TROUBLE AT MONTMORENCY

COTTON OPERATIVES HAVE HAD A STRIKE.

Because of an Order of the Company That Knights of Labor Members Must Not Be Allowed to Work in the Mill.

Quebec, Aug. 17.—The state of affairs at the Montmorency cotton mills company is announced by the company to be as follows: Of the 750 operatives in the factory 250 struck yesterday morning, leaving 500 still at work. The management thought that this would be a good opportunity to make some slight but necessary repairs to the machinery, so, at noon, the announcement was made that the water power could be shut off and the mills closed down for a few days to effect these repairs. Thirty special constables were sworn in at Quebec to protect the company's property.

The management has refused to recognize the society and will not receive delegates from the knights of labor. The manager states that the non-union employees have signed a document disclaiming all connection with any labor organization, and the members of the knights of labor will be given until noon, on Saturday, to follow this example.

According to the labor men, the foreman who has caused the trouble is no longer to be found.

The striking employees were promenading quietly yesterday, many of them wearing the knights of labor badges. No violence is contemplated, and it is hoped that the difficulty will shortly be adjusted. The labor men say that there is no likelihood of the union men abandoning their organization.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

That Chemical Discovery.

Kingston, Aug. 17.—(To the Editor): Your issue of yesterday, 16th inst., contained a New York despatch relative to a series of demonstrations before the French academy of science, by M. M. Desgrey, and Valthunand, regarding the use of bioxide of sodium as absorbent of poisonous gases and its power to renew oxygen.

For over a year I have conducted a series of experiments in this city with bioxide of sodium, and succeeded in June, 1899, in demonstrating with it the possibility of firemen entering a smoky building, or a diver going into a body of water with the use of the usual air supplying apparatus.

In the early part of the winter I interviewed chief Youlden regarding my discovery and he encouraged me to go on with it. I have since spoken to several in this city who can verify my claim to this discovery before the French academy ever saw it or perhaps heard of anything of the kind. I have perfected a simple appliance for firemen, miners, divers, sewer cleaners, etc., and can produce a number of local witnesses who will make affidavit to the fact that for over a year I have had this matter in mind and hand, and would have had such an apparatus on the market, had I but the means. I have been foolish enough to speak of it freely, and write openly to several American and English chemists. What seems to startle the scientific world, and work up the French academy to a pitch of frenzy, has been a fact in Kingston for at least a year, and any one interested in the utilization of such a valuable discovery can see it in practical form at my home any day or evening. J. G. EVANS, M.D.

ORIGIN OF THE CAKE WALK.

Choosing a Partner Meant Choosing a Wife.

The cake walk proper had its origin among the French negroes of Louisiana more than a century ago, according to the New Orleans Times-Democrat. "There is little doubt that it is an offshoot of some of the old French country dances. It resembles several of them in form. From New Orleans it spread over the entire south and thence north. It was found of convenience to the plantation negroes. They were not molested by license, and it was seldom that the services of a preacher were called in. At a cakewalk a man might legitimately show his preference for a woman and thus publicly claim her for a wife. In effect, the cake walk was not different from the old Scotch marriages, which required only an acknowledgment from the contracting parties. So this festival became in some sense a wooing, an acceptance or a rejection and a ceremony. This explains its popularity with the blacks outside of its beauties, with the accompaniment of music, which is competent at all times to command negro support.

"Cake walking has improved, as do most things that are constantly practised. It has lost its old significance in the south. Negroes now get married, when they marry at all, in the white folks' fashion. It has become, however, a autumnal dance." Properly performed, it is beautiful one! The cake is not much of a prize, though the negro has a sweet tooth.

U. S. Coal In England.

London, Aug. 17.—Dealing with the question of American coal imports this morning the Daily Chronicle says: "American coalowners seem bent on gaining an entrance into the British market. We wish them good luck in the name of free trade. Let them do their best in the open market, and bring certain greedy folk on this side of the water to their senses."

Likely Here To-Morrow.

