CONTENTED.

Beneath the linden shady
I sat, with my heart's lady,
Contented, hand in hand.
There not a leaf was blowing,
The sun was brightly glowing
Down on the silent land.

The time we could not measure,
So lost were we in pleasure,
Scarcely our hearts did beat.
We breathed no word—why should we?
We questioned not—how could we?
We knew that life was sweet.

We cared not for the morrow,
We knew not pain or sorrow,
Love was not far away.
From the clear eyes a greeting,
A kiss from warm lips meeting—
So passed the happy day.

BY ELLA HEATH.

SWIFT DRESSING.

How Actresses are Enabled to Change Their Costumes so Quickly.

The lady correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer writes from New York about a visit she paid to the dressing room of a popular actress:

There I saw a handsome evening dress spread out on a chair with orderly precision. It was an elaborate combination of satin and embossed velvet and lace, made up in one of the newest styles; but it had a peculiarity of being open in front, from neck to hem, like a wrapper, but it was so contrived that the opening would not be discernible when the garment was worn.

Another odd creation was that all the bows, jewels, and other ornaments, such as women ordinarily spend an hour or so in adjusting, were already fastened on in the proper places. By the chair was a pair of satin slippers, and on a stand was a pair of kid gloves and a fan. On a block was a blonde wig dressed in the latest fashion, with a ribbon and a gilt ornament all in place. The maid glanced with anxious eyes at all these arrangements, and seemed afraid that I would disturb them. I was just realizing that they were planned to effect a lightning change of costume, when the actress herself bounced in. She was warm from her exertion on the stage, but not a bit flurried. She did not lose a single moment, though she chatted glibly with me all the while.

First she picked up the gloves and began to put them on. At the same time the maid unhooked her dress from top to bottom with quick, deft fingers, an' stripped off the whole garment in a twinkling. The pretty creature stood before me in her white clothes, laughing at my expression of surprise at the rapid disrobement. She seated herself and extended her foot for the maid to take off the shoes and stockings. The latter, being stripped down over the foot in a jiffy, did not disclose the naked flesh, but elaborately checked silk hose, so that the fresh pair were already on. By the time the slippers were on the actress had got the last button of her gloves into its button hole. A minute and a half had elapsed. Both had not only worked with great rapidity but without any false motions or vexation of any sort. Then the maid took off several puffs and a bow from her mistress' head—her hair in the last act having been simply dressed—and put on the more elaborate blonde wig, fastening it in place with hairpins, and setting a lock here and there into place. Next the actress stood up, and the maid swiftly put her into the dress that had lain on the chair. Every part of it fell admirably into place, the drapery across the front hiding the junction, and plentiful hook and eyes holding all together. Standing before a full length mirror, she finally surveyed herself critically, at just three minutes and a half from the start. Half a minute more was employed in putting some additional rouge and powder on the face, and then she was ready to go on the stage.

Cheerful Giver.

Mr. George W. Childs, of Philadelphia, is one of the wealthiest and one of the most liberal men in the world. He has an income of several hundred thousand dollars a year, and spends the whole of it doing good. Every Christmas he makes each man in his employ—and he has a hundred or more—a gift in money, generally $100 each, through the entire establishment of the Philadelphia Ledger, from the editor-in-chief to the stoker who shovels coal in the engine room. It is also Mr. Childs' custom to retain on half pay men who are disabled, or become too old to perform their duties. He has seven such now upon his pension roll. Mr. Childs' liberality is sometimes expended in novel ways. One Christmas he gave every street-car driver in Philadelphia a new overcoat; at another time he sent every newsboy or carrier who sold his paper to a clothing house, and had each one fitted with a new suit of clothes. One Thanksgiving Day he sent a turkey to the house of every policeman and fireman in his city. In these methods Mr. Childs finds the pleasure of spending his ample income, until his name has become a household word among the poor. Mr. Childs' latest freak of generosity is more than usually peculiar. He has expended $5,000 in beautifying a road which leads to his country residence so that he and his neighbors may enjoy it in their daily drives to and fro.

Bleeding at the Lungs.

Putnam, Conn., March 20, 1869

Gentlemen—I avail myself of this opportunity to say a word in behalf of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, which I have made use of in my family for several years, and always with the most beneficial results. My wife being of delicate habits, has always been troubled with a hard, dry, hacking cough, whenever taking a little cold, and has employed various specifics without any relief, until prevailed upon to test the virtues of Wistar's Balsam, the effect of which has been truly astonishing.

More than a year since a young man belonging in this place was taken with bleeding of lungs, in connection with a most severe cough, and was finally given over to die by our best physicians and it was evident to all that Consumption was claiming him as a victim. Learning these facts, my wife sent him a bottle of the Balsam, which he took, and, in due time, to the great astonishment of his friends, was at his accustomed occupation, snatched, as it were, from the very jaws of death. In many other cases we administered the Balsam to the consumptive, and always with best of success. These statements are simple facts, which can be vouched at any time by calling at my store. I remain, yours truly, JOHN R. DARLING.

Any person wanting keys or locks, can be supplied at Wm. David's shop, sign of the red flag. He has hundreds of keys on hand.

FORTUNE BAY TROUBLE.

The "Times" on Lord Granville's Despatch to Minister Lowell.

