MAKE YOUR WILL EARLY.

EVERY MAN CAN WRITE OUT HIS OWN.

Think Over the Disposal of Your Property and Write it Out While in Your Right Mind—Some Valuable Suggestions.

Every man should make a will. A matter of such importance involving the interests, as a rule, of those least qualified to meet difficulty and loss, should not be left till the last moment. The reason so many wills are broken, and so much money finds its way into the pockets of lawyers, is that people do not sit down and make a proper disposition of their affairs when in mental and bodily health with nothing to harass them. It is a simple thing, and one about which there should be neither superstitious dread nor thoughtless delay. Anyone of lawful age and sound mind can set forth in writing his wishes in regard to the disposition of his property, and when such declaration is duly dated, and signed in the presence of two disinterested witnesses, it is binding. As there is such danger of wills being misinterpreted, it is safer to have a competent responsible lawyer draw it up, although for ordinary purposes a simple form may be followed by anyone. Any man may write his own will, who can write clearly and intelligently.

It should be plainly dated, and set forth the fact that it is the last will and testament of him who makes it, and that all previous wills or testaments are revoked. It should set forth plainly the full name and occupation of the maker, who is called in law the "testator," with his address at the time of writing. It must state clearly how his debts and expenses are to be provided for, and set forth in intelligent languages the disposition of the property or effects, giving the full names and addresses of the parties to whom the bequests are made, with their relationship or occupation, to distinguish them as fully as possible. Executors should be selected who have been previously consulted, to avoid doubt. The will must be witnessed by two persons who are not legatees, and who must sign the will, not only in the presence of the testator, but of each other. The witnesses may be minors if old enough to understand what they are doing. When a change is desired in a will that is not sufficiently important to alter the whole will, it may be entered in a "codicil." The latter should state that it is part of the will, describing the latter accurately, and should be signed and witnessed the same as the original will. When additional bequests are made to a person already represented in the original will, it should be stated that the legacy is additional. When making a new will it is safer to see that the old one is destroyed. It is necessary to make a new will on marrying, this act voiding previous ones.

The executor named in the will have the right to proved and carry out its provisions even before the will is proved. In any case he must look after the property until the distribution is made. Should he be wasteful or otherwise act contrary to the interests of the heirs, he may be removed by taking action in the surrogate court, or compelled by any of the heirs who are twenty-one years of age to produce his books before the county judge. In the case of a man dying without a will the property is divided, giving one-third to the widow, and the balance equally among the children. If there are no children the widow gets $1,000 and of the personal estate of the deceased, and one-half of the remainder of the property, the balance going to his natural heirs. If the estate after paying costs of administration, etc., does not yield $1,000—the widow receives all, and if she be dead it goes to the children. Where a woman has property in her own name and dies without a will, her husband gets a third and the children two-thirds equally divided amongst them. If there be no children, the same law applies as above, the husband gets half and the balance goes to the natural heirs. All goes to the children if the husband is dead. The children of two wives or two husbands share equally. An unmarried man dying without a will the property will be divided equally amongst the father, mother and surviving brothers and sisters. If the parents are dead, the brothers and sisters get it equally amongst them. If there are neither parents, brothers nor sisters, the grandparents get all if living; if there are no grandparents then the nieces, nephews, uncles and aunts share equally. According to the Ontario statutes bequests for churches, educational institutions, etc., must be made at least six months previous to the death of the testator to be valid. Legatees who are in debt to the testator, must settle the indebtedness out of the legacy. It was formerly the law that when a debtor figured in a will that it was taken for granted that he was absolved from his debt. At the death of a person without a will his nearest of kin may apply for authority to administer the estate to the surrogate court fourteen days from the death of the owner of the estate. Any person outside the family or kindred must have the consent of all the heirs before he can apply for administration papers. An administrator must administer the estate within one year or he becomes personally liable for any loss that may occur. In the case of a wife administering her deceased husband's estate, she cannot be compelled to do so under one year. An unmarried person dying without a will his father or mother if they be living, and if not, the eldest brother or sister is entitled to administer. After the decease of a testator as soon as reasonable after burial, the will should be read in the presence of the parties interested and proved in the surrogate court.

LADIES' SWIMMING CLASS.

It Has Closed at the Y.M.C.A.—Clever Performances.

