BROADBRIM'S LETTER.

The Great New York Horse Show.

MORAL REFORM IS ON TOP.

THE BOWERY WILL BE SWEPT CLEAN.

Sergt. Churchill Has the Job in Hand — Some $50,000,000 Needed For Underground Railways—Mammoth Price Offered For a Horse.

(Whig Correspondence, Letter No. 1,280.)

New York, Nov. 29.—At no time in the history of America have women of the smart set worn finer clothes than in this year of grace, 1901. Just as soon as anything especially chic appears, in fact, often before it is shown in shop windows, manufacturers and men milliners, who appeal to patrons of less means make such clever imitations of the original article that it demands an artist in women's apparel to detect the difference.

The finest effects in French creations are replicated with such artistic results and so faithfully to the original as to challenge admiration and cause one to wonder which is to be admired most, the original or the imitation. The creator has no limit placed upon him. What he has to do is produce results; the imitator is bounded by prescriptions of bank accounts and dare not make his work too costly. He economizes with marvelous skill and keeps his work within the possibilities of purses that may be drained.

It may be stated that the winter effects are stylish without exception and inclined toward ornamentation. This is noticeable, especially with the long coat which appears chiefly in tan cloth. For the carriage and automobile wear, the loose cloak is most in favor, and it is worn very long with wide cuffs of the "pagoda" sleeves which are closely stitched and often times appliqued with panne velvet.

The bottom and side fronts show stitching and cut cloth, put on in applications. An innovation introduced upon these coats is the facing of white cloth which is stitched closely down upon the goods, and over-edged with a deeper shade of brown silk decorated with rows of tiny brown buttons.

Just at this season a great deal of attention is paid to sleeves. A design less pretty than striking is that having a deep flounce, not merely shaped, but actually gathered, which falls straight from the flat hand at the elbow. Underneath this flounce is another, in figured silk, also full and deep and straight. The material of the sleeve proper is best in veiling cashmere, a chine crepe or some other flexible fabric not averse to looking well in flounce form.

Something very chic is a sleeve which consists of a kind of shaped flounce flaring just above the elbow over the elbow puff proper. Below the puff the sleeve fits the arm snugly to the wrist, where it ends in a point reaching almost to the knuckles. The shaped flounce and this pointed wristpiece are usually embroidered or appliqued—at all events what little trimming the design calls for is confined to these points. The rest of the sleeve is plain and the effect is most delightful when carried out in one of the many smooth finished cloths.

For costumes, however, the materials in vogue are serges, both of the rough and smooth varieties, satin faced cloths, vicunas, cashmeres, parameties, drap d'Alma, frieze, ziboline and cheviot. It is doubtful if any fabrics wear better than freize and ziboline, which lend themselves well to dresses accompanied by capes or long sacque-back coats, which with shorter and more dressy jackets are the acceptable outdoor garments of the moment.

The black zibeline shapes itself very prettily into the many charming blouses that are seen just now. Some of the prettiest of these jackets have with cape collars of chiffon, bordered with silk guipure or a succession of flat tucks of chiffon intended to fasten on the side. These are made moveable so that they can be transferred from one to another.

One cannot write of the season's mode without giving a passing mention to the elegant silk petticoats, which are to be seen in the fashionable shops. Those of black glace, marveloys and soft black materials have been deftly made, so that by a succession of flounces at the hem they cause the skirt of the gown to stand out well. Faille is employed for heavy silk petticoats, and some dressy ones bear wide ruffles with several insertions of inch-wide lace.

All the boxes were taken at immense premiums, some of them running into the thousands. Its success was placed beyond a reasonable doubt before the horse show opened. The four hundred had a splendid representation. Gold and jewels and beauty were there and the decree has gone forth that a special dress among our four hundred is dedicated to the horse show each year. Here is an aristocracy that challenges our admiration and support. It is true that the automobile is here, unmatched in speed, but the horse is not yet dead and will not be for a hundred generations.

As I was going down Bowery street
A pretty young girl I chanced to meet;
She asked me if I was going to treat,
I said of course, you look so sweet,
The Bowery, the Bowery,
They say such things and they do such things
As is done nowhere else but the Bowery.

Moral reform is on top. The Bowery, of which so much has been said and sung, has caught a tartar. A prosperous business man declared over a year ago that the above song ruined his business, but be that as it may, it didn't ruin Mr. Hoyt's business. It lined his pockets with dollars, ducats and roubles; it might have added to his receipts night after night, to the extent of thousands of dollars; it was whistled by bootblacks, hummed by brokers on the exchange, it was played on wheezy handorgans and nearly drove the town crazy. When our foreign friends were here to assist in our Columbus celebration, the old sea dogs joined in the chorus and I've no doubt it can be heard today in the streets of St. Petersburg, Paris and London, and instead of inspiring a joyous, a happy chorus, nothing can be heard to-day but weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth. What is the matter, you ask, to kick up such a row? Well, that holy terror, Sergt. Churchill, whose name sounds like the besom of destruction, has been detailed to clean the Bowery out and he is doing it. It is said that a new brbom sweeps clean and if they have got a newer broom than Sergt. Churchill I don't know his name. If this sort of thing keeps on we may have to build some new additions to our station houses, for at present they are not large enough to hold the prisoners captured. They say that Sergt. Churchill has a pull. What kind of a pull, they ask, for there are two kinds. One kind of pull is favorable to the puller, and the other is very much to the contrary. Sergt. Churchill has pulled a number of houses along the Bowery which formerly paid tribute to the police for the privilege of violating the law.

