of Canadian friendliness, like the tokens of friendliness on the part of Great Britain during the Spanish war, are specially grateful to the American people. Our relations with Canada in past years have been clouded and muddled in many ways. We have had boundary disputes, one of which nearly caused a war, and we have had great discussions about Canadian annexation, as though friendliness could not exist on any less terms than absorption. Those who have held this opinion ought to be convinced of their mistake by the manner in which Canada turned out with her volunteers for the Boer war.

The manner in which the news of McKinley's death has been received in Canada is a token of the very sort of feeling which we hope to see grow and deepen on both sides of the line: the enthusiasm of kindliness without the slightest lack of dignity or the slightest touch of greed.

G.T.R. Buffalo Service.

The very heavy tourist traffic, as well as the thousands of people who have visited the Buffalo exposition this year over the lines of the Grand Trunk railway system, has brought forth several very favorable criticisms regarding the management, equipment and general excellence of that railway. The general officers are constantly in receipt of letters from travellers praising the facilities that the Grand Trunk now offer on all their lines. Passengers, as a rule, are not in the habit of informing railroad companies of the satisfactory features in connection with their service, and unsolicited testimonials are therefore appreciated.

Acquitted Of Extortion.

Brockville, Ont., Sept. 18.—At the assizes to-day, before Hon. Mr. justice MacMahon, Thomas Meyers, of the township of Bastard, was tried on the charge of trying to extort money from George W. Sexton by threats of criminal proceedings.

Meyers some time ago missed $40 while travelling in company with Sexton, and threatened to prosecute the latter unless it was returned. Sexton admitted taking it, but now denies it, and the present prosecution was the result. Accused was acquitted.

War Against Long Skirts.

Toronto Saturday Night.

The war against trailing skirts on the continent is growing daily. In Saxon Switzerland, notices are posted on trees that wearers of trailing skirts will be fined. In Ischl, Upper Austria, there have been several instances of the skirts of unsuspecting ladies being torn off by rabid sanitarians. At Ems, Prussia, the authorities have put up notice that no long skirts are to be admitted within the precincts of the gardens, and the janitor refuses admittance to those whose skirts are too long.
