OZONE

Is Winning Many Notable Victories Over the Most Obstinate Forms of CATARRH.

Testimony from a Prominent Commercial Man Proving the Superiority of The New Treatment over the Older Methods. Painful Suffering Removed by Powley's Liquified Ozone.

There are thousands of persons suffering from dyspepsia, insomnia and disordered nerves, caused by catarrhal poison passing into the stomach which produces indigestion, heart affections and other serious complaints. Catarrh is an insidious enemy to the stomach, kidneys, lungs, liver, and in fact, to the entire system. Half of the heart failures may be traced directly to stomach trouble super-induced by catarrh of the stomach. A catarrhal condition of the liver is often due to catarrh of the stomach, the mucus finding its way into the bile ducts through the portal circulation, the symptoms of which vary, but there is usually a jaundiced condition, the skin is dry and dark blotches appear on the face and hands, conjunctivae of the eyes becomes yellow and the sight is often blurred.

With Powley's Liquified Ozone you can positively cure catarrh. We can refer to numbers of people in this city and throughout the dominion who have been cured.

Ozone is a powerful germicide and antiseptic. It destroys the germs and neutralizes the acrid nasal secretions, thus removing a fruitful source of danger to life and health.

Scores of letters from those who have been cured through the new treatment:

Here Is A Sample:

D. D. Rose, commercial traveller, 191 Simcoe street, city, says: "I have used the new treatment for Catarrh, and found excellent results. I have been troubled for three or four years before commencing Powley's Liquified Ozone, and had used the old methods in vogue for treating this disease, but without any benefit. I can conscientiously say that the new treatment is really the dawn of a new era in curing this awful disease. IT HAS ENTIRELY CURED ME of Catarrh. Its peculiar action on the mucous membrane and nasal passages is so powerful yet so harmless to the system that Catarrh germs cannot remain where it is used. I can safely recommend it to other sufferers as being far in advance of the older methods of treatment."

QUESTION OF FITNESS.

The cry of Mr. Rogers' friends, that only a farmer should represent the farmers, is not the best for the country. The house of commons is not without its farm representatives, its men who, while given to agricultural occupations, have been ardent political students and in the arena of debate have brought distinction to themselves and the people whom they serve. There are others who have been reared on the farm, who, early in life have removed to the city, have brought with them the brawn and muscle they have cultivated in the fields, and have won their way to the front in commercial and professional pursuits. These have become, in many cases, members of the legislature and of the commons, and have done their work here well. Suppose the Rogers' idea permeated society, and had a dominating influence—that the business men should only be represented by business men, the literary men by bookmen, the workingmen by artisans and toilers — the farmers would be the sufferers in the long run. The farmers should make sure of only one thing, that the candidates who appeal to them and solicit their suffrages are in sympathy with their service and understand their wants. There are degrees of qualification. Some men know a great deal and cannot tell it. The farmers' cause needs exposition, and in the house much more than on the stump.

INSPIRATION IN LIFE.

The Boston Herald differs from most of its contemporaries and holds up the life of the late Collis P. Huntington for honest and candid criticism. He was a masterful accumulator of millions. He accomplished his aim to be rich by self denial, by industry, by enterprise, by resolution, by hardness, by perversion of moral obligations, by remorselessly crushing those who stood in his way, by corrupting legislatures and congresses, by deadening the noble sympathies of human nature, by spurning friendships that had no money value, by despising culture and sentiment, by cultivating selfishness as a virtue, by making his heart a dry husk, by making Mammon his god. Was it a grand life? asks our contemporary.

Is he model to which parents should point their sons? Money-getting was his one supreme object. All his planning and scheming and designing and serving had that end in view. Money was to him in lieu of all these things, and more to be desired than any of them. To the end of his life he was of this opinion. Not that, when he became immensely rich, he never gave away anything nor bought a luxury. There are a few known instances of benevolence in the long record; but it is probable that all he gave did not equal the cost of the mausoleum he caused to be erected to hold the dead Huntington and notify the world that he was a rich man. He had no respect for intellectual and moral culture, nor even for education that was not serviceable in making money. To this effect he made a public record. It will be found in the September number of Success.

