Montreal Wants More of It!

Room 216, New York Life Building, Montreal, May 30th, 1900.

Messrs. Egyptian Rheumatic Oil Co., Halifax, N.S.:

Gentlemen,—Some weeks ago I received through the mail a sample bottle of your Oil, with a request that I use it and report to you on results.

I now take pleasure in telling you that, while at the time I received this remedy, I was in the care of my doctor, and following a course of treatment prescribed by him, with beneficial results, still I have since used your Oil occasionally as a liniment and find that it has a very soothing and healing effect. I have made enquiries at several druggists to obtain another bottle, but they do not seem to know of it. Can you tell me where to get it in Montreal?

Yours truly,
B. W. EVANS.

LYING ABOUT MEN.

What is the use of any paper lying about a man when the evidence is forthcoming that what it says about him is not correct? The Huntingdon Gleaner is presumably liberal, but it has been so long doing the work of the conservative party, and doing it without a break, as to have been classified with the opposition papers. The Gleaner, then, put in circulation a report to the effect that Julius Scriver, who has been a member of parliament since confederation, is about to retire from public life because he "deplores the course of the present government," in its management of the finances, and because he has failed to induce it to listen to his representations.

Mr. Scriver, however, tells a different story. He writes a letter to his political friends and says that he desires rest because his health has been broken and because parliamentary life, to one of his advanced years, is exceedingly trying. There is not a word about his alleged differences with the government, and had he seen the Gleaner's article before he wrote his message would no doubt have taken occasion to say that there was no truth in it.

Every change in the liberal side, or every prospective change, is announced to be the outcome of a dispute or difference with the goverament. As well might the liberal press declare that John Ross Robertson is leaving parliament because he is disgusted with his leader and associates, and that Tupper and his friends are trying to keep Sir Adolphe Caron out of the house because he will not tolerate their jobbery!

LESSON IN A TRAGEDY.

A Hamilton tragedy emphasizes a condition of things which is growing and fraught with serious effects upon the rising generation. A young man named Pearson, not of good family and good prospects in life, made the acquaintance of a Miss Griffin, at the public park, and at once they they became infatuated with each other. He was twenty and she was seventeen. They met frequently. They talked of marriage, and because his income was not sufficient to warrant the proceeding, he proposed that both should die. On the way home from a dance he shot her twice, and then, as she fell dead, instead of shooting himself, as he says he was to do, he threw the revolver over the fence, and sought assistance in removing the dead girl from the road side.

Kingston had a somewhat similar case not so long ago. A young woman, against the will of her parents, continued her courting with one who had not the prospects in life which justified matrimony, and in her distress of mind and soul she resorted to drugs and committed suicide. There is too much of this chance acquaintance with the young people and too much indiscreet and indiscriminate love for their good. They are too free in their advances, and too precipitate in their engagements.

Young men and maidens, in their teens, do not know their own minds fully, and they are not wise in aiming at marriage and its responsibilities. Meanwhile they are gadding about the streets, until very late hours, taking drives through the country, and indulging in other engagements which are open to question. For some of the mishaps which follow the parents or guardians are really to blame. They are not exercising the restraining influence which they possess. They are not doing their duty towards the boys and girls who are under their charge.

EPIDEMIC OF SUICIDE.

A perfect epidemic of suicide seems to prevail upon the other side. Many cases are expected from Greater New York, and many cases in which the attempt to take life is not successful.

The remarkable thing about it is the fact that the average suicide is a young man or a man that has not reached middle life. Occasionally the purpose is to end an existence which has been made intolerable by a series of misfortunes. The mind could not stand the shock of repeated adversity. Now and again one is carried to the point of self-destruction by overwhelming trouble. Again one has suffered so many disappointments in his search for renumerative employment as to have persuaded himself that the world has no further use for him.

But the larger class represent the men and sometimes the women, who have burned out life by unrestrained dissipations. Stephenson, early in his literary career, sketched the Suicide Club, of London, into which a couple of distinguished sports were initiated in one of their masquerades. The club's object was to provide the means of exit to those who were weary of life and had not the nerve to end it. Death came by the shuffle of cards, and by the members and the methods which the deal indicated. All were of one type; all were in the prime of life. There was little decency among them. "Some boasted of their disgraceful actions, the consequences of which had reduced them to seek refuge in death, and the others listened without disapproval."

Suicide is said to be due to insanity. No man, it is asserted, will take his life while in his senses. The influence is that he has been distracted or demented in the incidents of life, and it is to be feared the craze is produced too often by his excesses. The education of the age, so far as it applies to young men and women, is defective because it fails to show what the strain in any direction is sure to do in physical and mental wreckage. The tumult and excitement of a great city are wearing, but life would usually reach its allotted space were it developed and cared for properly.

EDITORIAL VIEWS.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's rallying cry is: "Union, peace, friendship and fraternity." Sir Charles Tupper's rallying cry is, "Disunion, discrimination, and racial differences." Which will you have?

