The Queen has granted £500 to the Chicago Relief Fund.

The resignation of the Austrian Minister has been accepted by the Emperor Francis Joseph.

A despatch from Rome announces the serious illness of Cardinal Antonelli, the Pope's minister.

A match game of billiards at New York between Garnier, of Chicago, and Daley, of New York, was won by the latter.

The Swiss claim two and a half millions of francs from the French Government for supplies furnished Bourbaki's starving, half naked troops when they were compelled by the Germans to enter the little Republic.

President Grant has appointed Mr. W. M. Evarts, one of the foremost lawyers of New York, counsel for the United States before the general Conference on the Alabama Claims. Mr. B. R. Curtis has also been appointed Counsel.

Harvey, a convict in the State Prison at Trenton, Mass, attempted to kill Coolahan, one of the keepers, on Wednesday. Coolahan in self-defence knocked the convict down, and injured him fatally.

In the course of a quarrel between Israel Freeman, a negro, and one Carbe, a Frenchman, at Burlington, Vt., yesterday, the Frenchman threw a hatchet at the negro, splitting his skull and causing his death.

GREAT INTELLIGENCE OFFICE.—The City of Chicago just now is more like a great intelligence office than anything else. The advertisements in the papers published there are so many expressions of grief, anxiety, and penury. A few in the lot begin as follows: "Wanted to find, Swedish girl Sophia, formerly living in my family." "A lost cow can be found at," etc.; "Two stray trunks can be heard from at," etc.; "Taken out of the flames, a dark bay mare;" "Ten dollars reward, and no questions asked, for a pair full of dental instruments taken from," etc.; "If the gray whiskered man who was seen removing trunks from," etc.; "Mr. ——, please call at ——, and get your boy George;" "Mr. ——, go to number ——, you father is there." "Agnes —— will find her father at ——." And so on for two closely-printed columns. There is also a fearful number of "missing" notices, and a column of the very finest type is devoted to a record of those who are "lost and found."

MURDER IN ARNPRIOR.—On Wednesday night about 11 o'clock, a man named McDonald, while in a state of intoxication had an altercation at Arnprior with a policeman who endeavored to arrest him. McDonald proved unruly and refused to be taken to the lockup. Thereupon the policeman drew his baton and struck him a severe blow on the temple, knocking him insensible to the ground. He was carried to the lockup and medical assistance at once obtained, but he never rallied, and after continuing in an insensible state for about three hours died from the effects of the wound he received. The policeman is now in custody pending investigation into the matter.

PASSING THROUGH THE MILL.—An attempt ingeniously devised to destroy the city of San Franciso was detected in time and completely baffled on Friday evening last. A block thickly covered with frame buildings was fired in five different places, and but for the seasonable discovery of the diabolical work half the city might have been consumed, for San Francisco is peculiarly subject to high winds. And here the suspicion is again suggested that incendiarism is probably at the bottom of many those Western fires and that the villains concerned, intent upon plunder, have been incited into these atrocious experiments by the terrible teachings of the Paris Commune.

A HARD NUT TO KILL.—James Hickey of Birmingham, Penn., very narrowly escaped being buried alive the other day. He had small-pox of a bad type, and becoming worse and worse, he finally, as his friends supposed, expired. The remains were not kept long, the friends being afraid of the disease. Arragements were made for the funeral, and the coffin was placed in the hearse. On reaching the cemetery the attention of the driver of the hearse was attracted by a noise in the coffin, and he made it known to the pall-bearers. The coffin was taken out, and the lid was taken off, and Hickey immediately raised up terrified, as were all those around. He was taken home, and at last accounts was recovering.

Roguery in New York

The gigantic nature of the robberies committed by the Tammany leaders in New York may be judged of as accurately by the following facts as in any other way. They can all be sustained by uncontrovertible evidence, and are drawn from official records.

Conolly, the ex-Controller, in 1866 swore when sued that he was worth nothing. He has since had never more than ten or twelve thousand dollars of salary from all sources, yet he has since 1866 purchased real property to the extent of $2,300,601.

"Boss" Tweed was, in 1861, discharged from his debts and imprisonment as a bankrupt. After that he went into the business of a politician and has flourished abundantly. Since 1868, he has bought real property to the extent of $4,474,854.

Peter B. Sweeney, another of the clique, bought during the two years, from June 1868, to June, 1870, property to the extent of $1,479,736. This is surely pretty well. If these fellows are not made to disgorge their plunder, then, indeed, New York is the rogue's Paradise. The pickings of municipal officers in other places are contemptible when compared with these.