Supposing the man did project and control large engineering works, that his enterprises employed thousands, the fact is that he was selfish beyond all measure and that he used anything and everything to advance his personal interests. Or as the Herald puts it, "his cardinal thought was not how to employ his genius and resources to beget prosperity, but how he could make prosperity pay toll to his coffers." His avarice was insufferable.

The lives of great men are suggestive of imitation. Huntington's will have its admirers among those who regard money as the means towards all happiness. Money is, seemingly, all powerful. It procures all manner of comforts and luxuries. Its victories are unbounded. Such are its conquests that with it all other things seem to follow. Huntington had money and what money could buy, but he had a hard, sordid, selfish nature, a nature which became less and less sympathetic as he let money getting become the supreme motive and "made it as truly a deformity of character as the opposite vice."

A better nature is that of the young physician who set up a free dispensary and gave the poor and the needy the benefit of his skill while he waited for the practice that brought him his reward. He got that spirit from his aged father, who, during a course of sixty years, saved and served and felt that there was no inspiration in a life that was without the consciousness of doing good.

Nicholas Flood Davin is alleged to have caught the spirit of the prize ring, and to be spoiling for a fight with some one. He should tackle the editor of the Regina Leader, the paper he established, and the paper that refers to Mr. Sifton as one of the best ministers representing the North-West, that the dominion has ever had. That is an impartial tribute.

Dr. Allan C. Sloan, one of Owen Sound's best citizens, is dead.

EDITORIAL COMMENTS.

On Mondays the London Advertiser and London News omit editorials. Poor men! washing out the linen that day probably. And family linen too!

Sir Charles to win favour in Quebec, declares that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is too English for him! Fancy any privy councillor of Canada being too devoted to the crown under which he serves! Is it possible?

Fitzsimmons, the pug., says his family is growing up and he wants to get out of the ring on that account. So there's something disreputable about prize-fighting of which even the champion heavyweight is quite ashamed.

He would be a pretty smart man who could please every one, and so the chairman of the board of works is to be excused if in street watering he cannot satisfy the bicyclists and the people who do not ride the wheel at the same time. He can only try to do it.

The rector of the Holy Angels church, in Buffalo, has issued an order that no woman be admitted henceforth, at any time, without a covering on her head. Fancy any man, even a modern well-groomed rector, undertaking to regulate the fashions! Fancy King Ben ordering that no woman should ride upon his cars without a hat or bonnet!

If George Taylor, the conservative whip, the man who is carrying around so much responsibility nowadays that he cannot sleep, will ship several tons of pamphlet No. 6 into Ontario, he will do the people a favour. If George is overworked and cannot perform the service some one else should do it. Pamphlet No. 6 is a great election card.

Next to being the president of the Standard oil trust the average Isay, for money making purposes, would like to be a prize fighter. Fitzsimmons made $25,000 in a two minute bout with Sharkey! In the scraps of this year he has made enough to keep him and his family for the rest of their days! Is it any wonder the sporting column of the paper is attractive?

The plebiscite is being named as an election issue, and the government is being blamed for its alleged duplicity. Well, Dr. Potts is not a Laurier man. No one will accuse him of an undue partiality for the liberals. He says that the vote of the people does not warrant prohibitory legislation, and that Sir Wilfrid is not breaking any pledge or promise!

Cyrus C. Adams, writing in Ainslee's Magazine, declares emphatically that the absence of trusts in Great Britain is due to free trade. In high tariff countries alone, do the combinations thrive, because success depends upon ability to suppress or restrain competition. Judging by the paper mills combine this Canada of ours must be a high tariff country in more than coal oil.

The Halifax people declare that the Royal Canadians are the finest infantry regiment ever stationed there. Yet the Chronicle of that city reports seventy-five desertions since April, for no special reason except tiredness of military life. Yet several papers declare a Kingston battery demoralized because similar desertions occur. Many of the enlisted men in Canada cannot settle down to disciplinary living. They are rovers by nature and habit.

