OUR ALLIED INTERESTS.

HENRY FOLGER RESPONDS TO THIS TOAST

At the Electrical Banquet—Natural Instinct to Stand by Our Blood in the Hour of Peril—The True Sentiment of the People of the United States.

The address of H. M. Folger at the electrical banquet last night on "Allied Interests," was so good that we produce it in its entirety. Mr. Folger said:

"I am delighted to be present to-night, and if my ability equalled my appreciation, I would respond with scintillating sincerity to the electric touch of good fellowship of this assemblage, representing light, warmth and power. I like the word "Allies." It is significant, and in abler hands than mine could be made much of. All things reach for alliance. All through nature each thing is looking for alliance with all. A profound thinker has said 'all are needed by each one. Nothing is good or fair alone. If you are going the right way, nature will do your chores for you. Hitch your waggon to a star.' Gentlemen of your profession are confirming this truth, and following this advice by making electricity the chief servant in the household of the world. It runs our errands, warms and lights our homes, cooks our food; transports us from one place to another the very aristocracy of locomotion.

"I infer that the sentiment involved in the toast to which I have the honor to respond pertains to the alliance existing between the grand old mother of nations and her strongest daughter, and will confine myself to it. It could have no deeper meaning, for it is an alliance written in blood and sealed by the Anglo-Saxon heart, outranking and outlasting treaty or understanding of ministers or cabinets. It matters not under what government that heart may beat, in rhymes to the same inspiration and sentiment over the whole wide world, moved by the same tradition, true to the same instinct, having the spirit of right and justice which has made the saying 'British fair play' the love of courage and reliability that inspires a radical mob to cheer the life-long tory, lord Elgin, saying 'There goes old Elgin. Cheer him. He never ratted.' The attribute that inspired Madame de Stael to write, 'It irritates Napoleon to think that the English can succeed and be honest.' These are the qualities which form the concrete and the bond that hold us brothers of the blood. 'We, too, said Whittier, 'are heirs of Runnymede.' We, too, are joint heirs of Shakespeare, joint heirs of all the good our English forebears have won, of all the wrongs they have suffered.

"In the Spanish war the first killed in action were two brothers from Ontario. Many of those killed in South Africa were American born. This is not the work and understanding of the government, but the natural instinct to stand by our blood in the hour of peril. Let any Anglo-Saxon community get its back to the wall fighting for its life, and the world will see its relatives far and near rallying to the rescue. It is a pleasing fancy that perhaps the immortal bard, when penning the lines, 'Those friends thou hast and their adoption tried, grapple them to thy soul with hooks of steel,' may with prophetic vision have seen the Atlantic cable as the band of steel binding mother and daughter like the ligaments of the Siamese twins making life and death to both as one. I have said so much of kindred qualities that perhaps you will give me license to crow gently of my own country. Leaving behind all former achievements, the United States has sprung into the arena of nations full armed like the goddess of wisdom from the head of Zeus. Two years ago America's position toward the policy of the world was not considered. Now there is no cabinet that does not recognize her power and influence.

"The sentiment I have voiced here to-night is entertained by my people for 'kin beyond the sea,' and you must not be misled by extracts from American newspapers seemingly contradicting this. Investigation will usually show that they emanate from alien hearts. I believe the Anglo-Saxon everywhere responds to the sentiment of the authoress 'What is Braver than the Lion, who recently wrote in a private letter 'My eyes are always fixed upon the glorious vision of the union of the Anglo-Saxon races who, holding the pathway of the sea should hold the world's fate in the hollow of her hands'; and I believe when the lion raises his rallying voice the whelps will respond from the farthermost corners of the earth, and I like those lines picturing that:

"'The night is full of darkness and doubt,
The stars are dim and the hunters out;
The waves begin to wrestle and moan
The fish startles by his shore alone
And winds to the bounds of earth and sea
First low notes of the thunder to be
Then east and west through the vasts mass grim,
The whelps of the lion answer him.'"

Fosterville Cullings.

Fosterville, Aug. 27.—Farmers are finished harvesting and report a good crop. School reopened on Monday with a fair attendance. Misses Katie and Flossie Martin, Cushendall, have returned home after spending a couple of weeks at their uncle's, P. Murphy. A number from here intend taking in Father Carey's picnic at Brewer's Mills on Wednesday. Mumps are prevalent in this vicinity. W. Murphy is spending a few days with his mother here. Miss M. Murphy is visiting at Sidney's Bay. A number from here attended the Roman Catholic picnic at Foxboro on Saturday last. Miss Foxton and C. Murphy, Brockville; Miss A. and M. Joyce, Deseronto, Mrs. M. Doyle, Rochester, N.Y.; Mr. La Fountaine, Smith's Falls; Miss Hazelton, Westport—P. Milne, Kingston; Mrs. W. H. Fleming, Chafley's Locks.

