OVER THE TEA CUPS.

Have you read "Fables in Slang," by George Ade? An artistic little copy of it has come from George J. McLeod, publisher, Toronto. If you object to slang, you won't like it; but if you are willing to wade through a number of new expressions that are not in your vocabulary of slang, you will find a soupcon of truth underlying the caricatures in the fables. In "The Good Fairy" he tells of the rich woman who amused herself visiting the poor, and this was her modus operandi:

The benevolent lady would go into a house, numbered 1135a, with a marking brush, and after she had sized up the front room through her lorgnette, she would say:

"My good woman, does your husband drink?"

"Oh, yes, sir," the grateful woman would reply, that is when he's working. He gets a dollar ten."

"And what does he do with all his money?" the benevolent lady would ask.

"I think he plays the stock market," would be her reply.

Then the benevolent lady would say: "When the unfortunate man comes home this evening, you tell him that a bright and beautiful lady called and asked him to please stop drinking, except a glass of claret at dinner, and to be sure and read eight or ten pages from the Encyclopedia Brittanica each night before retiring, also tell him to be sure and save his money. Is that your child under the bed?"

"That's little William J."

"How many have you?"

"Eight or nine, I don't recollect which."

"Be sure and dress them in sanitary underwear, you can get it for four dollars a suit. Will you be good enough to have the little boy come from under the bed and spell 'Ibex,' for the sweet lady?"

"He's afraid of you."

"Kindly explain to him that I take an interest in him, even though he is the offspring of an obscure and ignorant workingman, while I am probably the grandest thing that ever swept up the boulevard. I must go now, but I will return. Next time I come, I hope to hear that your husband has stopped drinking and is very happy. Tell the small person under the bed that if he learns to spell 'Ibex' by the time I call again I will let him look at my rings. As for you, bear in mind that it is no disgrace to be poor; it is simply inconvenient, that's all."

Having delivered herself of these helpful remarks she would duck, and the uplifted mother would put a nickle in the can and send Lizzie over to the Dutchman's. In this manner the benevolent lady carried forward the good work, and dazzled the whole region between O'Hara's box factory and the city dump. It didn't cost anything, and she derived much joy from the knowledge that hundreds of people were rubbering at her, and remarking in choked whispers: "Say, ain't she the smooth article."

Another fable is about "Sister Mae, who did as well as could be expected."

She began as Mary, then changed to Marie, and her finish was Mae.

She was determined to break into society if she had to use an ax. At last she got there, but it cost her many a reed bird, and several gross of cold quarts. The moral is: "Industry and perseverance bring a sure reward!"

"Don't try to account for anything," is the moral of the fable of the caddy who hurt his head while thinking. "The caddy wondered why it was that his father, a really great man, had to shove lumber all day and could seldom get one dollar to rub against another, while those superficial Johnnies who played golf all the time had money to throw at the birds. The more he thought the more his head ached."

One of the best caricatures in the collection is the fable of the preacher who flew his kite, but not because he wished to do so. There are twenty-six fables in the book of 200 pages. The closing one is of the man who didn't care for story books. After classifying current fiction and diagnosing his classification "the dyspeptic said that when the wanted something really fresh and original in the line of fiction he read the prospectus of a mining corporation. The moral is: "Only the more regular mortals should attempt to keep up on current literature."

Those who are interested in the use of fire arms will take pleasure in reading "Sharp Shooting for Sport and War," by W. W. Greener, author of "The Gun and Its Development." To Mr. Greener's little book an introductory preface has been written by M. Wirt Gerrare, pointing out the part the armed civilian has played in past history and indicating his worth to the community to-day. "Sharp Shooting" is fully illustrated, is clearly written, and should be found especially interesting at this time. It is published by the Copp, Clark Co., Toronto.

Also received from the Copp, Clark Company, "The Reign of Law," by James Lane Allen, and "Unleavened Bread," by Robert Grant.

COMMERCIAL MATTERS.

What is Going on in the Business World—The Market News.

Grey and tan are the popular street shades in kid gloves this season.

Crops in the Ottawa district have been partly destroyed by hailstorms.

The Toronto wholesale trade have been busy this week shipping goods for the fall trade.

There is a large advance in German hosiery. One firm is asking $1.40 for a line they asked $1 for a year ago.

The manufacturers of grey and white cottons are refusing to take orders for next spring. This indicates a coming advance in prices.

Counterfeit $10 bills are in circulation in Buffalo. One storekeeper lost $100 and the street car company lost some $700 by a sharper with the bogus bills.

Lord Winborne, who lately disposed of Dowlar's steel works, at Cardiff, is in negotiation with the owners of the War Eagle and Centre Star mines for the purchase of a controlling interest.