There ought to be a very indignant gentleman up street. The Stratford Beacon proclaims the editor of the Whig chancellor of Ontario diocese, the neatest, cleanest and best paying job in town. It is with poignant regret that the position has to be declined. No Whigman can expect to be chancellor, as the lawyers have a cinch on the office, but he can hope to be bishop, since there has been a long sounding call for an active chap. St. Ambrose, layman was called by acclamation of the episcopal title and made a model bishop.

The citizens are complaining of the growing lawlessness of youth in Kingston, and not without good reason. Police administration has settled down to a mere preventive policy and mild reproof, and the law has lost its terrors. All lads cannot be won over by precept or kindness and immunity from punishment leads to many imitators of a bad example. On the streets on Monday afternoon were seen an unusual number of intoxicated men. How would it do for the police to establish a mild reign of terror, be a little serious by way of warning and forcible reproof? It is worth a trial.

The Toronto Telegram proclaims, in big headlines, "Corby is hard to beat; never loses an election." It might have added, Corby is an entertainer and a spender, and a mighty good fellow, since in the body of the article it is declared that many repay him, for his geniality and hospitalities by marking ballots for him. That is sacrificing principle for personality. Later on the Telegram declares: "In every campaign his opponents have been men of greater ability." There is only one inference, and that is not a tribute to the patriotism or intelligence of West Hastings. But Mr. Corby deserves honors, for he works diligently for the city and the county, and thus virtue hath its own reward. But such lasting virtue is not often seen in the garb of a distiller.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Kemp, James street, left last night for Toronto.

ELECTRICAL ASSOCIATION.

ITS TENTH CONVENTION OPENED THIS MORNING.

Display of Electrical Features in the City Hall—Delegates Officially Welcomed — President Dion's Address — Increase in Membership and Finances—Several Reports.

The tenth annual convention of the Canadian electrical association opened in the city buildings this morning at half-past ten o'clock. The city hall was very prettily and artistically decorated with electrical features. In the centre of the hall was a large booth draped with flags, and containing a fine exhibit by the Packard electrical company, of St. Catharines. An illuminated fountain dressed with ferns and green plants occupies the centre of the booth. This fountain was a grand piece of work. Colored electric lights were strung around the booth in great number. The Packard company had an orchestra composed of Joseph Bistolfi and Louis Colombo, two string musicians of high order, who brought forth sweet strains from their instruments.

The electrical work on the platform of the hall was a grand sight. It was arranged by I. H. Breck, Kingston, whose ability is well known. An arch over the steps, built from the floor, contained the word "Welcome," formed of colored electric globes. In the centre the half circle was a large metal maple leaf, and on the leaf were the letters "C.E.A." done in red, white and blue globes. The entrance to the platform was formed by two finely colored pillars. Colored electric lights were also interspersed over the platform.

The business sessions were held in the council chamber, where the delegates assembled at half past ten o'clock, and were welcomed by mayor Minnes and alderman Donnelly on behalf of the city council, and by Edw. J. B. Pense on behalf of the board of trade. Mayor Minnes hoped that the convention would be a pleasant and profitable one, and that the delegates would be favorably impressed with Kingston and Kingstonians. He tendered them the freedom of the city. Alderman Donnelly gave evidence to the convention of his sojourn knowledge and told the delegates how they were carrying out the divine command, "Let there be light." He assured them that he had done all in his power to "fix" the police, and gave the delegates a "free hand." Edw. J. B. Pense extended a welcome on behalf of the mercantile interests of Kingston, and pointed out to the delegates that while Kingston was not strong in the electrical world, yet it had institutions and a location which were well worthy of consideration. The words of welcome were warmly applauded by the delegates.

President A. A. Dion, Ottawa, replied to the welcome extended, and thanked the city's representatives for their kind words. He stated that no other city had taken such pains to invite the electrical convention in previous years as Kingston had. He referred to the hospitality of the city in giving the use of the city buildings to the association. Mayor Minnes invited the delegates to a complimentary searchlight excursion down the river this evening, which invitation was thankfully accepted.