THE ARIZONA TEWKSBURYS.

Engineered the Most Desperate Herd Feud in the South-West.

Capt. McClintock in Ainslee's.

The most desperate feud ever known in the south-west grew out of an attempt to graze sheep in Pleasant Valley, in upper Tonto Basin, Arizona. The noted Tewksbury brothers undertook the engineering of the operation. They succeeded. But when the sheep side of the controversy had forged to the front thirty-two men were dead. The casualties were not incurred in pitched engagements. The fighting continued during a year or longer in the late eighties. It was done in Kentucky vendetta style. Most of the men who "went over the divide" were ambushed on mountain trails and shot in the back. A Tewksbury household was besieged by a dozen members of the Graham faction, the opposing party. When an old man, Al. Rose, went out in the early morning for a pail of water, he was shot and killed within fifty feet of the doorstep. And there the corpse lay unburied for three days in the full glare of the summer sun. The men within the house, stolid in their suffering from thirst, appealed for permission to bury their dead. It was denied them. This is only a fair sample of the atrocities that marked the feud. The Pleasant Valley war ended only when all the surviving combatants together with most of their neighbors, were gathered up and taken to Prescott by a squadron of Yavapai county officers, headed by sheriff William O'Neil, the same "Buckey" O'Neil who was killed at San Juan Hill leading his troop of Rough Riders. A soothing influence was also exerted by sheriff Commodore Owens, of Apache county, who caught four of the sheep faction in a house at Holbrook. The four broke from the house by four different routes, through doors and windows, hoping to pot the sheriff by a divided fire. All alone he calmly started to pump his Winchester rifle, apparently heedless of the rain of lead. When he had finished the four were dead, and the cool little sheriff had not a scratch. At the last only a single male of the Graham blood remained alive. He gave up the fight and fled to the Salt River Valley, where he married and settled down to a quiet farm life. While marketing his first crop of grain he was shot from ambush on the road to Tempe. The deed was done by two unmasked horsemen, identified by two young women as Edward Tewksbury and his right hand man John Rhodes. The latter was rather summarily discharged from custody by a justice of the peace, after a narrow escape from death at the hands of Graham's young widow, who had brought her husband's trusty revolver to the court room. Tewksbury was found guilty of murder in the first degree. But a sharp lawyer found that the clerk of the court had failed to enter the plea of "not guilty," though the notes of the court stenographer showed the plea had been made in proper form; so the case was twice retried with hung juries and finally the prisoner was turned loose. He is a constable at Globe Camp.

Collins Bay Cullings.

Collins Bay, Aug. 30.—A quiet wedding took place at the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. B. Reill, on Tuesday evening, when Miss Jennie McMaster, of Collins Bay, was united in marriage to Pearl Reill, of Michigan. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Shore. The newly married couple started for their home Thursday morning. Many friends wish them a safe life's journey and many years of happiness. Mrs. Sutherland and family, who were spending the summer at John Purdy's, have started for their home in Texas. W. Bell and daughter, Alice, have returned after visiting in Deseronto. A number of our young people attended the garden party at Sharpton. Miss Marion, of Buffalo, and Miss O'Connor, from Oswego, are visiting at Mr. Nugent's. Mr. Chown and family are spending a few weeks at J. Purdy's. Mr. Henstridge and family are visiting at Mr. Bell's. D. Clement and daughter, of Deseronto, spent a week at B. Clement's. Miss Laura Clement is visiting in Kingston. Mrs. Wood, visiting her sister, Mrs. Smith, has returned to Kingston.

A Rattled Lion.

It is not only human pedestrians who fear the bicycle. According to September Cassell's Little Folks, it strikes terror into the heart of the king of beasts. Few men can ever have been placed in the awful situation in which A. B. Lloyd, the African missionary, once found himself. He was "hiking" on the main road, five feet wide, leading to Uganda, when, turning a corner suddenly, he saw, not twenty yards ahead, a big lion crouching down and facing him. To his left was a steep rock, twenty feet high, hard if not impossible to climb. To his right lay a ravine a hundred feet deep, at the bottom of which ran a river. He had to make up his mind what to do right there. Taking his courage in both hands, like the brave man he was, he determined to "ride straight on." Ringing his bell and shouting at the pitch of his voice, he drove on at his fastest. The lion, dismayed at this weird figure, gave one hideous yell and turned tail, flying panic-stricken into the jungle.

