RANSOM FOR MISS STONE

A BULGARIAN CLERGYMAN HAS VISITED HER.

Question of Payment Rests With the British, American and French Consuls at Salonica—Under Heavy Strain.

New York, Nov. 13.—Ivan Milocheff, a Bulgarian clergyman from Uscub, in Macedonia, has just arrived from visiting Miss Stone and is now in consultation with Mr. Dickinson, says a Sona, Bulgaria, despatch to the Journal and Advertiser.

"Miss Stone," he said, "is in the house of Bekir Bey, in the town of Ceres, Macedonia. I left her two days ago, coming direct to Mr. Dickinson to try and arrange for her release. Miss Stone and Mme. Tsilka are well, but the strain is terrific, and there is danger that Miss Stone may lose her mind. To be always in the same surroundings is likely to drive her crazy; constantly looking at the same objects has semi-mesmerized her and she has had a presentment that evil will befall her.

"The brigand chief informs me that he will now insist on the full ransom, as the length of time Miss Stone has been left on his hands leaves no margin for bargaining. The name of the brigand chief is Dervich Younous and he is an Albanian. Bekir Bey, in whose house Miss Stone is confined, is hand in glove with the brigand chief. Bekir Bey assisted the brigands by keeping Miss Stone for thirty days in the mountains before taking her to his house.

"There are about a hundred and fifty Macedonians imprisoned in connection with the Stone affair by the Turkish officials. I want no personal compensation, but I want the Macedonians released. If the American, the British and the French consuls at Salonica insist upon Bekir Bey releasing Miss Stone it will not be necessary to deal with the brigands, and we can get her release without paying ransom."

Not Likely A Fact.

Cologne, Nov. 14.—The Gazette prints a despatch from Sofia which cannot be verified stating that Miss Ellen Stone, the American missionary, captured by brigands, has been killed in order that no information may be had as to the prime movers of the crime.

KING EDWARD'S STAND.

No Distinction Between King, Emperor or President.

London, Nov. 13.—In view of the recent attitude of count Gulochowski, the Austran-Hungarian foreign minister, in regard to the difference in the standing of the heads of the republics and of monarchies, the dictum of king Edward holding that the honors to be paid to presidents and crowned heads at the time of his majesty's coronation shall be identical, has special interest.

The question arose during a discussion of the details of the decorations to be bestowed and the mode of entertainment of the heads of states attending the coronation. The king refused point blank to distinguish between the titles of presidents, kings and emperors, arguing his object was to honor the state and not the man. No distinctions will be made, except possibly in the case of near relations of the royal family.

EVERY MOVE CAUSED PAIN.

The Intense Suffering of a Perth Man Relieved and Cured by Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets.

The terrible pain that catches you in the back—makes stooping over, or rising up, or moving about even, unbearable.

In nine cases out of ten it is traceable to disordered kidneys.

The pain in the back is the kidney's signal of distress.

Go to their assistance with Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets.

They will promptly relieve the pain, cure the kidney trouble and restore your health and strength.

Here is a case worth reading.

Alexander Montgomery, Peter street, Perth, Ont., when interviewed made this statement: "I was suffering acutely in my back when I began using Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets, procured from F. L. Hall, the druggist. I could lift nothing, every move caused pain. There was neither strength nor energy left in me. The constant aching over my kidneys was most depressing. I started using the tablets and the lumbago quickly began to let up. I am quite over it now. I have found them most satisfactory and can confidently recommend them for bad backs." Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets are 50c. a box at all druggists. The Dr. Zina Pitcher Co., Toronto, Ont.

GAMBLING TRUST BROKEN.

Outsiders Who Have Ruled Games Prepare to Depart.

New York, Nov. 11.—Some of the well-groomed gentlemen who have been conspicuous along Broadway for the last four years are preparing to emigrate. They represent the aristocracy of gamblers of the west. They have done very well during their stay and in addition have had a good time. But since election they have decided to pack up and get out before they are ordered to.

The bona fide New York gambler of the type known as the "square gambler," who regards himself as the legitimate New Yorker, will remain waiting for an opening. He is not sorry to see the imported gamblers move, because it will lessen competition and raise the standard of the profession.

For the last two years the gambling enterprises have been almost monopolized by the outsiders, who flocked to New York after the Tammany victory of 1897. These men were mainly responsible for the gambling combine, which sublet the privileges of running games of chance in pretty much the same manner as the city government lets other privileges. The difference was that the city secured none of the $3,000,000 revenue from the gambling houses, policy shops and poolrooms that the gambling combine annually collected.