President Dion's address referred to the admirable arrangements made by the Kingston committee, under the direction of W. F. Simmons, for the meeting of the convention. On account of the disastrous fire in Ottawa the convention was postponed until August, and on invitation of the mayor and council it was decided to hold it in Kingston.

The president suggested that a feature of company membership should be introduced into the constitution, in addition to the individual membership. This would be a means of interesting many companies in the work of the association. Consideration of the convention was directed to the standardization of accounts, and the president thought it a good thing if companies could agree on some general plan of distributing operating expenses, and furnish their figures to some committee of this association. This would enable managers to test the economy of their management and apply the pruning knife where necessary.

The president referred to the extraordinary action and progress in electrical works during the past year. Large works and factories hitherto operated by steam have adopted the electric motor in large units. Some steam railways have been converted into trolley lines, electric railways have been extended far out of cities, equipped with heavier rails, better rolling stock, larger generators, and more powerful motors, and higher speeds have prevailed. The pleasing feature of all the past year's electrical undertakings from an engineering point of view, is the scientific design and modern character of the apparatus and works.

C. H. Mortimer, secretary-treasurer, presented his report, which showed an increased membership. There were now 211 active members and thirty-six associate members. The finances were reported in good condition, the revenue up to May 31st for being $830 in excess of that of the preceding year.

Reports from various committees were read, showing increased interest and results in all departments of the association. Important legislation was secured during the past year, in the interests of electrical companies. The Cosmos bill, which was in danger, was withdrawn by the Ontario legislature. The railway inspection committee report showed that something had been gained for electric lighting companies in the reduction of certain inspection fees.

The convention adjourned shortly after half-past eleven o'clock, as many of the delegates would not arrive till this afternoon.

The flags on the city buildings were flying to-day in honor of the electrical visitors.

The insignia of the association is a white celluloid button, having an enamel maple leaf in the centre and the name of the association around the edge. Executive members wear a small red ribbon attached, and guests a white ribbon.

The delegates form a happy contingent, and they will find a warm reception awaits them from the people of the limestone city. They were highly pleased with the official reception and welcome they received.

George Angus, Toronto, is the convention's stenographer.

The employees of the Hamilton quarry have struck because the new stonekeeper William Mathison, is not a member of the civic employees' union.

TURNING THE TABLES.

Rejected Suitor Sues His Would-Be Bride's Father For Damages.

It is by no means unusual for a woman to sue a man for breach of promise of marriage, but rare, indeed, it is that the tables are turned and the man becomes the plaintiff in such an action at law. Such an instance has just come to the public knowledge in Pittsburg, where Frank Wolesechowsky has begun suit against Joseph Barnatovias, father of the girl he desires to marry. A capias was issued for the arrest of the defendant. The plaintiff asks for $10,000 damages, alleging that after giving his consent to the proposed marriage the father subsequently refused to allow the wedding to take place, and the plaintiff says he has spent $300 preparing for the event. Wolesechowsky is a native of Russia. He is twenty-seven years of age and a coal miner by occupation. Caudia Barnatovias, daughter of the defendant, and whose hand the plaintiff seeks, is but eighteen years of age. She lives with her parents. On Monday, Feb. 19th, a license was issued for the marriage of the couple. The father of the girl was present and gave his consent. The plaintiff says the wedding has not yet taken place, and on Feb. 26th the father absolutely refused to permit his daughter to marry the plaintiff. Bail for the defendant was fixed at $300.

Will Not Be A Candidate.

"I'll bet you the best silk hat obtainable that Capt. John Gaskin will not be the local conservative candidate at the coming elections for the commons," remarked a prominent conservative this morning. "I know all about the party wanting him, and perhaps he would make a good showing, but all the same he will not be in the field. The Montreal transportation company would rather him not do run, simply because the company is always looking for government favors, and in the event of the reform government being returned, what shape would the company be in with John Gaskin, in the opposition, representing Kingston? Besides R. M. Britton is the company's legal advisor, and I think on this ground alone the directors would solicit Capt. Gaskin not to become a candidate. Personally I would like to see him in the field, but I am willing to wager a new silk hat that he will not seek the suffrages of the electorate."

Was A Fine Act.