From The Colt.

This morning James T. Sutherland received a short epistle from Sergt. Fred Valapoort, C.M.R. It was penned at Valapoort, July 19th. The writer enclosed as souvenirs, two photographs of little Dutch girls which he took from the house of a rebel before his troop set fire to and burned it. The Canadian mounted rifles had passed through some hard fighting, and all were thankful they has escaped so luckily. The column expected to move the day after the letter was written; Middleberg was the prospective destination, along the line of the Delagoa Bay railroad. More hard fighting was looked for, as the Boers are desperate and fight hard, but all to no avail, as they had to give way when the British moved down upon them. The writer was well and hearty at the time of writing; he was still troop sergeant. The men had received a new issue of clothing and were feeling first rite and looked civilized again.

The Messrs. Easterbrook with their new staff of employees expect to start on their voyage to South Africa on Wednesday next. They will leave Tweed on the noon train for Montreal, and take the SS. Tunisian the following morning for Liverpool.

There died at Point Petre, on 14th August, Thomas Wall, aged seventy-three years. The disease which took him away was of a complicated nature, ending with Bright's disease. A widow, five daughters and two sons mourn—His demise is rendered more sad in the absence of a son in South Africa, with the first Canadian contingent.

CALLED AWAY SUDDENLY.

Hand of Death Has Laid Its Grasp Upon the Aged.

The community has again been pained and shocked by the sudden calling of Mrs. Herchmer, of Earl street, one of the best known and best liked of Kingston's lady residents. She was widow of that popular Kingston officer, Lieut.-Col. William Herchmer, of the north-west mounted police, and made this city her home at his death seven years ago. Of a cheerful and generous disposition she was a welcome addition to church, charitable and social ranks, and will be sincerely mourned.

Yesterday Mrs. Herchmer complained of her heart's irregular and oppressive action, but no alarm was felt till she was heard moaning about nine o'clock in the evening, the result of a sudden convulsion. She was in great pain, which Rev. G. L. Starr, just returned from his mother's funeral, relieved by sedatives, pending the arrival of a physician. The latter left the patient at ten o'clock, with every prospect of continued quietude for the night. A few minutes later the nurse saw a sudden change, and Mr. Starr hurried to the room, only to see the last breathing. No thought of immediate danger had been entertained. Mrs. Herchmer left two daughters, who have a warm place in the regard of a host of acquaintances, who feel that they cannot comfort them too deeply. Miss Herchmer was camping near Newboro, on the Rideau, and cannot return before evening. Mrs. Herchmer was formerly Miss Rose, of Morrisburg. Her sister, Mrs. J. P. Gildersleeve, is at Vancouver. The funeral will be private.

'Twas A Good Joke.

A laughable incident occurred at the electrical banquet last night. R. E. T. Pringle, Montreal, left the festive table, and borrowed the tunic and cap of policeman Arnie. The banqueters were suddenly surprised and alarmed to see two members who had been chatting together all the while, jump to their feet in great anger. A fight seemed imminent, and generalissimo Cary rushed to part the combatants. At this juncture "policeman" Pringle sprang into the room, flourishing his club. The "combatants" ceased wrangling, and the crowd laughed for five minutes at the huge joke played upon them.

A Magnificent Castle.

George C. Boldt, New York, will build a castle on Heart island, which will cost $400,000. The building will be constructed of stone, on the Italian renaissance style of architecture, four stories high, with four small towers forty feet high, grouped about two larger towers sixty feet high, while the main tower will rise to a height of seventy-five feet, forming the main figure of the surrounding turrets. The interior of the house will consist of fifty sleeping rooms en suite. The castle will be completed by the summer of 1902.

COMMERCIAL MATTERS.

What is Going on in the Business World—The Market News.

The wheat crop of France this year will be very short.

American producers pay $200,000,000 annually to foreign ship owners.

The Argentine Republic's crop of tobacco this year will amount to 3,600,000 kilos.

British locomotive firms have work on hand to keep them four years constantly employed.

The gold output of New Zealand for the month of July amounted to 39,678 ounces, of the value of £151,853.

The Woodside cotton mills, to work 10,000 spindles and 3,500 operatives, will be located at Gainesville, Ga.