A civic coal yard, for the benefit of the very poor, who cannot buy their fuel in large quantities, and who are likely to suffer by famine times, is suggested in Hamilton. If Hamilton could only bottle some of its summer heat it would not need any coal. The inventiveness of man has room for expansion in this direction.

Julius Scriver, "to prevent misapprehension," announces that his desire to leave public life is based on the condition of his health. But the conservative press will have it that he has differed with the government. They pay him a compliment, in refusing his word, which Mr. Scriver and his friends very much appreciate!

Mr. Foster is losing his memory, to put it mildly. At Brantford he said that the conservative government had appointed seventeen members of parliament to office in eighteen years. The Expositor prints a list of sixty names, and believes that it is not complete. Mr. Foster should go into retreat somewhere and revise his figures.

The Toronto News is not satisfied with the government's land policy. Doubtless. The News represents that form of government which gave the timber limits to its friends in large blocks of fifty miles square. The Laurier government has not remembered its supporters in this way, and, according to the News' philosophy, its policy has been a failure.

ENTERED INTO REST.

Death of Thomas B. Hawley, a Most Respected Citizen.

After being faithful over the few things on earth, Thomas B. Hawley, a well-known and esteemed citizen of Kingston, has been called to the rest above. His death occurred on Monday night at his late home, 109 Brock street. For some years Mr. Hawley suffered from a complication of diseases which medical skill could not overcome, and bore his sufferings patiently until death's angel summoned him to the realms of the blessed.

The late Mr. Hawley was of United Empire loyalist descent, and was born near Camden East sixty-nine years ago. For over twenty-five years he resided with his family in Kingston, where he was first connected with Chown & Cunningham's foundry. Then he was with W. J. Crothers, biscuit manufacturer, for some years, and then served eleven years as manager of Stroud's tea store on Princess street. For the past eight years, Mr. Hawley had been living in retirement on account of poor health.

Deceased married Miss Adelia M. Selleck, of Brighton, forty years ago, and she survives, together with four sons and one daughter, who are: T. E., local agent of the Parker dye works; T. W., Vancouver, B.C.; Harry, manager of Stroud's tea store, this city; William H., in the United States; Mrs. A. Traynor, Toronto. One brother of deceased, Sheldon S. Hawley, Troy, Ohio, and one sister, Mrs. P. Irish, Morven, Ont., also survive. In politics, Mr. Hawley was a staunch liberal, and in religion a Methodist, a member of Brock street church. He was also an active temperance worker. The funeral, which was private, took place this morning. Service at the house was conducted by Rev. T. C. Brown, and then the remains were taken to Cataraqui cemetery for burial.

Activity Resuming At Y.M.C.A.

Activities are being resumed around the Y.M.C.A. building, after the usual summer lull, and with the arrival of the new secretary and new physical director next week the work will assume full swing. A special meeting of the board of directors was held last evening, when, besides transacting a large amount of small detail business, it was decided to hold an opening reception to the young men of the city on Tuesday evening, Oct. 9th. Something attractive, probably a biograph, will be engaged and admission will be by ticket only. New furnaces are a necessity and several tenders for same were opened. After a long discussion a committee was empowered to settle the matter at once. The late secretary, W. J. F. Mallagh, intends to visit the city for a week or so and will be here for the reception of the new officials.

Will Marry Some Sweet Day.

The engagement is announced in Quebec of Arthur E. Scott to Miss Molly Ashe, daughter of the late commander Ashe, R.N.

A rumored engagement, causing interest in London, is that of the beautiful Miss Muriel Wilson to Lieut. Winston Churchill, son of the late lord Randolph Churchill.

The engagement is announced in Washington, D.C., of Miss Elsie Graham Bell, eldest daughter of Prof. Alex. Graham Bell, to Gilbert Hovey Grosvenor, son of Dr. Grosvenor, president of Amherst college, Mass.

The engagement is announced of Miss Bessie L. Rogers, only daughter of the late H. J. Rogers, M.D., of England, (army medical staff), to P. T. Allbutt, also of England, now of the bank of Montreal, St. John, N.B.

ONWARD, UPWARD SOCIETY.

Rev. J. Mackie's Address—The Prizes Given.

At the prize giving of the Onward Upward association on Tuesday evening at the Y. W. C. A. rooms on Wellington street, Rev. J. Mackie presided, and read the last chapter of Proverbs, which by the way might be hung up in our girls' department of the public schools, or at least the collegiate institute. He remarked on the beautiful description of a noble woman, a queen among women, a lady, "in her tongue the law of kindness," not ashamed to work, holding the distaff, having all her household well clothed and well fed, and standing at the door giving out to the needy with two hands open. Would that such women were more numerous. This life is not for pleasure only. Let us feel that even sweeping a mat is serving God, and let us modify the commonest tasks by doing them unto Him. These encouragements are given to us because many realize the true ideal of a woman's life peace, righteousness and sweetness. May these prizes be fresh incentives. In your home may it be noticed that you are living out your ideal. I know ladies who have members of this association in their service and value them highly and speak in the highest terms of the work done here.