To-morrow the Messrs. Meyer, in company with Hon. Peter McLaren, are expected to arrive in the city. They have been down south examining the Virginia iron mines. The incorporation of the syndicate to operate the local smelter has been effected satisfactorily.

WON BRIDE AND MINE.

How a Dude Captured a Wife and Fortune.

St. Louis, Aug. 17.—By indomitable pluck, backed up by considerable well-seasoned muscle, Willis V. Hill won a beautiful bride and a coal mine, reckoned among the most valuable in Southern Illinois. Mr. Hill and his bride, very proud of her athletic husband, have just passed through this city on their honeymoon trip. It did not take a great deal of urging to persuade the blushing bride to tell the story of how her husband won her and the coal mine. Her eyes beaming with wifely pride, she remarked:

"Well, I do think I ought to be proud of Willis. He is a graduate of Pennsylvania university. His parents have mining interests near Scranton, Pa., and there as a boy he used to dig coal to learn the business. That's where he got his strength to become such a good athlete at college. Well, he went to Illinois to St. Clair county, where my papa, who is Robert Smith, and I lived. I met him at a social entertainment. We liked each other from the first. One day he said: 'Nanny, will you marry me?' 'I told him I would, but when I told papa, he said:

"'What? A daughter of mine marry that dude from the east? Why, that chap never can work for a living! Why don't you marry big Jim Andrews, who's been hankering after you these last three years? Now, there's a man for you. If this eastern dude could dig coal like that big Jim can I might—but what's the use of talking? You can't have this dude Hill!'

"I told Willis what papa had said. He laughed and went to father.

"'So Mr. Smith, you think I'm a dude and afraid of hard work? Now, what do you think of a match coal-digging contest between big Jim Andrews and me?' he asked. 'And if I win you will let me marry your daughter?'

"Well, papa thought is was a sure thing for Big Jim, and contemptuously accepted Willis' challenge. The contest was set for six weeks later, and Willis put in all that time training. He dug coal hard for eight hours every day. The terms of the match required that the contestants should dig coal for six days, eight hours a day, the one that dug the most to be declared the winner.

"Willis and Big Jim met in the same pit in one of papa's mines, but worked in different shafts. At the end of the first day Big Jim was two carloads ahead. He had spurted, thinking to discourage Willis, who was saving himself for last in the match. The next day Big Jim was three loads ahead.

"Jim felt so sure of winning he celebrated that night, and the result was that next day Willis gained up all the lost ground. I sent him a note of encouragement, and papa went to him and said he was doing much better than he expected. This made Willis more determined than ever to win, and both men dug for all they were worth till the six days were up. Willis won by a quarter of a load. He fainted just as the steam whistle blew for the end of the day's work, but he quickly recovered.

"Papa was so pleased by the grit he had shown that he not only gave his consent to our marriage, but made Willis a present of the coal mine where the coal-digging match took place.

"And that's our story. Romantic isn't it?"

SLASHED HIS THROAT.

A Treacherous Negro Got in His Work.

Calgary, N.W.T., Aug. 17.—A quarrel took place last evening, on Atlantic avenue, between a negro horse trainer named George Robinson and brakesman Burns. Robinson drew a knife, and slashed Burns' throat, making a serious but not fatal wound. Robinson was taken into custody.

Erinsville Etchings.

Erinsville, Aug. 13.—J. L. Murphy spent Sunday with his parents. Mrs. R. Murphy returned after spending last week with her sisters, Mrs. J. and Mrs. E. Keeley, Railton. Mrs. Rosie Murphy is visiting her daughter, Mrs. John O'Neill, Deseronto. Miss Mamie McMullen, Pointe Claire, Que., is visiting her home here. Daniel Mooney, Napanee, spent Sunday in our midst. Master William Evans, ill, is some better. The hauling out of the logs at the station is done, and all the men have gone away. It leaves it in Montreal on business. News was received here on Thursday night from J. L. Barry, teacher at McGarvey's Corners, who resides in Morningside, of his mother's death. He has the sincere sympathy of his many friends. John Neville recovered his horse, which he thought was stolen. Miss Winnie Marrigan, Deseronto, is visiting Miss Marion Murphy. The marriage of Miss R. O'Donnell and Thomas Pierce, Tamworth, was announced here on Sunday. Mrs. Finn, who was taken suddenly ill on Sunday, is some better. E. J. Harrison is able to be out again after severe illness. A great many from Tamworth and other points spent last week in boating and fishing on Beaver lake.

