WHIG'S NEW YORK LETTER.

OFFICIALS FAVOR THE OPEN SUNDAY SALOON.

Efforts Being Made to Open Free Eating Houses—Carnegie Besieged by Beggars—Experts in Heraldy—The Brooklyn Bridge Unsafe.

New York, Nov. 29.—It is not generally known that New York leads the world in the matter of diamond cutting, yet such is the case, and what is extraordinary about it is that it is a fact due to American extravagance. Here the cutters are suffered to lose ten per cent. in cutting, and better wages are paid than at Amsterdam or any other city noted for this kind of work. This attracted the cutters from all parts of the world. The extraordinary wealth of the country has created a demand for expensive jewelry such as is not to be found elsewhere in the world. American private citizens, and many of them, too, are able to bid successfully for rare jewels against the wealthiest monarchs of earth.

Much surprise has been expressed among folks who do not go much to church, that so many clergymen should have expressed themselves in favor of the Sunday opening of saloons, notable among them being Dr. Parkhurst, a champion of reform, and Dr. Rainsford, an Episcopal clergyman of distinction. In so expressing themselves these gentlemen of the cloth are but echoing the sentiments of the meteoric district attorney-elect, Mr. Jerome, and it is hinted that mayor-elect Low is of the same mind as Mr. Jerome. As a fact, a large majority of the saloons pay no attention to the Raines law, and it is admitted that it cannot be enforced in a great city like New York. The officials elect and the clergymen who favor Sunday opening declare that they do so for this reason. It is openly charged that in order to keep open without interference by the police, saloon keepers have to submit to blackmail, and advocates for open saloons urge necessity for police integrity as motive for changes in existing law or an ignoring of it. When Mr. Low was mayor of Brooklyn he did not attempt to close the saloons on Sunday, but caused them to run decently.

Efforts are being made to open free eating houses here during the winter. The charter of New York forbids the municipality to appropriate money for such a purpose, but a number of charitable men have met with a view to procuring a change in the charter through action of the legislature. But strong opposition is likely to develop for the reason that New York is now the paradise of tramps, who find no difficulty in sustaining life without work because of the beneficience of well-to-do citizens. Those who oppose the charity insist that it would but add to the great army of vagabonds, and would not reach the deserving poor.

Recently the city has suffered from a carnival of crime. Stores have been robbed in the open light, citizens have been held up in the evening hours along much-frequented streets, and murders of an unusual nature have been perpetrated. Scientific-psychologists ascribe these conditions to the fact that the earth is now passing through the great belt of leonids. More practical men lay them to depravity, which, like epidemics of disease, burst forth now and then without any apparent cause.

There are many thousands of children who are unable to attend school here because there are no seats for them, yet $100,000,000 of public improvements are going on in New York City—subway, rapid transit, new bridges, hall of records, park improvements, etc. Moralists see in this evil for the generation which is growing up.

There has been a lot of scare over the Brooklyn bridge. The authorities say it is safe, but experts declare the contrary. A nervous person who stands at the centre of the structure, as he may do at any hour of the day or night, and watches the working back and forth, intense more or less according to the strain, of the middle connection, will be ready to agree with the experts. The bridge is taxed more than double as it was when first built.

English experts in heraldy have wearied of trying to interest Americans in their ancestry while carrying on the work in England, so one of them has come to Gotham where he can reap the harvest of the first enthusiasm he is hoping to arouse. This particular expert has established a new college of heraldy, the special purpose of which is to trace the connection between American families and their ancestors io England, or any other country for that matter. The assurance is given that nearly every family in this country has the right to a coat of arms, and thus, inferentially, may establish its connection with some family of Great Britain or one of the continental countries.

One recent fashion of unknown origin, but none the less extraordinary for that reason, is attached to the use of the phrase "Thank you." For some time past it has been customary to pronounce these words with a rising inflection and a tone of voice intended to indicate a knowledge of the hollow conventionality of the expression and a mere deference to it. So now the new way of saying "Thank you," which aims to express a combination of boredom, condecension and resigned deference to social conventionalities, is not intended to be in the least degree insulting. It is only the smart way of uttering the phrase, and no young man or woman with any pretence to modishness would think of speaking it in any other way.

The Scotch dinners that Mr. and Mrs. Carnegie are giving at frequent intervals this season are interesting indeed, but they pale into insignificance when compared with Mr. Carnegie's daily mail. A man who has relations with the great philanthropist's affairs says that if Mr. Carnegie's mail for one day could be published, it would bring discomfiture to a great many people who appear in it as beggars. Every wealthy man receives requests from strangers by mail to give money, but none of them has ever been flooded with requests to the same extent as Mr. Carnegie in the last two years. His avowed determination not to die rich has encouraged people all over the United States who are living in comfort, but who want certain luxuries, to appeal to Mr. Carnegie for help. They ask him to buy everything from a horse and carriage to a piano, with sometimes a private library as a variation. Fortunately, however, much of this mail never reaches Mr. Carnegie, for it is sorted out by an experienced man.