Murder in Tyendinaga

On Sunday evening last an encounter occurred near Lonsdale, Tyendinaga, between two men named John Sweeney and Patrick Mahan, farmers living in that vicinity, which resulted in the death of Sweeney. Sweeney, while on his way homeward from Lonsdale, met Mahan at a cross-road about half a mile from the village. There was an ill-feeling existing between the parties, Sweeney having some time previous beaten Mahan's brother. Mahan, on seeing Sweeney, called him to stop and asked him to fight. For this purpose deceased dismounted from his horse, when Mahan struck him senseless with a club or sling shot, and, it is supposed jumped upon him, as his intestines were badly ruptured. The injured man was conveyed home, where he lingered in great agony until Thursday morning, when he expired. The occurrence has caused great excitement throughout the Township. The murderer, informed by a friend of the death of his victim, has fled to avoid arrest. Deputy Sheriff Taylor and Chief of Police Petrie went to Mahan's residence yesterday to arrest him, but were foiled by his speedy disappearance. The authorities of other towns have also been put upon the alert, so that his capture may be hoped for. Coroner John P. Macdonnell went to Tyendinaga this afternoon to hold an inquest upon Sweeney's remains.—Intelligencer.

TALL SLEEP-WALKING.—One of the greatest feats of sleep-walking on record was lately performed by a married lady who resides at Onondaga, N.Y. State. At about 1 o'clock on Saturday morning last this lady dreamed that her father, who resides near Hastings, Oswego County, was very sick and had sent for her to visit her immediately. She arose from her bed, dressed herself, and started on foot for Liverpool, where she thought she could take the cars on the Northern Railroad for Hastings. She arrived at Liverpool and stopped at the house of a justice of the peace of the town of Lisbia, at a little after daylight. During all this time the lady was sound asleep, and did not awake until arriving at the house. Her feet were sore and one of her ankles badly swollen from the effects of her long tramp, a distance not less than fifteen miles. The lady says that she was perfectly unconscious during her long walk, and the last she could remember before arriving at the house was the dream that her father was lying dangerously ill, and desired her immediate presence.

One of the darkest, if not the darkest, cloud in the social horizon in England is the Strikes—the all but universal dropping the tools for higher wages.

A newspaper war on literary piracy, is in progress in London. American publishers of British productions are denounced. An international copyright is universally demanded.

The betting was 40 to 1 against "Salinus," the horse that won the Cambridgeshire stakes the other day. Some people must have lost heavily, while others must have made large winnings on small amounts risked.

To fail and make money is quite an art, and some of the foundered insurance companies seem groping in that direction by proposing to pay over only their cash assets, and not realize on notes held against stock holders.

The city of Brooklyn, following hard after New York, has discovered that it, too, has a "ring," and the discovery has the appearance of being true when we read of the modest little defficiency of twenty-seven millions only. A committee of fifty has been appointed to overhaul the city's accounts.

At the corner of Beach street and West Broadway, New York, stands a little plot, somewhat in the shape of an isosceles triangle, with a base of twelve feet. This little bit of earth cost the people, under the beneficent administration of Tammany, nearly $4,000 to have it planted with grass seed, raked, and the railing newly painted. A more outrageous job could not be found, were it not thrown into the shade by more stupendous robberies.

The Ludlow street gaol, which has long been one of the disgraces of New York, is being probed at last. The State abolished imprisonment for debt many years ago, and yet men are incarcerated in this gaol for many years for debts often trifling in amount. Nay, for aught that appears, may lie for life in it, as they used to do in the Fleet Prison, London, if they have no friends to bail them out, and no money to hire lawyers to put them through the Bankruptcy Court.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla
FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD

The extraordinary cures effected by this preparation, which are now made public, are so numerous and so well authenticated, that it seems to be the duty of every one who suffers from the diseases it is known to cure, to make the fact of its efficacy known to the world. Scrofulous humors are the most dangerous enemies of mankind. Other diseases may be more painful, more obvious to the sight, and more dreaded for immediate results, but none are so insidious and none so fatal in their ultimate consequences as these humors. They may be inherited from parents, and transmitted to children, and their presence in the blood may be suspected in many cases where no evidence of disease is yet visible to the world. Hence the necessity of a search for a remedy which shall be at once a preventive and a cure. Such a remedy we now offer to the afflicted, in the confident belief that it will do for them what we have seen it do for others, who were given up by their friends and pronounced incurable victims of consumption, or of other of its hideous forms, such as ulcers on the surface or ruining the vitals. In the form of blotches, it may be confidently expected to root out the taint in the blood, leaving the skin smooth and healthy. In the form of tumors, it may be relied upon to check the growth, and in many instances to cause the tumor to disappear entirely. In the form of ulcers, it may be relied upon to heal the ulcerated surface, and restore the patient to health. In the form of blotches, it should be kept on the surface, to warn the world against the contagion which it indicates. In the form of tumors, it should be watched with the anxiety with which we watch the approach of the tiger, or any
