BRITISH WAR OFFICE.

The change that has been long expected in the British war office is said to have been already decided upon. Lord Wolseley, as commander-in-chief of the army, retires and gives place to Lord Roberts. There is nothing forced in the change. One man simply recedes from office, on the completion of his term, and is succeeded by another, the next senior in rank and length of service.

In a sense the retirement of Lord Wolseley is to be regretted. For many years he was the ideal of the army. He had a brilliant career, suffering an occasional reverse but generally succeeding with his campaigns and enjoying the confidence of the British people to a remarkable degree. He was given the highest appointment as a reward for his most distinguishing work, and if he has lost in prestige during the African war it is because he has been, in some measure, handicapped by the helpless men who have represented the government. The war office has reflected too much of the ease of the social world, and its subordinates have been living too much upon the memories of the past. The routine of the service has been performed, but in a perfunctory manner. A crisis betrayed the weakness of the whole outfit, and Wolseley, as its head, has suffered the more severely. Still he will carry into retirement the gratitude of the nation, which he served so well in his palmy days.

Lord Roberts is the man of the hour. He has demonstrated his wisdom, his sagacity, his capacity to rule. He has had an object lesson in the African campaign. He knows what is needed to put the army in the best form, and to meet modern conditions. He has the will to command what the situation suggests, and he will be given the power to carry his ideas into effect. What the war office requires is a complete cleaning out. All the evidences of fossilism should go, and this cannot be so long as there is around and about it an official who is simply playing the soldier. The men who enter the army henceforth, as officers, should be as devoted as Tommy Atkins to the duties of the service; and Lord Roberts will bring about this reform if any man can. Lord Kitchener may not be available for the war office at present, but if he can be allied with Roberts the army will take on a new aspect, and the members of it will be distinguished for their military prowess and for nothing else.

NO NEED FOR ALARM.

The New York Sun is delighted to mass certain statements of the English press in respect to Britain's army and navy. It is such a bitter of the old land that it is pleased to quote anything which has a tendency to reflect upon it and indicate its weakness.

The failure of the 30,000 troops that were reviewed recently at Aldershot, to come up to Gen. Moore's idea of fitness for service, suggests that England is in a bad way, and that the French, in fulfilment of a long-cherished desire, may now, or in the near future, make a successful attack on England. Of course the force at Aldershot was not all the country ha at its command, but it represents, in the information of the Sun, nearly all the regulars, and if they were inefficient what can be said of the militia and volunteers?

Nor is there, in the opinion of the Sun, any special cause for feeling that the situation will be changed by the close of the South African war. Of the 204,000 troops which have been sent to it, 71,000 belong to the army reserve, 24,000 to the militia, and 20,000 to the yeomanry. The time expired, those that replace the men sent to China from India and the coaling stations, the invalided and dead, reduce the fighting force to 61,000, and the whole of it may be required, after the campaign is over, to restore order and government in the Transvaal.

So that England, according to the critics is at the mercy of France, and is in great danger of attack at any time. Engineering has pronounced the British Channel fleet incompetently manned in the engineer department, and the National Review has it that the French have had at Cherbourg and Brest a better equipped navy, one that is modernized in every respect. And finally Admiral Gervais of the French navy has specially studied the "task of directing the combined French squadrons in the event of war with England, and has made himself with the capacity of the ships and officers under his control." And the Sun has it, that there is not a British officer who is equal to the emergency.

Against all this talk are the reflections, (1) that there is absolutely no limit to the fighting power of England; (2) that if the South Africa army melts away it can be replaced by another quite as large; (3) that the criticism of the Aldershot troops by Gen. Moore dealt with men who were out for a lark rather than for serious work; (4) that England has the men and the money, and that she can mobilize her forces as quickly as any of the power; (5) that there has been no recent occasion on which the French soldiers have been submitted to the test of the British soldiery, and that when this test occurs it may be found quite as trying; (6) that in China the British soldiers are the best of the allied forces, and that next to them stand the Americans with their notoriously weak equipment and lack of experience; (7) that though England has some old war ships, and that some of them may have been in the British channel in July, she has also the largest and the best navy, and that Seymour and Beresford, or a dozen others, are as able to manouvre it as Admiral Gervais, who is the Sun's special war god.

Some people are never happy except when they are in a panicky state, and because these are sure that France will attack England, very soon, it does not follow that all others must become excited. The British government has been asked about the defences of England, in the event of a possible attack, and it has simply intimated that an assault is not expected, and that when it is made there will be no doubt as to the result.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Chamberlain has put it on record that Tupper's preferential trade scheme is impossible. And Tupper says that Chamberlain is his friend.

Toronto is grieving because the Connée act is making it difficult to go into the electric lighting business on its own count. But it had the opportunity to act before the Connee bill was passed, and let it pass.