Total cash holdings in the National banks of the United States have increased $8,020,000 since a year ago.

According to Smyrna advices this year's fig crop is estimated at 60,000 loads, as against 48,000 loads in 1899.

The coming crop of wine in France is now estimated at 1,457,500,000 gallons as against 1,272,000,000 gallons last season.

Sugars are very firm and an advance is expected. The output from the refineries is large and the demand for autumn preserving continues strong.

Currants will be dear this season. Uncleaned will cost 9½c.; at present old crop cleaned sell at 9c. There will be an advance of fully three-quarter cents a pound.

Large mica deposits have been discovered in the northern part of the state of Maine. They are reported to be very rich, and speculators are rushing to the scene.

The Valencia raisin market is much excited, as the crop this year is decidedly below the average. The first new crop of Valencias to arrive will be absorbed in a few days. Sultanas will cost 10½c., 11c., and 11½c. here.

Latest advices received from Hawaii on sugar say that the indications are that the coming crop will be about 50,000 tons larger than the present crop, the estimates of the yield being 305,000 short tons.

Alexander McNeil, Windsor, Ont., one of the largest grape growers in Essex county, says that the crop will be far below the average this season. The severe weather in February, 1899, and again last spring injured the vines badly.

The new crop of filberts promises to be later in maturing than in previous years. The crop is generally reported to be from ten to twelve per cent larger than the previous one, but owing to the entire exhaustion of the supply of old crop in Sicily and the good demand from Germany and other consuming markets the price for new goods instead of declining, as generally expected, has advanced.

TURKEY'S RULER

Celebrates Twenty-Fifth Anniversary of Accession.

Constantinople, Turkey, Aug. 31.—Sultan Abdul Hamid has ordered for to-day a grand jubilee, in celebration of the twenth-fifth anniversary of his accession to the throne. Great preparations have been made to give due honor to the auspicious occasion. All the buildings along both sides of the Bosphorus, which is twenty miles long and varies from one to one-half miles in breadth, are gaily decorated, and to-night will undergo magnificent electrical illuminating. Thousands of electric lamps are strung along this much-used water-way, and when lighted will present an imposing spectacle. Grand services are being held in the mosques and temples and will continue to-night. This afternoon a magnificent banquet is spread for vast crowds of people. Deputations from all the Mussulman communities in the world are present, including the shah, khedive and several of the rulers of the Balkan states. The sultan intends also to inaugurate some great works for the public good. Among these are a new water supply for this city and a university. The poets and historians of the empire will contribute with recounts of the sultan's pious works and the great things he has accomplished. These will be translated into all languages and distributed throughout the world.

Heard From Her Son.

Mrs. Bryant, 569 Princess street, has received a letter from her son, William, bandsman in the Royal Fusiliers, now serving in South Africa. The letter was written at Pretoria on July 20th. They had been on the march for two months. William had not received any mail in that time. At Pretoria he got eighteen letters and sixteen papers. William was well at the time of writing, the force was going on the march again. He says there are some Boers giving trouble, but he thinks they will soon give in. Mrs. Bryant sent a cake to William on February 27th. He got it about two months ago. He enjoyed it very much. The cake weighed six and a half pounds. William hopes the Fusiliers will soon go back to England. Where they are is a dreadful country to march through. He is under lord Roberts.

Toronto Exhibitors Coming.

T. D. Minnes, secretary of the Kingston fair association, returned this morning from Toronto, where he spent some days in the interests of the coming big fair here. He received many assurances from cattle exhibitors that they would come to Kingston with their stock. There is a dearth of good outside attractions at the Toronto fair, and secretary Minnes was unable to secure any. He will seek elsewhere for any he might want in addition to those already booked.

Letter From Pte. Foden.

James Foden, 14th regimental band, yesterday received a letter from his son, Pte. William Foden, first Canadian contingent. The letter was written at Springs, where the regiment was still performing garrison duty. The writer had very little to say, beyond the fact that the Kingston boys were all well. He mentions only four, however, as being with the regiment—himself, Ault, Carruthers and Swan, but fails to say where the others are.

Change Of Routes.

D. J. Walker, mail clerk on the C.O.R., has been transferred to a western route with headquarters at Toronto and a substantial increase of salary. Mr. Walker was a favorite with all and his departure from Trenton is much regretted. His position will be taken by J. T. Wilson. Ernest Knox, brother of Mrs. G. H. Allen, has been taken on as mail clerk on the C.O.R. route.