Currants yesterday made another advance of ¼c, and the price now asked is 7¼c. Buying yesterday was influenced largely by cable reports from Greece, reporting very much earlier markets there.

The highest price ever paid for spruce logs in New Brunswick was given at the sale of unmarked logs by the Fredericton Boom company. W. H. Murray, of St. John, gave $10.80 a thousand for spruce.

Advices from Topeka, Kan., state that the corn is suffering greatly for want of rain. The earth is very dry, and farmers are beginning to save the fodder for feed. Late corn will be a failure, without immediate rains.

Mail advices from the coast, under date of August 3rd, state: "The low prices that have ruled on apricots have caused a heavy demand and several sections are said to be practically cleaned out of the better grades. Hot weather is forcing ripening of fruits, which is against size. The prune crop will come on earlier than for several seasons."

In view of the steadily increasing receipts of bananas at New York, and notwithstanding a fairly active demand, there has been a general downward tendency in prices within the last few weeks which has resulted in a drop of from 25c. to 60c. per bunch. The most marked decline, however, has been noted during the last three weeks, and is generally attributed to the low range of values and abundance of other small fruits. In spite of the fact that the receipts to date have been fully eighty-five per cent. less than for the same period last year, the figures being 1,617,000 bunches, compared with 2,533,000 bunches, the range of prices has not been as high in comparison with the receipts as brokers were led to expect.

Big Week For The Cars.

The street cars this week have done an immense business, and his highness is greatly pleased. For the past few weeks the weather was so uncertain that few people would venture to Lake Ontario park in the evening, and the street railway company lost in consequence. Now those dog days are over for the company, while the people's dog days have arrived. There was a big crowd at Lake Ontario park yesterday afternoon and evening, and the pavilion was filled during the performance.

Holidaying In Paris.

The venerable and archdeacon of Quinte and Mrs. Carey spent three weeks of July at the Paris exposition with the temperature in the shade at the highest mark ever known there, 102 degrees. The crowds found sightseeing most difficult and fatiguing. The archdeacon will not be able to return in time for the election of the bishop, as it is impossible to find vacancies in any of the steamship lines until September.

GLOOM AND DESPAIR.

GIVE WAY TO VIGOR, HEALTH AND HAPPINESS.

An Attack of La Grippe Left the Sufferer Weak, Nervous and Enfeebled—A Victim of Insomnia and Heart Trouble.

Naturally every sick person to whom help is promised, will ask, "has the remedy been successful? Whom has it helped?" We cannot better answer these questions than by publishing testimonials received from grateful people who are anxious that other sufferers may profit by their experience. One of these grateful ones is Mrs. Douglas Kilts, of Perry Station, Ont. Mrs. Kilts says:—"Three years ago I had a very severe attack of la grippe, and the disease left me in an extremely worn out, nervous and enfeebled condition. The nervousness was so severe as to have almost resulted in St. Vitus dance. Sleep forsook me. I had bad attacks of heart trouble, and the headaches I endured were something terrible. I had no appetite, and was literally fading away. I was not able to work about the house and was so weak that I could scarcely lift a cup of tea. I was treated by a good doctor, but with no benefit. Almost in despair, I resorted to patent medicines, and tried several one after another, only to be disappointed by each. I lingered in this condition until the winter of 1899, when a friend prevailed upon me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I began taking them. From the first the pills helped me, and I could feel my strength gradually returning. I continued the use of the pills according to directions until I had taken eight boxes, when I was again enjoying perfect health. My strength had entirely returned, my appetite was splendid, the heart trouble and nervousness had ceased, while the blessing of sleep, once denied, had again returned. I had gained over thirty pounds in weight, and was able to do all my housework with ease. In fact I had received a new lease of life. I believe my cure is permanent, as more than a year has since passed and I feel so strong and well that I venture to say there is not a healthier woman in this section; indeed I am enjoying better health than I have for twenty years and this has been brought about by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I feel that I cannot say enough in their praise for I believe they saved my life. My son has also received the greatest benefit from the use of these pills in a case of spring fever."

A CLERGYMAN'S TESTIMONY.

Dr. Arnold's English Toxin Pills the Best Medicine He Ever Used.

How They Restored Him to His Congregation When He Expected to be Unable to Officiate For Months.

There can be no doubt that sickness causes the greater part of the misery on this earth. Since civilization first dawned upon mankind, researches have been going on with the object of finding unfailing means of banishing disease. Only within recent years, and by men still living, has the object been accomplished. In Dr. Arnold's English Toxin Pills for Weak People we have a medicine that cannot fail to cure disease, for the simple reason that it kills the germs that cause the disease.