Halifax, N.S., Aug. 29.—In his address at the meeting last night in honor of the return of a portion of Halifax company of the first contingent and to raise funds to erect a memorial to the men fallen in South Africa, Sir Charles Tupper heartily endorsed the proposal to erect a monument to the fallen heroes, and said that he regarded the volunteering of the young Canadians to fight "side by side with the British army in South Africa as having done more toward the unity of the empire than any other action that could have been undertaken or accomplished." Sir Charles leaves at noon to-day for Cape Breton.

Child Music At Toronto.

A novel feature of Toronto fair is the singing of the "Baby's Own Soap people's trained choir," of children, from Montreal. They are prettily gowned, have good voices, are well led, and the music is most pleasing. They are quite an attraction, and visitors should look out for them, securing a copy of the "Baby's Own Book of Nursery Rhymes." This book, which has both words and music complete, will be sold at the fair, or if preferred, may be had for 10c. post paid from the publishers, the Albert toilet soap company, Montreal. It contains over thirty pieces.

The Corporation An Offender.

Now that the civic officials have taken the wise course of seeing that the streets are free of obstructions—that no man uses the streets for his benefit and summoning to court those who offend, we hope they will cause the corporation to appear before the magistrate for its gross and flagrant breach of the law, in throwing several loads of huge flat rocks on the boulevard on Brock street, opposite Brock street Methodist church, and leaving them there for a month past to the damage of the boulevard and a danger to the public.

Had A Close Call.

St. John's, Nfld., Aug. 29.—Dr. Grenfell, superintendent of the Deep Sea on to Labrador fishermen, who arrived here to-day, reports that a large four masted trans-Atlantic passenger steamer narrowly escaped becoming a total wreck in a fog in the straits of Belle Isle within a few miles of the point where the British steamer Scotsman was wrecked on Sept. 23rd last. Northern Labrador is free of ice and the fisheries show decided improvement.

Benefit To John L. Sullivan.

New York, Aug. 29.—A grand testimonial to John L. Sullivan, exchampion prize fighter, will be held at the Madison Square garden this evening. The affair promises to be the most elaborate of its kind ever known. Sporting men in all walks of life have interested themselves in it, and the idea of gaining for the "big fellow," a sum which will keep him in comfort for the remainder of his days seems likely to be realized.

Compliments are very acceptable, and thanks cheer the publisher, but cold cash is required to live upon and pay a small army of workers. This is the class of customer the publisher has to deal with six days in a week.

A KINGSTONIAN'S SUCCESS

Bright Young Man Whose Talents Are Fully Recognized.

Richard T. Conley, son of the Thomas Conley, this city, for upwards of two years manager of the Davenport, branch of the Pittsburg plate glass company, has resigned his position and goes to Milwaukee. He was last week called to headquarters of the company and instructed as to his succession. The company has purchased the Lugo paint factory at Milwaukee and Mr. Conley is to resume management of the plant, that of the James Paint company, the third largest paint works in America, is to be enlarged and the Pittsburg plate glass company will add plate glass to it as a specialty. At present the paint works supplies twelve branch houses in different parts of the United States, and the number is to be increased. In mentioning his departure from Davenport, a newspaper of that place intimates that "Mr. Conley's removal has brought the most flattering letters from the trade in all parts of his territory. Here in Davenport, where he was best and personally known the regret at his removal is general. This move means a flattering promotion to Mr. Conley, and to that extent there is gratification to his many friends, but it is, nevertheless, with regret that they witness the change. During the time Mr. Conley has made Davenport his home he has earned the respect of all who know him, on the reputation of being a thorough going hustling young business man. Mr. Conley will take Mr. Neville as his private secretary from his well-organized force in this city."

The glass warehouse at Milwaukee, over which Mr. Conley will preside, is four feet long and seventy-five feet wide. The paint factory is 80x150 ft., three stories, and employs over 200 workmen. There is an office staff of twenty-five. Mr. Conley's many Kingston friends will learn with pleasure his success and join heartily in congratulations. He is a fair example of the energetic young business men Kingston sends forth, a credit to the city.

Come to Kingston fair.