Absent Minded.

Two Kingston ladies, one of them a school teacher, are camping at Kingston Mills. At noon yesterday one of them demonstrated how preoccupied a mind can be. She had been in the city and went to the depot to take the train for the Mills. She watched the train come in, and then complacently sat there and watched it go out again. After the train had disappeared she recalled the reason of her presence at the depot, and waited till the evening train.

The Father's Arrival.

John Marshall, Sydenham, father of the drowned young man, Archibald Marshall, arrived in the city to-day. He was too late to attend his son's funeral, which took place yesterday afternoon to Cataraqui cemetery. The sad intelligence was conveyed to Mr. Marshall by letter, which did not reach him in time. He will remain in the city to settle up the late son's affairs.

CHALLENGE FROM ENGLAND.

IS EXPECTED FOR THE SEAWANHAKA CUP.

The New Westminster Lacrosse Club to Play in Various Eastern Cities—Burial of a Young Actor in Montreal.

Montreal, Aug. 17.—The Carson brothers, expelled from the Capital lacrosse club, on conviction of professionalism, have made a second application to the Canadian amateur athletic union for reinstatement. On the first application they were told to make a fuller statement of their case, which they have now done going into their connection with the Capitals for several years back. A committee has been appointed to go into the application. It is understood the Carsons do not want to go into lacrosse again, but wish to row as amateurs.

The funeral of the late James William Bankson, a member of the Baldwin Hanerville stock company, playing at Her Majesty's theatre, took place this morning, the service being held at the Church of the Advent, Westmount, and the remains were afterwards interred in Mount Royal cemetery. A large number of friends of the deceased attended, besides the members of the stock company. Rev. Mr. Doull conducted the funeral services.

Archie McNaughton, captain of the New Westminster, B.C., lacrosse club, is here arranging dates for a visit of that team to this part of the country. They will play here on Wednesday, and go to Quebec on Saturday, returning to Ottawa to play the Capitals on September 1st. They will be in Toronto on labor day.

It is stated in Royal St. Lawrence yacht club circles that a challenge of the Seawanhaka cup is expected from England for next year.

To Play At Quebec.

Montreal, Aug. 17.—The international golf tournament will be held in Quebec on September 1st, between sides of ten picked from the Royal Canadian golf association and the United States golf association. Quebec has been chosen on account of having the best links in Canada.

Had A Pleasant Time.

The weekly social at the Y.W.C.A. rooms was very interesting. A visitor, Mr. Henderson, Chicago, gave an interesting talk on China, praising the Chinese for their industry and ingenuity and advising the girls to try to have a good influence on all their companions. "A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump." Some Chinese curiosities were passed round and songs were sung and pieces of music played. Miss Smith's ice cream was delicious.

CHIVALRY OF SAVAGES.

New Zealand Aborigines Supply Their Enemies With Food.

We are accustomed to speak of the humane and chivalrous manner in which modern fighting is carried on and to congratulate ourselves upon the advance which has been made in this respect.

But is this advance as great and as real as we imagine? For example, how do our present day customs of war compare with the old time fighting methods of the Maoris, the natives of New Zealand? It will surprise a good many people to hear that when a band of Maori warriors was going to fight the warriors of another tribe it was not unusual for the numbers it was proposed to place in the field to be communicated to the enemy. Moreover, one side often provided the other with arms and provisions, so that the enemy might not be placed at too great a disadvantage.

Here are a few stories which illustrate the generosity which the Maoris of former days displayed toward their enemies. A chief was asked why, when on a certain occasion he had command of the road, he did not attack the ammunition and provision trains of the English. The Maori, utterly astonished at such a question, exclaimed, "Why, you fool, if we had stolen their powder and food, how could they have fought?"

