Is an absolute and irresistible cure for

DRUNKENNESS, Intemperance and the use of Opium, Tobacco, Narcotics and Stimulants, removing all taste, desire and habit of using any of them, rendering the taste or desire for any of them perfectly odious and disgusting, giving everyone perfect and irrevocable control of the society of themselves and their friends.

It prevents that absolute physical and moral prostration that Rum, Tobacco and Opium inevitably bring on their victims.

Package, prepaid, to cure 1 to 2 persons, $2, or at your druggists, $1.25 per bottle.

Temperance societies should recommend it. It is perfectly harmless and never fails to cure.

AN INDEPENDENT FARMER.

Let sailors sing the windy deep,
Let soldiers praise their armor;
But in my heart this toast I'll keep,
"The independent farmer."
When first the rose, in robe of green,
Unfolds its crimson lining,
And round his homely porch is seen
The honeysuckle twining—
When banks of bloom their sweetness yield
To bees that gather honey,
He drives the team across the field,
Where skies are soft and sunny.

The blackbird clucks behind his ploughs,
The quail pipes loud and cheerly,
Yon orchard hides behind its boughs
The house he loves so dearly.
The grey old barn, whose doors unfold
His ample store in measure,
More rich than heaps of hoarded gold,
A precious, blessed treasure;
Put yonder on the porch there stands
His wife, the lovely charmer,
The sweetest rose on all his lands,
The independent farmer.

To him the spring comes dancing day
To him the summer blushes,
The autumn smiles with mellow ray,
His sleep the winter hushes;
He cares not how the world may move,
No doubts of fear confound him;
He smiles in calm content and love
On children gathered round him.
He trusts in God, and loves his wife,
Nor grief, nor ill may harm her;
He's nature's noblest man in life,
The independent farmer.

Philadelphia, though the youngest of the cities on the Atlantic slope, ranks second in population, and being the centre of industrial enterprise, is capable of great expansion. It certainly seems to have a bright future before it. It is eminent in history, being the place in which the first Congress struck for Republicanism; in which the Declaration of Independence was uttered; in which the Constitution of the United States was adopted, and General Washington made his farewell address; in which Ben Franklin discovered the identity of electricity and lightning, Godfrey contrived the nautical quadrant, Dr. Hare invented the oxyhodrogen blow-pipe, and which has taken the lead in the construction of steam pipes; having at the present time the only line of American steamers, which, in its trading relations with Europe, carries the stars and stripes. The city has many excellent institutions for the education of its youth in science, literature and art. Its people are progressive, but not so demonstrative as they are considered by distant residents.

The public buildings are numerous and notable. One of the first in importance and architectural beauty is the new post office, a grand structure of corded granite, covering a whole block. It faces on three streets, and is most imposing in appearance. It was commenced in 1876, and is not nearly finished. It will cost millions of money. The new City Hall, erected on the Penn Square, will be the finest civic monument in the Republic. Upon it already $5,000,000 have been spent, and probably $5,000,000 more will be required in order to carry out the original plans in detail. The white marble, of which it is principally constructed, is profusely carved. The entrances, four in number, are supported by columns of polished granite. The most interesting buildings to visitors are Carpenters' Hall and Independence Hall, in which the Congress of over a century ago developed the Union, and in which American independence was eventually proclaimed. Our cousins cannot too much honor the memories of those who participated in the stirring events of the long ago, and so Independence Hall, besides being retained as the constant reminder of historical incidents, is made the sacred depository of numberless relics. The table upon which John Hancock signed the document which released an unsatisfied people of monarchial obligations, and the chairs in which he and the people's delegates sat, are kept in the places which they occupied over a hundred years ago. The walls of the old Congressional Hall are lined with valuable paintings of great men, who have figured prominently as soldiers, judges and diplomats. The museum containing a large collection of antiquities, is crowded daily. The offices of the city government are still in this building, now aged about 150 years.

The United States Government takes great care of its old and incapacitated servants. One cannot but be impressed with this fact when he contemplates the Asylum which has been provided for the marines when they have rendered the country duty for a reasonable period. The institution to which the aged and retired sailors find refuge is situated on Gray's Ferry road. It is supervised by an Admiral who is no longer actively identified with the navy. There is nothing about the institution suggestive of charity. The building is conducted like a hotel, and its inmates live happily and comfortably. Those who desire to reside with friends are allowed a generous pension. The arsenal, near by, and likewise on the bank of the Skuykill river, is a busy place. Here several hundred women are employed in the manufacture of military clothing, most of the national troops being supplied therefrom.

Some years ago a millionaire named Rush died, leaving a vast sum of money to be expended in the erection of a public library. The wealth was disposed of according to instructions, and hence the fine building which, surrounded by splendid grounds fronts the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore RR. Books are issued freely to any applicant. Such a privilege is highly appreciated by the inhabitants.