CALLS MARRIAGE A FAILURE.

Having Borne Quadruplets and Triplets, Now Seeks Divorce.

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 29.—Mrs. Josephine R. Ormsby, mother of a set of quadruplets, two sets of triplets, three pairs of twins, and three single children, has concluded that marriage is a failure, and has applied for a divorce from her husband, Charles T. Ormsby, who deserted her five months before the birth of the quadruplets, and has not since been seen. Mrs. Ormsby charges drunkenness, cruelty, and desertion.

"No more marriage for me," said Mrs. Ormsby yesterday, as she looked down on her four sleeping midgets. "I don't intend to get married again, and don't need to. I have received hundreds of letters from men asking if I would accept their hands and salaries, but I'm done with them. The letters all went into the stoves. Some of them actually offered to put up the money for a divorce, but I don't need their money, as I can now support myself. If Ormsby chooses to marry again he can do so, but I'm all through."

Mrs. Ormsby and her four treasures are exhibiting at a dime museum, and it is said that the children are earning $250 a week for simply being alive and cooing for the visitors.

Eight of the Ormsby children have died—both sets of triplets and one pair of twins.

OPENING OF CONGRESS

Near at Hand—Members Flocking To Washington.

Washington, Nov. 29.—There are abundant signs that the opening of congress is near at hand. Prominent senators and representatives, many of whom have not been in Washington since the last session adjourned, are to be encountered at every turn today in the streets, hotel lobbies and other public places. A large part of president Roosevelt's time is being taken up in receiving the formal calls of the congressmen upon their arrival in town. Speaker Henderson's quarters at the Normandie is also the Mecca for scores of visitors daily.

The caucus to nominate a speaker meets to-morrow. Speaker Henderson is a candidate for re-election and his friends and supporters are confident of his success. The general opinion among the members inclines to the belief that the coming session of congress will be one of the busiest in many years.

Chicago Priest Apologized.

Chicago, Nov. 29.—Announcement is made by the attorney for archbishop Feehan that the sentence of ex-communication which was pronounced against Fr. Jeremiah J. Crowley, would be recalled within a few days. Attorney Moran said that some days ago Fr. Crowley apologized to his eminence, cardinal Martinelli.

The Kidneys And Uric Acid

Serious, Painful Ailments Which Arise From Neglected Kidney Derangements — Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills a Thoroughly Effective Cure.

Uric acid is the name given by medical men to the poisonous matter which the kidneys filter from the blood. When the Kidneys are weak, inactive or diseased they fail to perform their functions as filters, and the uric acid poison remains in the blood to find lodgment in the weaker organs, and produce the most painful and fatal results.

The symptoms of kidney disease, such as backache, frequent and painful urination, deposits in the urine, pains in the sides and limbs, and headaches, are so familiar that it seems unnecessary for anyone to be ignorant of the approach of this dreaded malady. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are ever at hand as a thoroughly effective remedy, as they are for sale by nearly every dealer who pretends to keep any family medicines.

Not only the kidneys themselves become diseased, but the uric acid forms crystals in the joints and muscles, causing the most extreme pain, and what is known as rheumatism, a disease which can never be cured until the kidneys are made healthful and vigorous.

Another form of kidney disease is dropsy and heart failure. In such cases the uric acid turns the blood to water, and causes dropsical swellings, which, when in the region of the heart, produce heart failure.

In view of the frightful risks which you run in neglecting kidney derangements, and the undoubted efficiency of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills as a cure for weak, inactive, diseased kidneys, it remains as a duty for you to apply the remedy and be cured. You can be certain of beneficial results, for Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have stood the test of time, and proven their right to first place as a kidney medicine.

In every town, village and township of Canada there are people who can testify to the extraordinary merits of this great remedy. Ask your friends and neighbors about it, or, better still, try it for yourself, and join the ranks of Dr. Chase's admirers. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box. At all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Toronto.

THE NEW YORK FASHIONS.

INTERESTING ITEMS FOR LADY READERS

Never Before Have Finer Clothes Been Worn—Much Attention Paid to Sleeves—Mourning Dresses and Evening Functions.