Seven weeks ago the Y.M.C.A. directors gave their consent to allowing the privileges of the gymnasium and the swimming bath to be extended to a class of girls who wished to take lessons in physical drill and swimming from C. W. Walker. The consent was not given at once, neither were all the directors in favor of it, but the majority carried the day and the ladies' gymnasium class was formed with the understanding that it was to close before the first of October. It was a very small class in the beginning, seven girls on the first night—but as soon as it became known that such a course in gymnastics was to be had for a comparatively small fee, the class increased in numbers until, at the close of the third week there were twenty-four members. Mr. Walker says that the attendance averaged seventy-five per cent on each practice night, and that the progress made by the girls was simply marvellous. On Thursday night the closing exercises were held, and the four sides of the gymnasium were lined with ladies, who had been invited to witness the performance. The class that evening numbered eighteen, and as they went through the various gymnastic exercises under the direction of Mr. Walker, one could hardly realize that this was being done in Kingston by some of our own girls. The exercises were similar to those that are taught at Wellesly, or at Smith colleges, or at any of the large gymnasiums that are open for girls in the United States. But hitherto none of our girls have been taught along the same lines. The dumb bell exercises, the club swinging, (the former, especially, bringing every muscle of the body into play), were very well done, but the surprising part of the programme was to see the ease and grace with which these girls performed on the parallel bars, horse, vaulting bar, traveling and flying rings, etc. Basket ball was played with due regard to all the scientific rules of the game, and while the girls displayed their grace and agility in catching and throwing the great ball and in carrying it in triumph from the opposing party, they thoroughly enjoyed the sport, as their bright faces and ringing laugh testified. They looked very jaunty, too, in their smart gymnasium suits of navy blue serge with short sleeves, short skirts and sailor collars. Some of the suits were trimmed with scarlet braid, others with white and others with pale blue, and the costume was becoming to every one of the girls. After the game of basket ball was finished the class and their guests went down to the swimming bath. The visitors stood on the narrow strip that surrounds the tank, and the girls put on their rubber caps. The jaunty bathing suits were not as becoming after the hair was hidden underneath the unornamented head gear. One smart little brunette scorned the oilskin cap, and jumped into the bath in the same guise as she had appeared on the gymnasium floor. The oftener she wet her hair the prettier her curls looked, but she risked a cold in her head even if she was considered the belle of the tank. The majority of the girls could swim without the aid of a life preserver; some, however, were afraid to trust themselves and so their braver comrades supported them by the chin for the first two or three strokes. The class has been highly appreciated and the girls are unanimous in their praises of Mr. Walker's kindness in putting them through such a thorough course of lessons in physical training. As a slight recognition of his services they presented him with ten volumes that will be of great service to him in his ministerial studies, which he intends to continue at Victoria college, Toronto, this winter. After the presentation had been made the girls sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," that interesting part of the programme taking place at the close of the calisthenic exercises. Then each girl brought her dumb bells and laid them on the floor at Mr. Walker's feet, and for the moment that popular instructor must have felt a veritable "Bunthorne" with eighteen maidens bringing gifts to him.

Now that such a class has been in existence for even seven weeks, the girls realize what benefits they would derive from one if it could be continued during the winter, and to discuss the subject there is to be a meeting next Thursday night at 220 Queen street.

The new class will lack several advantages of the old. In the first place it is certain that it cannot be held in the Y.M.C.A. The permission was only granted until October. In Quebec the ladies' classes are considered a part of the regular Y.M.C.A. work, and special time has been set aside for them. Kingston does not view it in the same light, so the girls must look for some other hall in which to continue their physical training. The apparatus will not be forthcoming for some time, but it is hoped that the public interest may be aroused so that a well-equipped gymnasium may in time belong to our Y.W.C.A. However, that time is not yet. In the meanwhile, if a hall can be secured, a temporary apparatus may be arranged so that the classes may continue. Another drawback is that Mr. Walker is leaving town, and the services of a new instructor will be necessary. All those questions will be discussed at Thursday night's meeting, to which an invitation is extended to all ladies who may be interested enough to wish to attend.

LOVED ITS MASTER.