Hon. Mr. Gibson, of Hamilton, is prognosticating the success of the liberals in the next elections. But it's work, not talk, that is going to win. It's pretty nearly time that all the active politicians were sawing wood.

Sir Adolphe Caron wants it understood that he is not going to desert Three Rivers. But Three Rivers is very likely to desert Sir Adolphe. If he can find a political lodgment any other place he had better accept it.

The socialists and single taxers predominated at the independent convention in Toronto, for the formation of a new political party. They presume to be the dictators "in all future elections," but one experiment may be sufficient.

Dr. Ryerson and Mr. Burdett-Coutts are having it out in regard to the hospital management of the South African war. Burdett-Coutts is alleged to be a romancer, with a tendency to display the result of his early training in ward politics in Philadelphia. This from the Red Cross man is a squelcher.

The Brockville Times declares that the nomination of William Smith in South Ontario "is a bad blunder. "Better," says our contemporary, "lose than win with a man whose political record is smirched as Smith's is." The Times does not believe that the election of a bad man will lead to his purification.

The Aldershot review appears to have been faulty in that the officers and men could not get rid of the idea that they were only in a sham fight, and they did not extend, run to cover, and seek concealment as in actual war. Gen. Moore, the commander, may be somewhat exacting, but he is in earnest all the same.

Frank Oliver, journalist, and an independent liberal, has sent to his constituents a comparison of conditions which exist now in the North West with the conditions which existed four years ago, and the exhibit is a tribute to the efficiency of liberal rule. Every settler who understands what has been done for him must vote liberal.

The Montreal Gazette resents the imputation of the Catholic Register, that the Protestant religion is responsible for non-church going and Sabbath desecration. Montreal is a Catholic city, and it has several Sunday entertainments to one in Toronto, to say nothing of visiting, bicycling, ball playing, and excursioning. Against these the Catholic clergy have spoken repeatedly. Sect and creed are not a guarantee of any man's morality.

'Twas Due To The Charm.

T. J. Wright, Frontenac street, claims credit for winning for Corpl. G. G. Hulme, Belleville, member of "D" company, first Canadian contingent, the gold watch offered by a Belleville lady to the first Canadian planting the union jack over Pretoria jail. Before leaving Canada Mr. Wright presented Corpl. Hulme with a mascot in the form of a rabbit foot. Mr. Wright says there is a dark secret about the obtaining of the rabbit foot, something mysterious which makes the foot, which is in the form of a watch charm, very lucky. The charm was not given outright; it was loaned during the term of the war, and Corpl. Hulme promised to return it safe and sound. He was told it would secure for him the coveted gold watch, and sure enough the prophesy came true. It was also asserted that the rabbit foot possessed the power of turning aside bullets of the enemy, Mr. Wright wore the charm all through the north-west rebellion and came out unscathed. It would appear from recent events that the charm has not lost its cunning."

A SUPERB EXHIBITION.

First Round Was a Display of Science on Both Sides.

New York, Aug. 31.—The long promised and long talked of meeting between James J. Corbett and Charles ("Kid") McCoy under the auspices of the Twentieth Century club at Madison square garden came off last night. Corbett proved the best man inside of the fifth round.

Experts declare that it was the cleverest exhibition ever witnessed in the ring. The men stepped into the squared circle at the time called for. Corbett was thought to prove the stronger as well as the cleverer and it was through his superb feinting and heavy slugging that he put McCoy down and out.

In the opening round McCoy showed up to much better advantage than Corbett. McCoy seemed very confident, though careful, while Corbett was nervous and ill at ease. McCoy started out with his usual coolness, but Corbett was fidgety. The entire round was taken up with the cleverest kind of feinting and sparring on McCoy's part, while Corbett's work left very little to be desired.

In the fourth at times Corbett stopped his scientific work and resorted to slugging tactics, which proved very effective. McCoy was forced to clinch and it was then seen that Corbett was surely getting the upper hand. McCoy had to break ground frequently and after the bell had sent them to their corners, while both men showed signs of fatigue, McCoy was certainly the more weary.

In the fifth and concluding round Corbett forced McCoy into the former's corner, where the "Kid" kept blocking and sparring for an opening to get out. Corbett swung for the head, but McCoy ducked underneath it very cleverly and jumped to the centre of the ring. Jim rushed him across the floor of the ring and by clever work forced McCoy back into the corner again, where he sent right and left to the "Kid's" head. This was the beginning of McCoy's undoing.

Corbett went at him, using both hands, swinging and jabbing and occasionally uppercutting with the left. McCoy's defense availed him little against this onslaught, and Corbett soon had the "Kid" at his mercy.

McCoy saw that he was no longer able to ward off the big fellow's blows and threw his arms across his face, holding his head down in hopes of saving himself from a knockout punch. Corbett relentlessly showered lefts and rights which straightened McCoy up and then Jim swung a left which crashed into McCoy's body. McCoy doubled up and in doing so held Corbett's left glove with his right arm.