Another chief, who considered that he had been insulted by the chief of a neighboring tribe, said that the other chief, had he not been much the stronger of the two in arms and ammunition, would not have dared to act in so insulting a manner. This speech came to the ears of the neighboring chief, who thereupon divided his arms and ammunition into two equal parts and sent one half, along with an invitation to fight, to chief No. 1.

On another occasion a chief who was fighting against us and who was short of guns and powder sent this message to the governor: "My custom with regard to my enemy is if he has not a weapon I give him one, that he may fight on equal terms. Now, oh, governor, are you not ashamed of my defenseless hands?"

A clergyman who lived for a long time in New Zealand relates how in one of the intertribal wars the besieged sent word to the enemy that they were short of provisions, and the besiegers at once handed over a supply of food.

But we need not go all the way to New Zealand for an example of supplying ammunition to an enemy, for, if the story be true, it would appear that something of this sort once occurred in the English channel, when a British admiral was trying conclusions with a Dutch admiral.—London Mail.

HERITAGE OF THE SEXES.

An Apologue Suggested by Reading Drummond's "Ascent of Man."

When the first man and woman had left the seclusion of the Garden, crossed the river of Possibility and stood upon the shore of Time, ready for their onward journey toward Posterity, the Angel of Opportunity appeared to them and said:

"Man, make a prayer to Nature and Life. Petition wisely, for whatsoever you ask shall be the heritage of your sex for ever."

And the man thought and thought, then, looking up at the glowing sun, exclaimed, "Oh, Nature, do not thrust your greatest throes upon me, nor persist in making me remember pain."

The angel said to the woman, "Pray thou also with wisdom."

As the woman bent low her head she softly said: "Oh, Nature, do not allow me to grow callous nor empty. Hold me close to the joys, so few, the sorrows, so many, that I may gain strength from each."

Again the angel bade the man pray, and once more he stood and looked toward the glowing sun, saying: "Oh, Life, give me joy and pleasure. Do not unload upon me the sorrows of others; do not open my eyes to pangs I cannot assuage. Give me sweets and the power to cast aside regret."

"Sister," said the angel, "pray."

The woman bent still lower, and in a softer voice uttered her petition: "Oh, Life, do not take away from me the memory of sorrow, the shell holding the kernel of joy; do not allow me to become blind to the debt I owe others. Make me tender, give me a woman's portion, pain, that I may attain my full stature."

And, that the angel's promise might be redeemed, from that hour there was implanted in man the overmastering love of pleasure and ingrafted in the heart of woman the undying instincts of motherhood.—George Denton Canfield in New Lippincott.

Referred It to an Authority.

When the critical man was going into a barber shop on South Thirteenth street, he noticed a sign painted on the window which read, "Laundry agentcy."

"Where did you learn to spell?" he asked the barber.

"Why? What's wrong?" the barber asked in reply.

"Look at that sign," replied the critic. "Who told you to spell agency that way?"

"It doesn't look right," admitted the barber. "We had a big argument about it, me and the painter. I said I thought it was a g e n c y, but he said it was a g e n c e y. He wouldn't give in to me, and I wouldn't give in to him, and we left it to a man that's president of the school board. He spelled it the way it's on the window, and we couldn't dispute his word about it, could we?"

The Ice Water Habit.

Americans are noted for their devotion to ice water, and the Englishman looks in undisguised horror at our habit of drinking quarts of the cold fluid when we are warm and tired. He is taught when a child that awful consequences follow washing in very cold water or drinking cold water when he is hot.

Our Foreigners.

Foreigners cling to the great cities, though in none of them do they outnumber the natives. In New York, however, and some other of the larger cities the foreigners and those of foreign parents unquestionably outnumber those of American parents of two generations' standing.

The first symptoms of nervous trouble are irritability of temper, excitement over trifles, lack of interest in work, and then insomnia. Inability to sleep wears out the positive and negative, for during sleep the old dynamo is charging up reserve energy.