The combine worked under a perfect system. It maintained a staff of collectors, bookkeepers and spotters so that it could keep track of the business.

The tariff on gambling was fixed by an arbitrary schedule. It was a follows:

Gambling house—$1,000 opening fee; $500 monthly assessment and 2 per cent of the monthly receipts.

Poolrooms—$1,000 opening fee; $250 per week assessment.

Policy shops—$100 a month for each shop.

The estimated number of shops in the boroughs of Manhattan and Bronx was 3,420. The rule of assessment was strictly enforced.

WANT TO DROP THE SWORD.

Officers Hold There is No Longer Use For it.

Washington, Nov. 14.—Army officers are planning to discard the sword. It is recognized as an impediment to both mounted and unmounted officers. It is held that the days of hand-to-hand conflicts have passed away, and with them the usefulness of the sword as a weapon. Sentiment and custom may weigh strongly against the proposed elimination. The experience of British officers in South Africa has influenced the suggestion for doing away with the sword, because it proved there to be such an incumbrance.

CANNOT BE ENTERTAINED.

Boers Won't Accept the British Attitude Outlined.

Berlin, Nov. 13.—The Frankfuter Zeitung published an interview with Wolmerans, the Boer envoy, now at Amsterdam, in which the latter is quoted as saying that the alleged pending peace negotiations between the Boers and the British are unfounded. "So long," says Wolmerans, "as the British ministry maintains the attitude outlined by Mr. Chamberlain's and lord Salisbury's last speeches the question of peace cannot be entertained. The idea of the cessation of the gold fields is absurd."

In Other Days.

The Belleville Intelligencer has been looking up the minutes of the official board of Bridge street Methodist church, one of the oldest churches in Ontario, and finds some very interesting matter in them. Here is one entry, which illustrates the difference between the Methodism of to-day and that of half a century ago:

"In the minutes of a leaders' meeting held on August 28th, 1848, the following entry appears: 'Isaac Reeves' case was taken up, and it was agreed that he should make an acknowledgment in class and promise not to play at cricket in future or lose his standing in the church.' The records show that the order of the church was obeyed and the whilom cricketer gave up his wickets and wickedness together."

What's In A Name?

The tailor's name on the back of a garment is not always the best evidence that you have got your money's worth. Perhaps you have paid a fancy price for the name? Imagination plays the leading part when it comes to paying $16, $18, $20 for an overcoat. You imagine they are better, simply because you are paying more. Rather an expensive vanity! But, unfortunately your friends are unable to observe any difference in the style, cloth, fit or trimmings of our overcoats and the product of the high priced tailor. Our $10 and $12.50 coats are made special to take the place of the custom work. Hibby's one price house.

OVER THE TEA CUPS.

The velvet girl is the girl of the autumn.

Velvet is decidedly the vogue for entire gowns, coats, shirt waists, separate skirts, and hats. It is to be a velvet year, without doubt. The velvet gown trimmed is to be the novelty of all.

So many and so varied are the velvets and velveteens which the shops are showing that a woman may actually have a velvet gown for every time of day this autumn and not only have the happy consciousness of knowing that each gown is suited to the occasion, but that in no respect will they even show the slightest family resemblance to one another. There are fancy velvets, dotted and striped, and plain velvets in lovely shades, velvets with exquisite patterns woven and printed, velvets with insets of lace, velvets with design embroidered in fine chenille and silk threads, and still others which here and there show a gleam of gold or a thread of silver.

A design fit for the wardrobe of a queen is an evening wrap in pearl white panne velvet. The entire affair is built upon a foundation of immaculate white satin and the skirt of the cloak falls from a short empire yoke. At the back the skirt is laid in large plaits and the juncture at the yoke is hidden by a heading of silver and pearl passementerie embedded in masses of delicate lace. Edging the skirt is a tiny edging of ermine and the same trimming adorns the long, flowing sleeves. The collar is very high and rounding, and is quilted with the softest of white liberty satin.

It is the long coat that leads the procession. The coat which is only a temptation and a snare to the woman whose purse will allow her but one coat for the season, but a coat as the new models show it, marvelously lovely. It is made with the sleeve strikingly wide at the wrist. The pagoda and the old-fashioned dolman sleeve are both seen on these new long coats. It has either a loose or a semi-fitting back, and its decoration is varied, elaborate and most artistic. The three-quarter coat divides honors with the long coat. It, too, is very much the fashion.