Corbett then drove McCoy away from him with a right over the heart and as the "Kid" went back staggering Jim leaped after him, landing another left smash in the same spot, and the "Kid" dropped to the floor. McCoy bravely tried to get up but the bell had struck the time, and while he made frantic endeavors to get up Charlie White counted off the ominous ten seconds. By an almost superhuman effort McCoy stood up after he had been counted out, but he was dazed and, the referee had to push him towards his corner, where his seconds took McCoy in hand.

Inside of two minutes McCoy walked out of the ring, closely surrounded by his handlers.

Meanwhile Corbett's friends had jumped into the ring and surrounding the big fellow, showered congratulations upon him when he was announced the winner.

The men battled for sixty per cent. of the gross receipts, which was to be divided, seventy-five per cent. to the winner and twenty-five per cent. to the loser. It is estimated that there was about $50,000 in the house, so that Corbett will receive in the neighborhood of $18,000 and McCoy about $6,000.

THE CONVENTION IS OVER.

Electrical Delegates Highly Pleased With Kingston's Hospitality.

The electrical convention held its closing session in the council chamber this morning. These officers for the ensuing two years were re-elected: President, A. A. Dion, Ottawa; first vice-president, E. F. Cary, St Catharines; second vice-president, P. G. Gossler, Montreal; secretary-treasurer, C. H. Mortimer, Toronto. This executive committee was elected: A. R. Smith and J. J. Wright, Toronto; Ormond Higman, D. R. Street, Ottawa; B. F. Revsor, Lindsay; W. H. Brown, J. W. Cafup, Montreal; F. W. Simmons, Kingston; John Yule, Guelph; Edward Slade, Quebec.

A resolution of hearty thanks was passed to John Yule, Guelph, for his services on the legislative committee on behalf of the electrical companies of Ontario. Thanks was also expressed to the gentlemen who read papers to the convention.

President Dion, in addressing the convention, said it was gratifying to him to see such a large attendance under the circumstances. The papers read were good, and not so very much was lost by adjourning the convention. He had desired to retire from the presidency, but had again accepted the office at the solicitation of many of his friends. Mr. Dion is a most popular man, and the association did well to re-elect him for he has fulfilled the duties of a presiding officer in a highly creditable manner.

John Yule, Guelph, moved a vote of thanks to the corporation and the people of Kingston for the kind treatment bestowed upon the delegates. Mr. Yule referred to Kingston as a most admirable place for the holding of conventions on account of its splendid location, its cool breezes, and the hospitable character of its citizens generally. The electrical convention had never been so well entertained in the ten years it has existed, and the present meeting would always be a pleasant spot in the delegates' memory. The motion was carried unanimously.

W. H. Browne moved a motion of adjournament, as "the city's hospitality has robbed the delegates of so much of their usual sleep." This motion was carried, and the convention concluded at half past eleven o'clock.

A paper on the average power used during a day on street railway, was read yesterday afternoon by Mr. Blair, of Quebec, to the delegates who went down the river on the steamer New York.

This afternoon many of the delegates visited the Kingston penitentiary; a special car being provided by the street railway company. Most of them returned this afternoon to their homes.

Last night the city hall was a lively place. Hundreds were there to see the fine electrical exhibit. The Packard orchestra gave a pleasing concert for an hour.

WAR UNITES TWO BROTHERS.

How John Smith, of Woodstock, Discovered a Relative.

Woodstock, Ont., Aug. 31.—Two members of the Canadian regiment of infantry returned to their homes here today, and were met and escorted from the station by 6,000 cheering persons. Corpl. John Smith has a story of great interest to tell. He was wounded at the battle of Paardeberg so seriously that several times it was reported that he had died. For ten weeks he lay in the hospital at Wynburg with another man of the name of Smith in the bed beside him. When sufficiently recovered he was invalided to England, and had the opportunity of visiting his home in that country, which he had left seventeen years before he came to Canada. While he was there some letters were received from Smith which revealed the fact that the Smith he had been with in the hospital was a younger brother, whom he had not seen since coming to the continent. Both had been in such agony at the time that they had not taken the trouble to enquire into each other's history.

Death Of Thomas Bradburn.

Peterboro, Ont., Aug. 31.—Thomas Bradburn, aged eighty-one, died yesterday. He had been a resident since the early forties. He was the largest individual real estate owner in the municipality, which position he held at the time of his death. He was born in Cavan township, near Peterboro. He was twice married. A widow and five children survive. Deceased was essentially a business man—one who neither sought nor desired to be identified with municipal affairs, or those of the larger political arenas. The cause of his death is attributed to heart trouble, from which affliction the deceased had suffered at intervals during the last four years, being compelled to take a number of trips from town for the benefit of his health.

D. C. Fraser, M.P., was nominated in Guysboro.