Fifteen times within the last three years has this worthy official been shifted from place to place and we hardly know what to make of it. The work that he is doing is not of the kind that is popular at the police headquarters on Mulberry street. The rich rewards fall to the lot of those who made the fewest arrests and our up country friends will understand our position the better when they learn that a notorious house, well-known to the neighbors, but could not be found by the police, for undoubtedly the blood of the lamb had been sprinkled on the doorstep and above it emblazoned in crimson letters was the word, Protection; but since Churchill has been called to the Bowery all the houses of this class have been stopped. The man who made his name respected down at Coney island must not be forgotten when the plums are distributed. A captaincy at least should wait this worthy sergeant. It is said that Col. Murphy will fill all the vacancies which now exist before the wicked republicans get in on the 1st of January. He will take the meat and leave his republican friends the bones.

Seth Low, the mayor-elect, has been quite busy in forming his cabinet and so far he has proceeded slowly, but evidently with judgment.

Justice Jerome, who distinguished himself with his sledge hammer and revolver, will be at the head of our law department. The place to which he was elected makes him our new mayor's confidential adviser. I pity our soiled doves who used to hold high jinks along the principle thoroughfares of the Tenderloin, where our country cousins who had come to town to see the elephant, saw that mammoth animal to their sorrow and returned to their peaceful homes away from the wicked city with a stock of yellow wisdom which they wished they didn't know. "They were wise as serpents, but not as harmless as doves." Sergeant Churchill is literally obeying the command, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with all thy might." Between now and the new year, which is close at hand, there will be a rattling among the dry bones in every department of the city. It is true that the loot is vast, but the army of applicants is many. A hundred millions is no small price and even allowing for the largest margin of honesty, the honest profits are sufficient in two years to insure the lucky holders moderate comfort for the rest of their political days. We sincerely hope that the efforts now made in behalf of honest government may be successful and that while on national issues honest men may honestly differ for municipal safety and the honest administration of this great public trust may make New York a model for other states and other cities, not only in our country, but wherever civilization has a character and a name. We are the second city in the world and with an effort on behalf of good government we may become the first. The emigration of today to our blessed republic is drawn from every country on which the sun shines. This gives us a polyglot increase with more strange tongues than was heard at the tower of Babel. Ought we to make the effort to sustain the right now that the opportunity is afforded to us? Yes. Will we do it? Yes. Shall we begin our work now? Yes, yes. With God's help, we will.

In looking over the interesting projects of the present day is it not wonderful that just at the time when capital is needed to carry out these stupendous operations it is ready to give four, five or six per cent. for the privilege of getting something to do. It is estimated that at least 850,000,000 will be needed to burrow like moles under the Greater New York, and perhaps enable us to use the tremendous speed of the automobile, a use to which it could never be utilized in endangering life and limb on the surface of the road. In no other way does it now present itself as an engineering and mechanical possibility. Just think of the power it gives this great city when as of old all roads lead to Rome so in the present day all roads may lead to New York, and it may not be far off when New York will be the great centre of the world's civilization. The brain reels at the contemplation of our future possibilities; the newly discovered balloon faces the tempest of the sky and laughs at the storm that rages a thousand feet below its aerial home; it sweeps around a circle and finds a resting place on the summit of the Eiffel tower. Wireless telegraphy is no longer a dream of the future; we can get the news from home from the ship that passes in the night and hear by telephone from king Edward himself the gratifying ending of the South African war.

But I must stop; the subject is too gigantic for a single letter, as admiral Dewey remarked as he passed under the magnificent arch which was to pass his name and fame to future generations: "This is too much glory for the contemplation of one man."

BRONCHITIS AND HARSH HACKING COUGH:—My little girl has been troubled with Bronchitis, and a harsh hacking cough almost since birth, and though I tried almost everything, she derived no benefit whatever. My druggist gave me a bottle of Angier's Emulsion to try, which I did, and as a result my child was in a marvellously short time free from all coughing, and almost immediately began to gain flesh and a healthy color. Today she is as strong and robust as can be. You will appreciate what the above means to a parent, and I feel constrained to write and thank you. A. PUDSEY, Toronto, Ontario.

CAUTION:—The phenomenal success of ANGIER'S PETROLEUM EMULSION has been the means of producing many untried and worthless imitations. Always be sure you get the genuine ANGIER'S Petroleum Emulsion, as imitations made with the ordinary Petroleum do not have the same effect. Angier's Petroleum Emulsion is made from oil obtained from particular wells and refined by a peculiar process, which is known only to the manufacturers of Angier's Petroleum Emulsion. All druggists sell it. Two sizes, 50 cents and $1.00 a bottle.

THE ARMY WORSTED.

The Army Wanted to Have a Woman Dispossessed.

Toronto, Nov. 29.—The Salvation army was worsted at Osgoode Hall, in a suit in regard to the construction of a will. By the will of the late James Eves, Mrs. Nettie Leduc received certain property which included a life interest in a house, 41 Charles street, Toronto, with reversion to the Salvation army. It appears that Mrs. Leduc, is about sixty years of age, and quite feeble, and on Friday morning, Evangeline C. Booth, on behalf of Gen. Booth, applied to have her dispossessed, on the ground that she is paralysed and should be sent to some institution. Medical evidence was offered in defence to show that the old woman is comfortable and cared for. Justice Meredith dismissed the application.