Long silver chains are worn again. They must be very fine to meet with fashion's approval and have one single unset gem of some sort suspended therefrom.

A reform is contemplated in mourning apparel for children, which will do away with black gowns and substitute all white in their place, a large bow on the child's hat being the only touch of black.

The change in the cut and make of shirts can only be described as a case of radical reform. For years we have been long, lanky and graceful, with a close fitting skirt and a softly sweeping train. Now we shall become short, smart and active, within too many cases—a decidedly stumpy appearance. For day, gowns are once more to clear the feet. Skirts will be made full at the back, the same length all around, and at least three inches off the ground. One or two noted Paris houses started this new style, and orders are now coming in by the hundred. The smart London shops have, of course, followed the French lead.

It is a time-honored custom that bride's maids should wear hats, but it may not always be so. At least the news comes from England that four young ladies who acted in that capacity at a recent wedding in London appeared without head-dress, and the clergyman took occasion to make reference to the innovation in his address. This was a case where even the most elaborate of picture hats would have been less noticeable than the absence of them.

A famous housekeeper says that if a few drops of oil of lavender are poured into a glass of very hot water, the air of a room will be instantly purified. Where the dining room is close to the kitchen, as it is in nine cases out of ten, there is always more or less odor from the cooking, and when there is a dinner party this is always more or less annoying to hostess and guests alike. If the lavender water is prepared just before dinner is announced, by the time the guests enter the dining room, the air will be deliciously fresh and sweet, and the objectionable odors will have vanished.

Indian summer is the time for planting spring blooming bulbs. Give the beds a sunny location, an eastern or southern exposure, and see that the drainage is as perfect as possible. The soil should be rich, mellow, and deeply spaded. If heavy, add sand and old rotted manure in sufficient quantity to make it porous. Place each bully upon a handful of clear sand, covering it up completely with it. Plant from five to six inches below the surface. After the ground freezes give it a heavy mulch of leaves, straw or other litter, to prevent a too early start in the spring.

The queen of Portugal is perhaps the most athletic woman ruler in the world. She is particularly fond of swimming and at Cascais during the summer swims further out from the shore than any of the other bathers. She has been the heroine of several rescues. The queen is much given to scientific study. She is a full-fledged doctor and the best royal nurse in the world, it is said.

Queen Alexandra's pet philanthropy of training girls and boys for some pursuit whereby they may be self-supporting is assuming proportions that makes it interesting to all the world. An addition has recently been made to the boys' department at Sandringham, where they are taught carving and metal work and other technical occupations. But it is possible that the queen takes a deeper interest in the girls, who are instructed in spinning, weaving, all kinds of needlework and cooking.

The duchess d'Uzes, already one of the wealthiest women in France, will receive a substantial addition to her fortune through the will of the Duc de Narbonne-Lara, her grand-uncle, who died recently, leaving an estate worth $5,000,000.

An episode illustrative of Russian adherence to the letter of the law in the out-of-the-way sections of the empire is told in a letter from the province of Archangel to a St. Petersburg daily. The hero of the story is an inventor who had completed the model of what he thought was a successful flying machine. He wanted to test it and applied to the local pristay (police captain) for "a permit to fly through the air." The pristay said he was curious to see the experiment and that he would let him know as soon as he had consulted the law on the subject. Three days later the police officer said to the inventor:

"I am really sorry, old man, but I am compelled to refuse your request. I have spent three days in examining the law books, but it's no use. There is no law bearing on the subject of flying through the air. I can't allow it. I am very, very sorry."

Count Fersen, Marie Antoinette's devoted servant, tells a pretty story which shows the charm words can add to deeds. It was when the royal family of France had been turned back at Varennes in their vain effort to escape—turned back toward Paris, where the mob even then was clamoring for their lives. They stopped to rest at the house of Mme. de Lagny, a royalist, who did all she could for their comfort. Madame waited at table herself, serving the king and queen with swift and silent zeal. The poor queen, in the midst of her despair, noticed what had been done for her and hers. "Where is the mistress of the house?" said she. "I should like to see her, and to thank her."

"I was the mistress of the house," responded Mme. de Lagny, simply, "until your majesty entered it."

She was more than seventy years of age.