New York, Nov. 29.—Blessed be the day and honored be the man that first founded horse shows. Our equine aristocracy have had the call all the week and the four hundred have been out to see them. In truth, it was an elegant show. Nothing but the best was at the fore and indeed it was the best of the very best. It's a relief to a man who is proud of his race to see here scions of aristocracy, whose sires found a home where Ishmael and his mother found a resting place and buried the roots of a race which to-day finds resting shelter on the oasis where the date and the fig furnish food for the traveller and where is to be found to-day a titled aristocracy whose claims to honor are recorded in the books of David and Solomon, and away beyond Solomon's and David's time, and whose pedigree, unsmirched, may be found as far back as when Moses led the Israelites out of the house of bondage and headed for the land of promise. The sires of these beautiful equine wonders may be still found in the tents of the Arab chieftains from the burning desert Sahara, where the Bedouin chief makes his home and shares the best he has with the horse that was raised with him, who wanders in and out of the tent just as the children do. No unkind hand frightens him away, no unfriendly voice to tell he is an intruder; nor, indeed, is he, for often the Bedouin's life and safety depends on the lightning speed of this matchless desert king. But I am wandering away from the matter in hand. We have the Arab steed right at our own door, many of the pedigrees reaching far back into the twilight of fable. The horse show to-day is one of the settled institutions of New York and comes before the public patronized and sustained by more multi-millionaires than any other institution, not excepting the opera, or any other source of entertainment known to the four hundred. Are there no jockies and tooters, do you ask? Oh, yes, there are plenty of them, but they don't run the horse show to-day. They carry the water, inspect the dainty food; they are servants, not masters, though occasionally you may find Osler Joe touching elbows with a Vanderbilt or Astor; but the tooter's presence is only tolerated when he is introduced by a little bit of first-class equine old blue blood, which the gold of Ophir or the jewels of Golconda would hardly buy.

A story is told of senator Stamford and Robert Bonner, which shows the value set upon the quality of fine equine blood quite as well as any of the romances that have amused our fashionable public. The king of senator Stamford's stable had given to the world two colts, Arion and Sunol. Bonner, who was a lover of horses, as soon as the news reached New York, hastened to San Francisco and sought the genial senator on his arrival. It was a joyous, friendly meeting, for each had the most profound admiration for the other. "What brings you to California," said senator Stamford. "I came to see you," replied Robert Bonner. "Ah, indeed," replied the senator, "what can I do for you?" "I've come to take Arion home with me, senator." "Oh, no, Bonner; Arion is not for sale." "Everything at its price, senator, and if I can't get Arion, I'll try to get along with Sunol." "Sunol and Arion I will keep as a team for my own private use." "Oh, come, now," said Bonner, "I'll go you halves." "No, no, they shall not be separated," said Stamford. "Come, set a price," said Bonner. "If I should," said the senator, "it would be so far beyond your reach that you never would answer such a call," said the senator, jokingly, "$100,000." Bonner made a dash for his cheque book, but before he could pull it out senator Stamford backed squarely down. He did not want money; he did want Arion and Sunol. Millions of dollars were at his command, but there were only two such colts to be found this side of the deserts of Arabia.

The craze for a touch of black has extended into the province of lingerie, and one sees it in many unexpected places. The silk petticoat developed in black and white taffeta has been on the market for two or three seasons, but something new and novel in the extreme is the short flannel skirt of black embroidered in white, and vice versa, to say nothing of the many designs in the pastel shades that are ornamented with embroidered or black silk in raised design.

Time was when women who wore mourning were not expected to attend evening functions, but such is not the case this year, and some really very delightful evening gowns for second mourning wear are seen. A striking design is composed largely of chiffon, black and white, with highly artistic effect. The foundation is of white glace silk. Over this is draped plainly a layer of black chiffon. A third covering is of white chiffon, put on in great puffs, all around the skirt. The corsage consists of one fold of black enveloped in one of white, the effect about the shoulders being that of a pelerine.

The arrival in New York of the famous Hope blue diamond and another blue gem, which is said to rival the Hope jewel in richness of color and beauty, has put women of the smart set on the qui vive and incidentally started a new craze for jewels.

Black pearls, both large and small, are the fancy of the moment and very handsome indeed are the necklaces, bracelets and ear-drops of pearl. Sapphires, too, are greatly worn. The fad for having the jewels match the gown seems to be growing, and the effect is a very pretty, although an extremely expensive one.

The hats for mid-winter are positively startling in their shape, and some are even ugly. A design which meets the former description, with the advantage of being pretty, is something of a tricorne with an abrupt slash at the back, a little to the left side. The opening is provided with eylets on either side, and through these are interlaced strings of chenille.

In general the hat trimming seems to be most prominent at the back. Flowers are very much used and they are made of velvet crepe and panne, with sometimes a combination of two materials, say velvet and china silk or velvet and satin. A feature of trimming is the rosette, which sometimes assumes the form of a cockade. Flat, large rosettes of plaited tulle, with a cabachon in the centre, are very good style and two may be used on one hat at the side. White hats, in whatever material they are developed, are fashionable, but they are, as a rule, confined to wedding purposes. They are trimmed with lace and flowers and are worn with all white gowns.