The House of Correction is an establishment, a duplicate of which is declared to be a desideratum in Kingston at the present time. It is located seven miles up the river, and has attached to it quite a farm and extensive stone quarries. The institution is self supporting. Those who are designated vagrants—who have no home and have no visible means of support—are sent to this place, and forced to work. When necessary the able bodied men are coached in the performance of street improvements. There is, however, an alms house and hospital on the west bank of the Skuykill river, and to it are sent those who cannot do hard labor, and who suffer with ailments for the treatment of which they cannot pay. Philadelphia takes good care of its poor, but the lazy are not permitted to sponge upon the public.

The navy yard on League Island, at the extremity of the Delaware river, known as the "neck," promises, in time, to become the best in America. Several monitors, etc., are being repaired and rebuilt. A large staff of men (500 or 600) are thus engaged. The Government has not many gun boats now; most of those which did service in late war having been sold to Russia and Brazil.

The park is the most beautiful public resort that we have ever seen. It is larger and superior in every way to the grounds which have been set apart for public amusement in New York. Fairmount is divided by the Skuykill river, and lies to the north west of the city. It contains about 4,000 acres, which have been most artistically laid out; having magnificent drives, beautiful lawns, and a pleasant variety of hill and dale. It has a zoological garden containing a collection of nearly all known animals, fish, fowl, etc., and floral adornments of a rare character. Here, likewise, are Memorial Hall, Horticultural Hall, and the main building used and so much admired during the memorable Centennial exhibition. The Memorial Hall was only originally intended as a permanent fixture, but subsequent counsel against the destruction of the other edifices prevailed. All are almost as interesting as in 1878, a fresh attraction attaching to the main building at the time, because it is used for the purposes of a State fair, which is not unlike our Provincial show. The park is carefully kept. The caretakers are skilled in the cultivation of flowers. Statues of eminent men dot the grounds, the most remarkable being those of Lincoln, Washington, Humboldt and Columbus. The T. A. B. U., (a Catholic total abstinence society) has erected a magnificent fountain of white marble. Water flows from the pedestals supporting the figures of five men who have been distinguished for their advocacy of temperance. The exhibition buildings contain much of the choice and miscellaneous productions which evoked the enthusiasm of the masses a few months since, and have not ceased to excite admiration.

The Masons of the city have given evidence of their property in the erection of a marble temple, which cost a fabulous sum.

The Pennsylvania R.R. is making very significant changes in its Philadelphia connections. To avoid running through the city, with its attendant dangers and inconveniences, the tracks are to be elevated on a brick bed, arched like a bridge, the work commencing on the west side of Filbert street, crossing the Skuykill river, and terminating at the corner of Fifteenth and Market streets, where an elegant station will be provided. The old building has been removed and the new one begun. The elevated roadway is wide enough to admit of the laying of eight tracks.

The City of Philadelphia fronts on the Delaware river, and has a great harbour. On the opposite side of the river (which is about two and a half miles wide) is the City of Camden, N.J., having a population of 40,000. It bears to Philadelphia the same relation that Brooklyn bears to New York. This old Quaker burg is afflicted in one way—its excessive beer drinking. Saloons meet the gaze of the pedestrian in every direction. They seem to be but a few feet apart, and all are apparently flourishing. The water is not good, without ice, which is scarce, but such a fact does not sufficiently account for the tremendous consumption of lager. Beer drinking is a sort of mania with some people, and it is indulged in at all hours and under all circumstances—on Sunday, near the church door, and at the gate of Mount Maria cemetery as the funeral processions pass in solemn order.

Political feeling seems to be most intense. Since the Republic and Democratic nominations have been made there have been daily consultations and frequent political meetings. Executive Committees assemble in conclave and sit for hours issuing orders and perfecting their plans for the party conflicts which will raise more than smoke as the campaign draws to a close. There are, perhaps, a dozen active political organizations in the city. Each party has its own club house, which is crowded continually. The leading associations are Union League, (Republican) and American Club, (Democratic) out of which scores of men are doing nothing but pulling wires. Headed by bands there are, occasionally, public demonstrations. One of these parades we saw, that of Harmony Legion, the members of which, (1,000 strong), were uniformed and carried torches. They were well drilled, and performed several pretty movements while marching. The reported victory of the Democrats in Maine has made a sensation. The successful party has become quite jubilant, while the defeat has given the Republicans a serious fit of the blues. The result of the contest in Pennsylvania will be watched with more than usual interest. The state, by reason of the city vote, has gone Republican heretofore, but Hancock is a native, being born near Philadelphia, and he was the hero of the battle of Gettysburg and the saviour of the city from a threatened attack of the rebels, hence it