Mr. Mackie kindly gave the prizes, and afterwards spoke, advising them not to take one step without asking guidance. If they were changing their situation to say "Lord, guide me." A standing vote of thanks was given to Mr. Mackie and the hope expressed that he would again address them. After prayer and singing the meeting separated.

The prize list is as follows: Advanced bible—Helen Watson, Mary Butland, Madeline Clarke. Simple bible—Helen Lindsay, Lizzie Curran, Eleanor Jardine. Three subjects—Helen Watson. Medals (for the years' work), Frances greaves; three years, Madeline Clarke and Eleanor Jardine. Long service prizes, for five years, Emma Woodman; four years, Frances Hargreaves and Jessie MacDonald; three years, Helen Lindsay and Mary Carleton, two and a-half years, Bella Brownlee and Helen Watson; two years, Alice Hobbs.

This paper was read at the meeting by Mrs. (Prof.) Marshall: "The Onward Upward association has been in existence for eighteen years. It is affiliated with the Y.W.C.A., but has a character of its own. There was a proposal to merge it in the Y.W.C.A., but the majority of the branches preferred that it should remain as it has done. Now let us hope that those who have worked will still go on improving and help to get others also. The daily reading of the scriptures must do good, and I think if time were properly utilized and the minutes saved, instead of being spent dawdling, the other subjects might be taken up. Great men are those who have worked, not those who have dilly dallied, either in the home or the street. I hope all who can will join and ask others.'

"Why our prize list is so small it is difficult to say. Perhaps the newspapers have been more interesting, and the war has taken up our attention, and Red Cross teas, etc. Five of the prizes are going to Middleville, where our old friend, Mae McKenzie, carried our Onward, Upward association. One goes to Mr. Mackie's young protegee at Battersea and the others in Kingston. We meet in the Y.W.C.A. rooms once a week in union with the Y.W.C.A. associates and do trust that our young friends will rally round us and make the work more and more interesting. 'Our Lord's ways are ways of pleasure and his paths are peace.'

"Thanks are due to the Y.W.C.A. of Queen's college for conducting the class once a month during the session and it is hoped that earnest souls among them will try and give out some of the inspiration they ought to receive in that noble educational centre. We also thank Mrs. MacCallum, president of the W.C.T.U. and to ladies of the musical club and others and we are sure that such work will bring its own reward. As Mrs. Penn-Lewis said 'The great love of Christ to us should be like a torrent constraining us to live unto Him.' Tuesday is out bible class night."

Against The Early Closing.

A Brock street grocer, who carries on a big business, was this morning discussing the proposed grocers' by-law. He didn't sign it, and says that many another progressive business man also refused to affix their names to the petition. One grocer, who has a large river trade, does more business between 6 p.m. and midnight than all the rest of the day. He has to keep his store open to receive orders from the passenger and freight boats that call here at night. He could not close at 7 p.m., for he couldn't get his orders in at that time. He is much opposed to the passing of the by-law.

Two Records Broken.

Terre Haute, Sept. 26.—Two world's records were broken yesterday, the Abbott, driven by Geers, clipped another half second from the world's trotting record of 2:03¾, already held by him, finishing a wonderful mile in 2:03¼. The quarters were made in :31¾, 1:02½, 1:31¾ and 2:03¼, the third quarter being done in 29¼ seconds.

Coney, 2:02¾, driven by E. Gayoni, of Denver, went against time to beat the amateur world's pacing record to waggon, finishing a mile in 2:03¾, which clipped half a second from Free Bond's record, made in New York.

Had Another Examination.

Prescott, Ont., Sept. 26.—On the request of friends an autopsy of the remains of the late Daniel Driscoll, found dead at Prescott, has been made by the authorities. The crown attorney at Brockville has the report but refuses to say what action the crown will take in the matter. Driscoll had some difference with certain persons over the races, Saturday, and it is reported that his death was due to injuries in a row which followed the quarrel. An inquest had decided death was due to heart disease.

Cigarette beetles are one of the latest discoveries of the bureau of entomology of the United States agricultural department. The beetles feed on all kinds of cured tobacco, but have a decided preference for ready-made cigarettes.

Miss E. McMahon, of the local trading stamp show room, has returned from Brockville, where she was in charge of the agency at that place for the past few weeks.

A reception was given at government house, Regina, in honor of lord and lady Minto.

THE BEST MILLINERY.

Doing things best has been our reputation in the past but this season the stock is ahead of anything in the past. All the enthusiasm of success is awakened by the business of these days. Shoppers tell us repeatedly that we have the best display in town. We knew it before, but we like to be told and the more we're told the more we strive to do better. We have lots of Fine Millinery, but none of the extravagant styles that nobody wants to wear, more novelties this season than last and a better stock all round. You can't help but be interested in the sight of these.