The Times, commenting editorially on Lord Granville's despatch to Minister Lowell on the fishery question, says: "Earl Granville has now dealt in a simple, straightforward way with the original matter of the contest. He admits that the conduct of the Canadian fishermen was quite indefensible, and does not persist in its support or indemnity. The Canadians who have already protested against Lord Granville's concessions are crying out before they are hurt. In the Fortune Bay case an acknowledgment in principle that damages are due does not carry with it an admission that the interpretation on which the American fishermen acted was the right one, but simply accepts the consequences of the undisputed fact that the Newfoundland rioters were in the wrong. Lord Salisbury did not contest that fact, though he refused to admit that Government lay under any responsibility for it. Lord Granville withdraws the technical objection on which this denial of responsibility was founded, and it will be generally allowed that he has done wisely. It is true that, according to the English views, the American fishermen were acting in contravention of the treaty, but according to the American view, they were within their right. But even they were proceeding on an ill-founded claim, asserting in practice what their Government maintain in theory, it does not appear that the best way of rebutting their pretension is to declare that those who advance it shall have no remedy against lawless violence. The Government of this country is willing that the American fishermen should be compensated for the damage they suffered in the Fortune Bay riot, which was certainly not a justifiable method of vindicating local law and protecting Canadians against trespass or unfair competition. After Lord Granville's despatch and the tacit adoption of it by the American Government, the local Government of Newfoundland will be able to insist upon the execution of its fishery laws by all who fish in British waters without calling in the dangerous aid of mob violence."

A Thrilling Scene.

There was a thrilling scene in the trial of Augustus D. Leighton, a negro, for the murder of his mistress, Mary Dean, in New York on Wednesday. The prisoner was called to testify in his own defence. The prosecuting attorney asked him: "Did you contemplate the murder of Mary Dean when you put the razor in your pocket?" He the accused for the first time displayed some sensitiveness. Raising himself in the chair, and drawing himself to his full height he replied:

"I am not a fiend, sir. I am human, sir, just as you are." "Did you premeditate this murder?" "Most decidedly not, sir." He was asked to detail the story of the murder. He said that when Mary Dean struck at him with the curling tongs he put his hand to his hip pocket, scarcely knowing what he was doing, and as he pulled out his handkerchief brought the razor with it. Then standing up and taking the razor that was handed to him he illustrated by a sudden sweeping movement of the hand the manner in which he struck Mary Dean the deadly blow.

The act sent a shiver through the spectators, and Mr. Quarles, the prisoner's counsel, stepped back suddenly and said to him, "don't do that again." It had its effect, too, upon Leighton, for when he sat down he was trembling with great agitation. He evidently did not recover from the effects of it; and it was only a few moments afterward, when he left the stand, that he burst into tears.

Chicago Grain Market.

The grain receipts of the present year are something extraordinary. Up to the first of the present month the receipts of corn alone had footed up over 91,000,000 bushels, an increase of 60 per cent. over the receipts for the whole of last year. The receipts of wheat have fallen off, however, about 10,000,000 bushels, but oats show an increase of from 13,000,000 to 20,000,000 bushels. The amount of grain received during eleven months was 137,000,000 bushels, and shipped 139,433,088 bushels. The present year has also witnessed the erection of two large elevators by the firm of Munger, Wheeler & Co. One of these elevators, for use by Iowa shippers, has a capacity of 1,300,000 bushels, and the other, known as the St. Paul elevator, has a capacity of a round million bushels. The elevator capacity has thus been increased so that it at present reaches to the aggregate of 19,455,000 bushels. Of the twenty-three elevators in the city the largest is that mammoth structure elevator "D" of the Burlington road, which holds 1,800,000 bushels while eight others have a capacity of a million bushels each and over. The elevators represent an investment of about $7,000,000. When navigation opened here last spring there was about 19,000,000 bushels of grain in store, in elevator and afloat, and at the present time the grain in store exceeds in quantity by about a million bushels the amount on hand at this time a year ago.

Clothing Made of Glass.

(Despatch to the Chicago Tribune.)

The ingenuity that led to the manufacture of articles of clothing from paper has been eclipsed, as similar articles are now made from glass. An uptown dry goods house has on exhibition a glass table-cloth several feet square, of variegated colors, with ornamented fringed edges. The fabric is flexible and only a little heavier than those woven of flax, while it is claimed that it can be washed and ironed like the ordinary table-cloth. Glass has been spun and woven in Austria for some years, but it is a new undertaking in this country.

A prominent glass manufacturing firm of Pittsfield, Pa., recently engaged in the manufacture of this brittle substance into fabrics, which they claim are as perfect, delicate and durable as the finest silk. A representative of this firm said yesterday that they can spin 250 fine threads, each ten miles in length, in one minute. The weaving is done with an ordinary loom, but the process is more difficult and much more interesting than the spinning of cotton and other threads.

"We can duplicate in glass any costume," said this gentleman, "and can make it just as brilliant in color, elaborate in finish, perfect in fit, and equal in the smallest details even to the buttons on the original; the fabric is very strong, cannot be marred or torn, and can be sold at less price than linen, cotton, silk, or other fabric imitated. It is also very warm, easy fitting and comfortable when worn as dress, shawl or other garment of ordinary clothing." Among the articles already manufactured of glass are beautiful feathers, which resemble those of the ostrich, towels, napkins and table-cloths.