W. P. Peter's Cat Dies When Its Master Failed to Come.

One frequently hears of the warm friendship a dog bears his master, but it is seldom this feeling is found in another animal. There are exceptions to every rule and here is one. W. P. Peters, flour merchant, Brock street, was taken ill of typhoid fever shortly before the fair opened. Since that time he has never visited the store, and still lies in a dangerous condition. "Billy" has a big, pet cat, which every one knows by the name of "Tom." The animal was a good hunter, and no rats or mice ever gnawed the flour bags when "Tom" was around. He was a big, heavy fellow, nine or ten years old. When stroking his fur one had to be very gentle, or your hand would be bleeding before you knew it. The cat was a great boxer and very fond of its master. It got to know the one milkman which brought it milk each morning and as soon as his rig came into sight "Tom" would go and meet it. But all this is past now, and the rats can scamper about the shop at night without fear of molestation, for "Tom" sleeps his long, last sleep.

He missed his master, and often would go to the door and look up and down the street, as if grieved that he did not appear. As the days went by he refused to eat, and "moped around" the store as if he were ill. Weeks passed and his master did not come back. "Tom" would not hunt any more—in fact would only lay on the bags and watch the door. Yesterday he died, and the employees gave him a decent burial.

TAUGHT CHINESE EMPEROR.

Danish Shopkeeper Revealed Western Civilization.

Ainslee's.

When Kwang Hsu was a child there were two foreign stores in Pekin that had been established without permission from the Chinese government. As they were on Legation street, they seem to have been too unimportant to attract official attention. Yet these same stores were destined to have a mighty influence on the future of China. One of them was kept by an illiterate Dane, who sold foreign tops, notions and dry goods such as might please the Chinese or be of use to the scanty European population of the capital. By chance, some eunuchs from the imperial palace bought toys in this shop for his infant majesty.

As the baby emperor grew, the business of the Dane shop-keeper increased. His stock became larger and more varied. And the emperor remained a profitable customer. Musical cats, dogs, and sheep, horns, guns, trains of cars, striking clocks and Swiss watches, all were bought in turn by eunuchs from the palace. As the emperor grew to boyhood, the Danish shopkeeper supplied toys suitable to his years from his inexhaustible shelves. To understand how searching an influence these products of far-distant lands must have had on the growing mind of the emperor, you must know that he was shut from the world, shut out from even his own people, by three strong walls. He never left the Forbidden City except in a closed chair or in a closed cart. Every side street was barred from him by hanging canvas of mats. He was a prisoner and slave in the palace of his birthright.

An electric railroad was built for him in the palace grounds, on which he rode as our children ride on merry-go-rounds. For him an electric plant was built in the Forbidden City, and the palace was lighted with incandescent lamps. He experimented with miniature telegraph and telephone instruments. Officials that sought imperial favor scoured the port cities to find new toys for his majesty. They got for him gramophones, music boxes, aeolians and magnificent clocks that struck the hours with music or with the song of birds. All the resources of modern invention in the west were tapped to procure toys for the emperor Kwang Hsu. Once the assiduous Danish shop-keeper had a sleigh made for him in Europe. The sleigh was a marvel of ingenuity with its foot-warmers, mirrors, clocks, cushions of yellow silk and figureheads in the shape of golden dragons. As the boy grew older his tastes changed. There were clear indications of mental growth as the years advanced. He began to wish to know the literature of the countries that produced the fairy toys and wonderful devices of his boyhood pleasures. He had two teachers appointed to instruct him in English.

J. E. Bowman, well-known lumberman and saw mill owner of Canton Bowman, Ottawa county, was for two years a great sufferer with itching piles.

In spite of various remedies used the the itching and burning was not relieved, but seemed at times to be worse than ever before. Recommended to try Dr. Chase's Ointment, he procured a box and now gratefully tells of a complete cure.

Mr. Bowman writes as follows: "It is with greatest pleasure that I recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment for piles. Two boxes completely cured me of that distressing disease from which I had suffered for two years."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is the standard remedy for piles the world over. It is the only remedy that is guaranteed to cure. Among those who endorse it are scores and hundreds of prominent business and professional men. One box will cure any ordinary case and two will cure the most severe form of piles.

Another well-known man who has been cured of piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment, is Joseph Kidd, of Enterprise, Ont., who writes as follows: "I am now sixty-four years of age, and for 25 years I was troubled with itching piles. At night it was sometimes almost impossible to endure the terrible itching. I had every preparation I could hear of and without obtaining relief."

"Finally, I was told of Dr. Chase's Ointment and found in it a positive cure. I am willing to answer all enquiries as it has completely cured me."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is the only preparation that has never been known to fail to cure piles. It is the only preparation that is guaranteed to cure piles of every form. 60 cents a box, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.