Thousands have been cured by Dr. Arnold's English Toxin Pills after their physicians had pronounced their cases incurable. Take the case of Rev. J. C. Glass, an eminent American divine, for instance. Rev. Mr. Glass writes:

"In the early part of July, 1899, my constitution was so badly run down that I was obliged to obtain leave of absence from my pastorate for four months. While in Toronto I read in The News an advertisement, telling of Dr. Arnold's English Toxin Pills, and bought a box. At that time I could not sleep, and my appetite was very poor. Before I had finished the box, I could sleep soundly and enjoy my meals, and now, after having used several boxes, I feel like a new man. I think Dr. Arnold's English Toxin Pills the best medicine I ever used."

Dr. Arnold's English Toxin Pills for Weak People are sold by all druggists, 75c. a large box, 25c. a small box, or sent postpaid on receipt of price by The Arnold Chemical Co., Limited, Canada Life Building, 44 King street, West, Toronto.

DIPLOMACY OF INACTION.

Characteristics of the Chinese Tsung-li-Yamen.

For masterly inactivity and deplorable deafness and dumbness the Chinese tsung-li-yamen leads the world. This institution is something like the foreign offices of other nations. It is a buffer between the rulers of China to sift through the tsung-li-yamen before it reaches Celestial royalty. The yamen has much dignity but no authority. It can only mutely listen to representations from the ministers and promise to call the attention of higher authorities to the matter. It cannot take positive action, though it pretends to do so. Concerning the office and its functions, Archibald R. Colquhoun, the well-known traveler and author, says in his book on "China In Transformation:"

"The Tsung-li-yamen, or office of foreign affairs, was established by Imperial decree in January, 1861. It was the first step made by the imperial authorities to admit of diplomatic relations in the capital. It was originally composed of three ministers, who were also members of other boards, but its numbers increased from time to time, and now stands at eighty-three Mantchoos and five Chinese. The new creation never acquired any authority until the pressure of external events compelled the emperor's council to make use of it, and to recognize it as an integral part of the government. It was not until 1890 that it first figured in the red book, a complete record of state departments.

"The tsung-li-yamen was at first a disappointment. It fell into the condition of an ordinary government department, with several vices of its own, an institution for the prevention of business. Its fatal incapacity lay in the fact that it was a body without a head," for, though they were always a nominal president, he absented himself when he chose.

"The yamen, until forced into greater activity by events resulting from the Japanese war, served merely as the cold water which extinguished the hot irons thrust into it by the ardor of the foreign agents. To transact business with the board was declared by Sir Harry Parkes to be a physical tour de force. Sir R. Alcock more minutely described it in The Fortnightly Review, May, 1876.

"'It is beating the air,' he said, 'to talk to them of treaty rights and obligations, the claims of justice or benefits that accru to them, as to us, by a more liberal policy. The tyro in such work is at first charmed with the courtesy and patience shown in listening to what he hopes may prove convincing arguments.

"They are even met, in reply with a certain show of appreciative intelligence and a willingness to be better informed. When, however, many such interviews have exhausted the subject, perhaps at a final meeting for the purpose of settlement, when there is many there is nothing more to be said on either side, his proposal to settle terms of agreement is met by a request in the loudest accents, with a perfectly unmoved countenance, to explain what is wanted, as he is ready to hear!'

And the modus operandi was still more minutely depicted by a correspondent of The Times in 1884, cited in the 'Life of Sir Harry Parkes,' by Stanley Lane Poole. He says

"They commence by delicate plaisanterie of offering refreshments which they know their visitors wont touch, and the attendants know the art of killing time by bringing in the repast dish by dish. The visitor sits meanwhile on a hard seat in a cheerless room. At last, when the melon seeds have been distributed in saucers all over the table on which the foreigner would have liked to spread his papers, business is supposed to commence. "And now," observes the visitor, "what is your answer about the robbery of merchandise belonging to Mr. Smith of Nam-kwei?" One of their rules is that no one shall speak first. So they take sidelong glances at each other and keep silence until one, bolder than the rest, opens his mouth, much to the surprise or relief of his comrades, who watch the reckless man in hope that he will drop something which may hereafter serve in a charge against him. What he does say is "Take some of these walnuts." Then follows a discussion on the merits of walnuts. When they to speak, they all speak at once; what they say can be neither understood nor answered."

The Eclipse of 1901.

Already astronomers are laying their plans for observing the next total solar eclipse, which will occur on May 17, 1901. The duration of totality at the several stations recommended are as follows: Mauritius, 3 minutes 35 seconds; Padang, Sumatra, 6 minutes 14 seconds; Pontianak, Borneo, 5 minutes 40 seconds; Fort Victoria, Amboyna, 4 minutes 15 seconds; Port Moresby, New Guinea, 8 minutes 19 seconds.
